Walking Humbly in Zimbabwe

PC(USA) partners in ministry do justice, show mercy, and walk every day—or sometimes ride in ox carts.

Do Justice: What does this mean to a young girl trying to choose between fetching today's water and standing in line to buy bread? Or to a voter who believes the last elections were stolen? Or to parents who struggle to pay school fees for their children while the once-robust economy collapses? Where is justice when thousands lack food, yet big commercial farms lie fallow? Pastors here sometimes speak of God's justice as if only divine anger could explain what's going on.

Show mercy: How does the church of Jesus Christ in Zimbabwe demonstrate the goodness of good news?

Walk humbly: Part of the answer may be found in this story by the Rev. P. Chirongo of Chinhoyi:

Show mercy: How does the church of Jesus Christ in Zimbabwe demonstrate the goodness of good news?

Walk humbly: Part of the answer may be found in this story by the Rev. P. Chirongo of Chinhoyi:

"In April I was going to a Holy Communion service at one of my eight prayer houses [rural outstations]. I waited several hours to catch a lift, to no avail. Finally came a 'Scotch cart': a wagon pulled by oxen. So a trip that should have required fifteen minutes took me two hours.

"I thanked God and offered the service. The participants were delighted—though some had mixed feelings, since they also were sympathizing with me. What encouraged me most was this inner voice saying, 'Fear not; I am with you.' The message today is the same."

Fear not... Yet in Zimbabwe many fear the government and its brutal security forces. Others fear shortages, witchcraft, or HIV/AIDS. Some fear even to travel, despite the beauty of this land.

We pray for deliverance. But we thank God also that our partners have not forgotten justice. They continue to show mercy, and they walk every day—or sometimes ride in ox carts—while the rest of us want to run.
