This is not to diminish the depth or seriousness of our concerns. As you may know, last summer’s General Assembly (our church’s highest governing body) committed to continued dialogue with Caterpillar (rather than the divestment that some regional bodies within the church were calling for), but also denounced the company’s “continued profit-making from non-peaceful uses of a number of its products.” The Assembly called upon the company “to carefully review its involvement in obstacles to a just and lasting peace in Israel-Palestine, and to take affirmative steps to end its complicity in the violation of human rights.” The Assembly’s statement also lifted up Caterpillar’s many examples of positive leadership in the community, state and nation, noting its donation of resources and equipment and its deserved recognition in the Dow Jones Sustainability World Index. The statement continued, “But these positive acts do not excuse the severity of the particular injustice that is being done to the Palestinian people through the use, in part, of certain Caterpillar products and from which Caterpillar profits directly or indirectly.”

This contrast between, on the one hand, Caterpillar’s stated commitments and historic record, and on the other, its present involvement in the region, is what we hope to discuss. And we hope to do so in a positive and productive way. Can we speak soon? Please feel free to contact me by telephone at 816-741-1641 or by email (PTSBrian@aol.com). I will make myself available (along with other staff and elected representatives from the PCUSA) to travel to Peoria, to Chicago (as in the past) or some other location as needed.

I’m grateful for the opportunity to be in dialogue, and I look forward to moving forward in this conversation.

Blessings,

The Deliverance of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) Investment and Loan Program, Inc., assigns to the General Assembly Mission Council the responsibility for elections to the Board of Directors of the PC(USA) Investment and Loan Program, Inc.

[The assembly approved Item 16-02 with amendment. See pp. 48–49.]

The General Assembly Mission Council recommends that the 220th General Assembly (2012), in gratitude and response to God for the movement of the Holy Spirit in this time and place, do the following:

1. Declare a churchwide commitment to ignite a movement that results in the creation of 1,001 new worshiping communities in the next ten years.

2. Encourage [each] [the] General Assembly [agency] [Mission Council and other General Assembly agencies] to join in fulfilling this movement.

3. Encourage each session and mid council to

   a. pray for the fulfillment of God’s purpose within this movement and
b. discern and pursue ways to participate in this movement.

[4. Develop workable strategies and collaborate with congregations and mid councils on growing new congregations and communities of faith in the PC(USA).

[5. Require the General Assembly Mission Council to bring recommendations regarding this movement to the 221st General Assembly (2014) and to report to the 221st General Assembly (2014) as to its progress.]

Rationale

1,001 New Worshipping Communities

This movement will help our denomination make the shift from an inward focused, membership-maintenance model of church to a more outward, creative, and disciple-making model of church. The question must change from “How do we do church better?” to “How can we be church in a new way?” In order to reconnect with our missional DNA already present in our churches, we must make the “Proclamation of the gospel for the salvation of humankind” a priority for each member of our congregations. This proclamation in word and deed must start with disciples who have a vibrant faith that go out to share their faith with friends, neighbors, and our communities. In order for us to live into this missional ecclesiology, we must have the vision of our current churches planting new worshipping communities. As our mid councils and churches work toward this vision of 1,001 new worshipping communities, the main thrust must come from the local church.

Our denomination has often focused upon the negative aspects that tear us apart rather than creating a vision that unites us in Christ. A vision of 1,001 inspires us to recapture a ministry methodology that once was part of the church planting fabric of the Presbyterian church. We need a vision beyond ourselves that deeply resonates with what God is already doing in the larger church by creating communities of faith that are outside of our standard models of church planting. This goal is not about institutional survival but brings us back to the core of what the church is called to be and do.

Why should we do this? First, this movement will improve the health of our congregations recover their missional DNA. Second, this will allow our church to be more responsive to Christ’s call to make disciples. Third, we will see an improvement of our communities because we are taking the hands and feet of Jesus into our communities. Fourth, we will see lives transformed by the grace of God. Last, we will become a vibrant denomination again.

[The assembly approved Item 16-03. See pp. 48, 49.]

The General Assembly Mission Council, on behalf of the African American Church Growth Strategy Task Force, recommends that the 220th General Assembly (2012) do the following:

1. Direct the General Assembly Mission Council (GAMC) to hold a national consultation of representatives from the GAMC, African American leaders with experience in evangelism and church growth, the National Black Presbyterian Caucus (NBPC), and mid councils to be held in 2013, in order to develop strategies and collaborate on growing new and existing African American congregations and communities of faith in the PC(USA).

