

Nazeli Vardanyan is the Director of “Armenian Forests”, an NGO whose main activities are forestation, reforestation and forest protection in Armenia. She supervises projects on 740 hectares (1829 acres) of reforestation in Armenia, and she has also been coordinator of a working group on drafting of a forest code (forest policy) and national forest plan for Armenia. She is also president of “GOY”, an environmental/legal NGO whose main activities are environmental education, environmental rights protection, lobbying, public participation in decision-making and access to justice on environmental issues. She is a licensed attorney in the Republic of Armenia. She is a member of both the Chamber of Advocates of the Republic of Armenia and of the International Bar Association. As an international expert on environmental law, Ms. Vardanyan has testified at numerous international conferences and participated in drafting several international environmental conventions, e.g. the Convention on the Rights of the Child, the Aarhus Convention, and other agreements. She is a lecturer at the Russian-Armenian University in the capital, Yerevan, and coordinator of the Human Rights and Sustainable Development Working Group of the Northern Alliance for Sustainable Development (ANPED).