

"I've always been aware of an echoing in my heart to do God's will."

After finishing his bachelor's degree in health organizational management at Texas Tech, David Lee Hulsey started graduate school. But he knew he was supposed to be somewhere else.

Austin Presbyterian Theological Seminary.

"Several pastors raved about it," the native of Tulia, Texas explains. "And I was aware of the seminary's reputation for educating pastors for a changing world.

"But the main reason I came to Austin Seminary is that I felt a strong pull here – something I credit to God wanting me to be in this place at this time."

David grew up in First Presbyterian Church,

Tulia, participating in just about every activity his home church offered. Since high school, he's filled the pulpit a few times. And while attending Tech, he served as a church youth director in Olton, Texas.

"I came to seminary with no real knowledge of church history or doctrine. Every course prepares me to educate and help others grow in faith.

"So do the people. Students, faculty and staff create a haven for spiritual growth, grounded in a Christ-like love we have for each other."

Once he completes his Master of Divinity degree, David says he could see himself serving as a parish pastor, air force chaplain or hospital administrator.

"My call is simply to live life with all of God's children and do what I can to help each one develop a more intimate relationship with God."

...for generations to come...
seminaries and churches together

"I've always been aware of an echoing in my heart to do God's will."

After finishing his bachelor's degree in health organizational management at Texas Tech, David Lee Hulsey started graduate school. But he knew he was supposed to be somewhere else.

Austin Presbyterian Theological Seminary.

"Several pastors raved about it," the native of Tulia, Texas explains. "And I was aware of the seminary's reputation for educating pastors for a changing world.

"But the main reason I came to Austin Seminary is that I felt a strong pull here – something I credit to God wanting me to be in this place at this time."

David grew up in First Presbyterian Church,

Tulia, participating in just about every activity his home church offered. Since high school, he's filled the pulpit a few times. And while attending Tech, he served as a church youth director in Olton, Texas.

"I came to seminary with no real knowledge of church history or doctrine. Every course prepares me to educate and help others grow in faith.

"So do the people. Students, faculty and staff create a haven for spiritual growth, grounded in a Christ-like love we have for each other."

Once he completes his Master of Divinity degree, David says he could see himself serving as a parish pastor, air force chaplain or hospital administrator.

"My call is simply to live life with all of God's children and do what I can to help each one develop a more intimate relationship with God."

...for generations to come...
seminaries and churches together

3,800 + students...!

... attend our 10 Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) seminaries. Our denomination is also affiliated with two schools through covenant agreement.

Each student story is distinct, because our students are diverse. They come from varying socio-economic backgrounds, and from urban, rural small town and suburban settings. Our students are black and white, Asian and Hispanic, Native American and from international locations. Some are young, others middle aged.

Many are studying to earn the Master of Divinity degree, so they can be ordained and serve as a pastor in the parish. Some are doctoral students, while others are seeking master's degrees or certificates to serve the church as youth leaders, educators, missionaries, attorneys, chaplains, therapists, spiritual directors, musicians and other kinds of ministers.

Two things are common to the students attending our seminaries. They have a strong faith and wish to be of service to the people of God. They also want an excellent education.

That's why they attend our seminaries – to receive the educational foundation they need to serve the church of Jesus Christ with wisdom, intelligence and love.

Austin Presbyterian Theological Seminary

Austin, Texas

Columbia Theological Seminary

Decatur, Georgia

University of Dubuque Theological Seminary

Dubuque, Iowa

Louisville Presbyterian Theological Seminary

Louisville, Kentucky

McCormick Theological Seminary

Chicago, Illinois

Pittsburgh Theological Seminary

Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania

Princeton Theological Seminary

Princeton, New Jersey

San Francisco Theological Seminary

San Anselmo and
Pasadena, California

Johnson C. Smith Theological Seminary

Atlanta, Georgia

Union Theological Seminary & Presbyterian School of Christian Education

Richmond, Virginia and
Charlotte, North Carolina

*In covenant with the
Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.)*

Auburn Theological Seminary

New York, New York

Evangelical Seminary of Puerto Rico

San Juan, Puerto Rico

www.pcusa.org/seminaries/

3,800 + students...!

... attend our 10 Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) seminaries. Our denomination is also affiliated with two schools through covenant agreement.

Each student story is distinct, because our students are diverse. They come from varying socio-economic backgrounds, and from urban, rural small town and suburban settings. Our students are black and white, Asian and Hispanic, Native American and from international locations. Some are young, others middle aged.

Many are studying to earn the Master of Divinity degree, so they can be ordained and serve as a pastor in the parish. Some are doctoral students, while others are seeking master's degrees or certificates to serve the church as youth leaders, educators, missionaries, attorneys, chaplains, therapists, spiritual directors, musicians and other kinds of ministers.

Two things are common to the students attending our seminaries. They have a strong faith and wish to be of service to the people of God. They also want an excellent education.

That's why they attend our seminaries – to receive the educational foundation they need to serve the church of Jesus Christ with wisdom, intelligence and love.

Austin Presbyterian Theological Seminary

Austin, Texas

Columbia Theological Seminary

Decatur, Georgia

University of Dubuque Theological Seminary

Dubuque, Iowa

Louisville Presbyterian Theological Seminary

Louisville, Kentucky

McCormick Theological Seminary

Chicago, Illinois

Pittsburgh Theological Seminary

Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania

Princeton Theological Seminary

Princeton, New Jersey

San Francisco Theological Seminary

San Anselmo and
Pasadena, California

Johnson C. Smith Theological Seminary

Atlanta, Georgia

Union Theological Seminary & Presbyterian School of Christian Education

Richmond, Virginia and
Charlotte, North Carolina

*In covenant with the
Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.)*

Auburn Theological Seminary

New York, New York

Evangelical Seminary of Puerto Rico

San Juan, Puerto Rico

www.pcusa.org/seminaries/