2. Direct the GAMC, specifically Racial Ethnic & Women’s Ministries/PW and the Evangelism and Church Growth ministry areas, to train and deploy five regional coaches to collaborate with mid councils and congregations to implement the African American Church Growth Strategy.

Rationale:

The African American Church Growth Strategy is a strategy of the whole church. Thus all participants (GAMC, African American leaders serving congregations, National Black Presbyterian Caucus [NBPC], and mid councils) must commit to work together in growing African American congregations and communities of faith.

Local African American leaders who have demonstrated skill and passion for growing churches should be recruited to work closely with African American congregations, mid councils, and Racial Ethnic & Women’s Ministries/PW and the Evangelism and Church Growth ministry areas in the General Assembly Mission Council (GAMC), in order to collaborate on approaches for evangelism and church growth.
African Americans have been strong witnesses in the Presbyterian church for more than 200 years. This is testimony to their faith, commitment, and strength in spite of seemingly insurmountable odds. African Americans have given voice and shape to the denominational structure of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). As African American Presbyterians strive to build upon a legacy in this present age, the African American Church Growth Strategy Task Force encourages the PC(USA) to serve as an active participant and to engage fully in the African American Church Growth Strategy, as we continue to celebrate the faith journeys of African Americans in the PC(USA).

A. Background

The 207th General Assembly (1995) asked the Hispanic/Latino-a and Native American Congregational Support Offices (formally Hispanic and Native American Congregational Enhancement Offices) to develop strategies to help the church grow in these areas. The 208th General Assembly (1996) called for the PC(USA) to increase its racial ethnic membership to 10 percent by the year 2005, and to 20 percent by the year 2010. The 210th General Assembly (1998) approved the “Racial Ethnic Immigrant Evangelism Church Growth Strategy.” The 216th General Assembly (2004) approved a recommendation directing Racial Ethnic Ministries to assist the NBPC to develop a strategy for church growth for African American congregations. Later, the 218th General Assembly (2008) approved the Strategy for Church Growth for African American Congregations and directed Racial Ethnic & Women’s Ministries/PW to appoint a task force to monitor the progress of African American church growth. Racial Ethnic & Women’s Ministries/PW appointed the African American Church Growth Strategy Task Force, and NBPC, in consultation with the African American Congregational Support Office, appointed an African American Church Growth Strategy Implementation Team.

In 2008 and 2009, NBPC held its biannual meetings in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, and at Stillman College in Tuscaloosa, Alabama, respectively. The focus of the biannual meetings was the African American Church Growth Strategy. Workshops and conversations were focused in five areas: (1) New Church Development/Church Transformation, (2) Leadership Development, (3) Youth and Young Adults, (4) Clergywomen, and (5) Evangelism.

B. Observations

Implementation of the African American Church Growth Strategy has the possibility of producing positive results in contributing to the overall Racial Ethnic Immigrant Evangelism Church Growth Strategy. Such an understanding requires pioneering and visionary leadership, nurturing congregations, and supportive and consistent staff support from mid councils and the General Assembly. Presbyteries and sessions, who understand that healthy churches grow spiritually, programmatically, and numerically are the best allies in accomplishing the African American Church Growth Strategy.

The African American Church Growth Strategy Task Force reviewed and evaluated the African American Church Growth Strategy. This review included comments and conversations with the African American Church Growth Strategy Implementation Team, presbytery executives, African American staff persons serving the PC(USA), and NBPC members. We also reviewed statistical information from the Office of Research Services in the GAMC, and we offer the following observations:

1. The action of the 210th General Assembly’ (1998), setting for itself goals for racial ethnic membership growth, was visionary, however, it needed more mid council support and funding in order to create and implement the Racial Ethnic and Immigrant Evangelism Church Growth Strategy.

3. The African American Church Growth Strategy needed a clear structure of accountability.

4. The African American Church Growth Strategy was not clear on ways congregations and presbyteries could implement the strategy.

5. The African American Church Growth Strategy was not designed for the participation of the whole denomination.

6. The African American Church Growth Strategy needed more support from NBPC.

7. A more clearly defined vision statement would have contributed to a clearer plan.

African Americans are the largest racial ethnic group in the PC(USA) with 468 worshipping communities (463 congregations, 3 new church developments, and 2 Bible study fellowships) (Source: Racial Ethnic & Women’s Ministries/PW Statistics). African Americans have been members of the Presbyterian church for hundreds of years. The Reverend John Glouchester formed the first African American congregation in 1807 in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania.
Of the 10,560 congregations in the PC(USA), 463 are predominantly African American churches. Or in other words, approximately 4.5 percent of congregations in the PC(USA) are African American congregations. (According to Research Services, congregations reporting. Research Services considers an African American congregation to be one with African American membership of 80 percent or more. Note: These numbers do not include African American members of predominantly European American congregations, multicultural communities of faith, or African American new church developments or Bible study fellowships). Of the 463 African American congregations in the PC(USA), 49 percent (or 218 African American congregations) currently have vacancies in the solo pastor or head of staff position.

As of December 31, 2010, the total membership of the PC(USA) was 2,016,091. There were 70,256 African American members (Source: Research Services, congregations reporting). In other words, 3.5 percent of Presbyterian members are African American members.

What we know is this: the African American Church Growth Strategy is needed. It has not had the necessary time for implementation. Additionally, there are strong, vibrant, and growing African American congregations that can be studied and modeled for African American church growth.

C. Biblical and Theological Foundation

In the Racial Ethnic Church Growth report presented to the 210th General Assembly (1998), the section entitled, “A Theological and Biblical Foundation,” reads, Through Jesus Christ, God offers salvation to every race and tongue, to every person and every nation (Rev. 5:6, Acts 17:26, Eph. 2: 14-15, Gal. 3:28). God has created diversity and celebrates it (1 Cor. 12:11). The capstone of universality is the fact that God identified so much with the world that God gave God’s only child that the world would not perish but be saved (John 3:16).

God works within the language and culture of those to whom salvation is offered. God uses one tribal, cultural, racial, or ancestral identity as legitimate gifts, means of revealing love and justice to the world. It is not necessary to surrender one’s cultural identity in order to be a Christian. All Christians, regardless of color, class, size, or gender are chosen people. They are saved, transformed into communities of praise, and sent forth to share the good news of God’s love with people of all nations. ....

The PC(USA) must increase its efforts to be a denomination that respects, values, celebrates, and empowers cultural diversity in mission, ministry, and governance; a denomination where differences are not seen as inequalities or evidences of inferiority; a denomination that is a covenant of kinship where all profess Christ as Lord and Savior; a denomination that sees evangelism as a reflection of personal and corporate faith, as well as a sacred witness for justice and peace; a denomination in which every one can exercise her or his gifts as moved by the Holy Spirit in faith, hope, and love’ (Racial Ethnic Immigrant Evangelism Church Growth Strategy Report, 2006, pp.3-4; see also Minutes, 1998, Part I, p. 407).

God uses African American communities of faith with racially and culturally distinct ministries to help in reaching unchurched people. Evangelism and church growth to African American people is inherent in the mission of the PC(USA), thus the church continues to be challenged to live up to its vision of becoming God’s beloved community.

The African American Church has played a major role in the life and mission of Jesus Christ through the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). Called into being in the throes of American slavery, “The emergence of Black Presbyterian congregations was one prong of a battery of reactions to the prevailing social, economic, political and religious climate affecting the status and future prospects of blacks in the United States of America in the 19th and 20th centuries” (Periscope: Black Presbyterianism—Yesterday, Today, and Tomorrow: 175 Years of Ministry 1807–1982, 1982, p. 2).

Historically, African American Presbyterian churches served as a sanctuary for those who were oppressed, provided opportunities and upward mobility for those who were consigned to the margins of life, and produced key leaders in movements for social change in America and abroad, including being instrumental in the abolition of slavery and the struggle for civil rights.

Led by the Confession of 1967, “The church is called to bring all people to receive and uphold one another as persons in all relationships of life: in employment, housing, education, leisure, marriage, family, church, and the exercise of political rights. Therefore, the church labors for the abolition of all racial discrimination and ministers to those injured by it” (The Book of Confessions, The Confession of 1967 Inclusive Language Version, 2002, 9.44a).

This noble cause is one that has not been easy to accomplish, and the journey to wholeness is incomplete. Systemically, African-Americans struggle disproportionately with health care, education, unemployment, housing, and incarceration. It is in this context, historically, that African American congregations have risen to the challenge to serve Christ in our society and throughout the world. As we continue to strive towards breaking down racial barriers that separate us and keep us from becoming God’s beloved community, the call of African American Presbyterian congregations remains relevant.

D. Future Directions for African American Presbyterian Congregations and Communities of Faith

The foundation has been laid by African American Presbyterian congregations and communities of faith, their faithful witness to God has made an indelible impression upon the landscape of the PC(USA), locally, nationally, and globally.

Called into being in the wilderness of oppression, African American congregations and communities of faith responded to the voice of God to be sanctuary for those who hunger and thirst for righteousness and justice. African American communities have faithfully stood in the crucible of racial tension, advocating for reconciliation and equality within the household of God.
This is the legacy of African American Presbyterian congregations and communities of faith.

This report of the African American Church Growth Strategy Task Force is presented to the 220th General Assembly (2012) with the hope that implementation of the African American Church Growth Strategy will result in a new framework for discerning the will of God and building toward the next stage of missional journey in serving Christ in the world. Working collaboratively with the Office of African American Congregational Support in Racial Ethnic & Women’s Ministries/PW, the Evangelism and Church Growth ministry areas, mid councils, and NBPC, we strive to realize the vision of

- 6 percent new African American disciples by the year 2020;
- an increase in African American women serving as heads of staff and teaching elders in healthy congregations;
- spiritual growth among African American youth and young adults;
- African American congregations and communities of faith effectively engaged in the communities in which they are located;
- increased Bible study and prayer ministries in African American communities of faith that lead people to discern their sense of call to ministry in the church and in communities beyond the church walls.

The implementation of the recommendations in the African American Church Growth Strategy Task Force Report will provide African American communities of faith, those that are chartered congregations and those that are emerging new ministries, to grow African American congregations and strive to build upon a legacy. Working together with all in the church to fully implement the African American Church Growth Strategy will signal the beginning of an era in the PC(USA) where the good news of God’s love is shared with people of all backgrounds and where we will begin living the vision of God’s beloved community.

ACREC ADVICE AND COUNSEL ON ITEM 16-03

Advice and Counsel on Item 16-03—From the Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns (ACREC).

ACREC advises that the Item 16-03 be answered by the advice and counsel of ACREC to Item 05-12 (Mid Council Commission Report of the General Assembly), which was to approve an alternate resolution to read as follows:

2. Empower the appointed commission to develop strategies to address the questions raised in the reports noted above, and to be granted adequate budget for this work.

3. Direct the commission, in consultation with representative groups, to develop strategies toward the path forward for the PC(USA)

   a. for the development and support of ministries and structures that support and grow established and emerging racial ethnic congregations;

   b. for the development and support of ministries and structures that support and grow multicultural congregations;

   c. for the development and support of ministries and structures that support new immigrant congregations;

   d. for the growth of understanding of the issues race, culture, and ethnicity raise within the Christian community, including development of churchwide strategies to raise consciousness of white privilege.

5. Give representation on the commission to the following groups:

   a. racial ethnic caucuses

   b. new immigrant congregations and ministries

   c. racial ethnic congregations

   d. multicultural congregations

   e. Women of Color Joint Working Group
“f. mid council staff
“g. ACREC
“h. GACOR;

“and that all decisions would be made by consensus in order to ensure voice for all commission members.

“6. Direct the commission to consult with other groups as needed, both within and outside the PC(USA), to develop workable and sustainable strategies.

“7. Bring recommendations to the 221st General Assembly (2014).”

Rationale

The Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns hears echoes of voices from across the church in the report’s Recommendation 8, which calls for the formation of a National Racial Ethnic Ministry Task Force. Specifically in reports to this General Assembly, calls have been made for

- a national consultation to develop strategies and collaborate on growing new and existing African American congregations and communities of faith in the PC(USA) (Item 16-03, African American Church Growth Strategy Report, Recommendation 1);
- the development of a national strategy for Hispanic/Latino Church Growth, and infrastructure built to support this new strategy (Item 10-17, Hispanic/Latino/a Leadership Conversation Group Report, Recommendation e.);
- a national consultation to develop strategies and policies to support racial ethnic, multicultural, and new immigrant church growth in the PC(USA) (Special Task Force to Study Racial Ethnic and New Immigrant Church Growth, Recommendations 1–6);
- recommendations to develop effective strategies for the development of racial ethnic and new immigrant worshipping communities; train seminary students in emerging cultural realities, and develop strategies within our seminaries to work toward curricular and faculty reform and change, that we might train racial ethnic and new immigrant leaders more effectively; develop multilingual resources and translation capacities to better witness within our increasingly diverse society; explore disparities in compensation between those of more and less represented groups in our church; develop resources to support the growth of new immigrant ministries and congregations, and increase the understanding among Presbyterians of white privilege that we might repent and be renewed and empowered for more faithful service (Item 16-07, Report of the Special Committee on the Nature of the Church in the 21st Century, Recommendations1.c., 3.a., d., e., 4., 5., 6.b., c., f., and 8, respectively).

These, in addition to the recommendation from the Mid Council Commission to develop a National Racial Ethnic Ministry Task Force, make it clear that while Presbyterians have been thinking about racial ethnic and new immigrant ministries for over a century—and while many faithful ministries have been launched in many contexts that have borne much fruit—we know and are voicing in many arenas our awareness that there is still much work to do. Race, culture, and language still divide us, marring the image of Christ we share with a world in need and blunting our witness to the good news. The current excitement about developing “1001 New Worshipping Communities” will not be realized without the engagement and investment of racial ethnic Presbyterians. To date, the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) has not addressed issues of race and culture sufficiently to ensure either that the needed engagement would happen, or that the voices of racial ethnic Presbyterians would be heard in the conversation.

Therefore, to faithfully steward the resources entrusted to us by taking a proactive approach to a number of overlapping initiatives and recommendations, the Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns (ACREC) advises the 220th General Assembly (2012) to answer all the recommendations noted above with the approval of this recommendation.

GACOR COMMENT ON ITEM 16-03

Comment on Item 16-03—From the General Assembly Committee on Representation.

The General Assembly Committee on Representation (GACOR) respectfully advises that Item 16-03 be approved by the 220th General Assembly (2012) and offers this comment:

When mid council participation is a goal, committees on representation may be helpful partners. Especially when concerned about the adequate support and nurture of constituencies traditionally underrepresented in leadership and decision-making, committees on representation or entities that fulfill these functions have a role in the council. The GACOR is willing to assist the leaders of this task force in connecting to relevant mid council leaders for their purposes, and targeting digital training resources for leaders involved in the conversation.

The General Assembly Committee on Representation is made up of sixteen persons, elected by the General Assembly, who are drawn from ruling and teaching elders from across the church. Its mandate and functions are described in G-3.0103 of the Book of Order (Form of Government).

[The assembly approved Item 16-04. See pp. 48, 49.]

The Board of Directors of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) Investment and Loan Program, Inc., recommends that the 220th General Assembly (2012) confirm the election of James L. Hudson to the office of president of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) Investment and Loan Program, Inc., for a four-year term.

Rationale

The 1995 Deliverance of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) Investment and Loan Program, Inc. (PILP), as well as its by-laws, provide that its board of directors elect the president to a four-year term subject to concurrence by the General Assembly Mission Council (GAMC) and confirmation by the General Assembly. Because the 1995 Deliverance provides that PILP reports to the General Assembly through the GAMC, this request for confirmation by the General Assembly is being forwarded through the GAMC.

On July 31, 2003; the board of directors elected James L. Hudson to a four-year term as president of the corporation, effective September 2, 2003. The 216th General Assembly (2004) confirmed his election.

The PILP board of directors elected James L. Hudson to a second term as president on October 27, 2007. This election was confirmed by the 218th General Assembly (2008). During 2011, the personnel/nominating committee of the board of directors undertook an extensive end-of-term review working with the Research Services Office of the General Assembly Mission Council. Upon review of the president’s performance and comments from staff, officers, and directors, as well as colleagues from other General Assembly agencies, middle governing bodies, and churches, the personnel/nominating committee recommended that the president should be reelected to a new four-year term. The PILP board of directors elected James L. Hudson to a third term as president on October 22, 2011.

James L. Hudson is a resident of Prospect, Kentucky, and worships as part of the congregation at Crescent Hill Presbyterian Church. He was ordained by the Presbytery of Chicago and has served congregations in River Forest, Illinois, and Springfield, Missouri. He served on the staff and as co-executive of the Synod of Lincoln Trails for twenty-two years.

Hudson earned a bachelor of arts degree from Grove City College in Pennsylvania, a masters of divinity degree from Princeton Theological Seminary, and a masters of business administration degree from Indiana University.

During his tenure as president and chief executive officer, Hudson has worked with the board of directors to grow the program to meet the financing needs of Presbyterian congregations and entities expanding and improving their facilities, while meeting all of the guidelines of the North American Securities Administrators Association.

[The assembly approved Item 16-05. See pp. 48, 49.]

General Assembly Committee on Review of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) Investment and Loan Program, Inc.

The General Assembly Committee on Review of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) Investment and Loan Program, Inc., recommends that the 220th General Assembly (2012) direct the Presbyterian Investment and Loan Program, Inc., continue their growth and ministry by undertaking to

1. Continue their work of bringing racial and ethnic diversity to the staff and board.

2. Explore new lending patterns that take into account the development of new immigrant churches and new models of worshipping communities.

3. Develop a succession plan for retiring senior leadership.

4. Continue to review and simplify the application process and continue to encourage presbyteries to participate in the process as early as possible.
5. Review future resource requirements (staffing and systems) to meet changing program needs.

6. Continue to work on church-wide awareness utilizing social networking and other new technologies.

7. Continue to focus on the special needs of small churches.

8. Continue to offer consulting services and further develop and market consulting role to advise and guide churches and presbyteries on financial aspects of growth.

These recommendations are discussed in more detail later in this report, as they refer to church relatedness, policies and program effectiveness and collaboration.

Rationale

The General Assembly Committee on Review of the Presbyterian Investment and Loan Program, Inc. (hereafter referred to as review committee), in accordance with the Manual of the General Assembly: Organization for Mission, which specifies the process for review and the composition of the Review Committee in Chapter IV.D.1, examined PILP’s Agency Review-Self-Study, conducted on-site visits, interviewed PILP Board of Directors and senior staff, as well as exempt and nonexempt employees, and surveyed affected users and investors.

The review committee applauds the achievements of PILP in meeting the standards for review. However, in light of challenges and opportunities within today’s environment and in the spirit of encouragement, the review committee offers the above recommendations for the agency to become even more successful.

A. Introduction

The review committee is pleased to present to the 220th General Assembly (2012) a written review of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) Investment and Loan Program, Inc. (PILP). The purpose of the review process is “to evaluate the relationship of their individual [agency] ministry with the mission of the whole Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.)” (Minutes, 2001, Part I, p. 67, addition of Standing Rule E.10. Agency Review). The instructions to the review committee were that the committee must conduct the process according to predetermined standards and present a written report to the next General Assembly (Manual of the General Assembly, pp. 71–72).

B. Review Committee

In accordance to Standing Rule E.10., the following persons were elected by commissioners of the 219th General Assembly (2010) to serve as the review committee:

Ruling Elder Clemente Anzaldua ( Corpus Christi, Texas); Ruling Elder Barbara Campbell Davis, moderator (Rocky Mount, North Carolina); Teaching Elder Gregory Gibson (Dayton, Ohio); Ruling Elder Judy Lussie (Dublin, California); Teaching Elder Spencer Lawrence (Streator, Illinois); Ruling Elder Gregory McLean (Clinton, New York); Deacon Jack Miller (Darien, Connecticut); Ruling Elder Efrain Rivera-Vega (Cidra, Puerto Rico); Ruling Elder Chuck Sparks (Littleton, Colorado); Teaching Elder Cathy Ulrich (Fort Smith, Arkansas); and Teaching Elder Wayland Wong (Westminster, California).

C. Presbyterian Investment and Loan Program Mission Statement

“In gratitude for God’s abundance, The Presbyterian Investment and Loan Program promotes the growth of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) by bringing together the missions of church developers and the resources of Presbyterian Investors.”

D. Brief History

The 2003 review (presented to the 216th General Assembly in 2004) encountered an agency that had just emerged from its incubation period and was establishing its presence as an effective and caring partner with the PC(USA). Major achievements up to that point are noted below.

- The PILP had reached out to presbyteries and congregations to identify itself as an alternate source of funding for important capital projects. It had built a loan portfolio of $34.6 million as of year-end 2002.
- The PILP had reached a number of critical financial and regulatory milestones. It had filed its Offering Circular in all fifty states plus Washington, DC, and Puerto Rico.
- Financially, PILP earned its first positive net income in 2001 and began a decade of profitable years. This allowed it to begin rebuilding its surplus and meet North American Securities Administrators Association (NASAA) guidelines for (i) positive net income for at least three of the past five fiscal years, and (ii) capital adequacy with a minimum capital ratio of 3 percent of total assets (increased to 5 percent in 2007).
The board had also just recruited Jay Hudson to become president and CEO of PILP in 2003. He brought strong leadership and extensive lending experience from his prior role as head of one of the synod’s lending agencies, as well as invaluable relationships within our denomination.

Operationally, PILP developed a clear set of underwriting standards and loan guidelines. Staff was well-trained in reviewing applications, providing help to borrowers, and following prudent credit policies.

Building on this successful start, PILP has matured into an important contributor to the welfare and mission of our denomination. It has diligently fulfilled the six duties contained in its deliverance. Its impact is all the more remarkable because of its small staff and low visibility. As the survey findings in the appendix show, awareness peaks when funding needs arise. However, twenty or more years may pass between capital campaigns within a congregation—making it important to provide continued contact even when immediate lending is not needed.

E. Update of 2003 Recommendations

The 2003 Review Committee made observations and recommendations addressed below with comments on:

- Work with the GAMC to develop a comprehensive listing of all church loans and grants that are available to congregations and presbyteries. The Coordinated Loan Program consolidated church and investor funds into the “One Source” program with one application, one approval, and a common set of loan documents. The PILP also assumed responsibility for servicing loans of the National Ministries Division (now Mission Development Resources Committee of the General Assembly Mission Council).

- Shorten the time between loan commitments and disbursal by working with presbyteries on inspections and permitting earlier in the application process. A “Preliminary Look” program provides a free feasibility study to help manage expectations and determine if a church can afford its vision. A “Loan Discussion Worksheet” provides a web-based mini-version. The review committee received feedback that highlighted the importance of continuing to get presbyteries involved as early as possible to avoid processing delays.

- Build visibility of its loan and investment programs within the denomination by expanding advertising and enhancing its website. Surveys confirm that PILP’s lending mission is highly regarded at all levels of our denomination. The PILP has been proactive in using the Annual Statistical Report to work with presbyteries in identifying local congregations that may initiate building programs over the next two years. Direct contact then determines if PILP can help. Investor awareness, however, has grown slowly despite multiple efforts to raise visibility. The Rebate program continues to offer an investment incentive to engage congregations at the local church level.

- Expand its mission priority and be fully responsive to growth needs of its racial ethnic and immigrant congregations. As the chart below indicates, progress was made in increasing the number and size of loans granted to minority churches. Rapid growth was especially evident in loans to Asian churches (predominantly Korean communities). Our discussions revealed initiatives to support new immigrant churches, like the Ramseyer Presbyterian Church, a Ghanaian church in Columbus, Ohio. The PILP management explained that these congregations often require special attention because they have different giving patterns and do not fit neatly into the traditional church borrowing model.

- Foster church relatedness by building communication and cooperation with other General Assembly agencies and with mid councils. The PILP’s president meets regularly with leadership of the other five agencies to discuss needs and opportunities. There is especially close collaboration with the Foundation because its endowment funds are an important source of loan funding. In addition, since the mid 1990s, an informal table of agency heads and board chairs (often called the “Chairs and Executives”) have met twice a year to discuss common issues and plans for the future. The Special Review Committee on the Service of the Whole of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), in 2009, also served as a catalyst for further cooperation and joint efforts. The PILP is also a member of DILA (Denominational Investment and Loan Association) a group that includes representatives of thirty-seven church loan programs from various denominations.

- Develop long-range strategic planning at the board level. With maturity, the board has been able to focus more attention on longer-range planning. It worked closely with the president/CEO and his staff to develop an Annual Work Plan, and also looked out four to five years during its annual planning meeting in July. This allows it to identify key growth and organizational objectives and build an action plan to meet them. A five-year financial plan is also required by some state regulators.

F. Other Achievements Since 2003

Looking beyond the points identified by the 2003 Review Committee, important progress has been made in a number of other areas over the past seven years.

- Financially, there have been no loan losses despite a very negative economy since 2007. This may be attributed to sound underwriting standards, regular reviews to identify problems early, and a willingness to work closely with borrowers who run into financial difficulties. As a precaution, PILP’s balance sheet includes provisions for loan losses that may occur beyond a presbytery’s ability to meet its backup guarantees.

- PILP has received clean audit opinions each year from its auditors, Crowe Horwath LLP, with no material weaknesses. This meets crucial guidelines set by the North American Securities Administrators Association (NASAA) and provides important reassurance for the state regulators.

- Increasing the size of the staff to fifteen is related to a 2003 goal to grow to $100 million in total assets. An additional field representative has been added to support the vice president of marketing and to provide opportunities for contact with local congregations and presbyteries. This may be an appropriate time to reexamine field staff requirements over the next five to ten years.

- The PILP has gradually broadened its investor base. An important goal has been to reduce PILP’s early reliance for funding from other GA agencies and grow investments from individuals from the sale of Term Notes. Gradual progress has been made as the percentage share of individuals and churches grew from 51 percent ($19.9 million) in 2002 to 57 percent ($51.7 million) in 2010. Mid councils saw their share grow from 17 percent to 22 percent.

- The PILP continues to be mindful of the needs of small and mid-sized churches. These congregations often have greater difficulty in securing loan financing. As the chart below shows, PILP is an important source of loans for churches with less than 600 members.

- Demand for church loans reached a peak in 2009 but has declined over the past two years—primarily due to the adverse economic and employment market. Importantly, PILP’s market share of total borrowing volume has risen in recent years from 20 percent to more than 30 percent, as banks have become reluctant to lend to churches. This confirms the important financial role filled by PILP in providing critical funding for growth and operating needs during difficult times. Historically, about 10 percent of PILP’s loans had been used to refinance bank lending, but this has grown to 30 percent recently.

- Future loan capacity is adequate for current demand. The PILP’s investment base of $90.9 million at year-end 2010 is considered sufficient to meet expected needs, and sustained net income has maintained capital above NASAA’s current capital threshold of 5 percent.

- The Customer Service Agreement between PILP and PC(USA), A Corp., was designed to allow PILP to leverage other church resources—and avoid duplication for Legal, Human Resources, Payroll, Purchasing, and IT services (accounting was also previously included). As a small agency with a low profile, PILP is heavily dependent on the service levels and priorities of other church groups.

- Finally, the review committee wanted to note the importance of an early initiative that was not implemented. In 2001, the General Assembly established a mortgage agency to allow PILP to syndicate (package and sell off) some of its loans. It was a good idea at the time and heavily used by many banks and lending organizations up to 2008 when the housing bubble burst. Subsequent experience showed it to be a risky strategy that badly hurt many institutions.
This brings readers up-to-date on PILP as an energetic, committed agency with a clear sense of its mission within the PC(USA). The review committee was impressed by the knowledge of its staff and their ability to effectively leverage a small organization to have a much larger, positive impact on our denomination. The review committee noted a number of important strengths that we view as crucial to its past and future success. Looking ahead, PILP’s management and board will face important challenges and opportunities that will be discussed later in this report.

G. Standards of Review

1. Church Relatedness
   a. The PILP’s board of directors continually seeks more racial and ethnic diversity. A Korean American staff member is located in the southern California area to work with all churches, particularly Korean language churches. The PILP was successful in hiring racial ethnic and women employees by utilizing the Racial Ethnic Recruitment Network. The PILP is aware of the cultural differences within the denomination and will face a future challenge of requirements to address those differences. [Refer to Recommendation 1.]

   b. The PILP is to be commended for developing relationships with nontraditional ministries and lending opportunities, in particular, third place communities (“the third place” is a term used to refer to social surroundings separate from the two usual social environments of home and the workplace), immigrant churches, and potential loans to leasehold properties. [Refer to Recommendation 2.]

   c. The excellent relationship between PILP and the denomination is bolstered by the leadership of PILP, particularly its president/CEO and vice-president of marketing. The PILP relates to the denomination through these specific individuals who provide strength to the program. This will provide a challenge as both of these individuals transition into retirement. The board needs to develop a succession plan. [Refer to Recommendation 3.]

   d. The PILP provides churches and presbyteries a “preliminary look” at their situation as they contemplate a capital expenditure and encumbrance. The application process is followed by extensive consultation with the church and presbytery to help clarify its goals. This gives the congregation a realistic picture of the funds they would have to raise without impairing their ongoing ministries. However, employees have requested a less redundant application process. [Refer to Recommendation 4 and Recommendation 8.]

Risks and Challenges:

- New church developments (NCDs) have a less centralized process as more NCDs are being planted by congregations rather than by presbyteries.

- Financial hardships within some presbyteries (co-signers or guarantors) are a cause for concern.

- Churches with loans leaving the denomination is another cause for concern.

Current demand for church loans is estimated at $230 million. Often PILP works cooperatively with other institutions with PILP funding a percentage of a church’s loan while banks and other institutions fund the rest. As congregations are making capital improvements, many church buildings have underutilized space while new immigrant communities are growing and in need of space for mission and ministry. The denominational goal of starting 1,001 new worshipping communities may be a source for new PILP loans. [Refer to Recommendation 2.]

There are some areas of the denomination where awareness of PILP and its resources is low. However, this awareness rises when the church is in need of a loan. [Refer to Recommendation 6.]

A strong PILP professional staff and the board of directors are uniquely positioned to leverage every opportunity that surfaces. The staff and board have set goals—to keep the agency on a course that is in line with the mission of the PC(USA), and have policies and procedures to assure that the staff has appropriate skills, licenses, and experience to perform its work. [Refer to Recommendation 5.]

2. Collaboration

   a. Collaboration of PILP with the other five General Assembly agencies functions properly. Communication and computer services are centralized within the Presbyterian Center. Some employees suggested that having in-house mailing could increase production. Others that increased consultation before making computer changes could also increase staff effectiveness. [Refer to Recommendation 5.]
b. The PILP is to be commended for cooperating with the three existing synod loan programs: Alaska/Northwest, Pacific, and Mid-America. The PILP does not solicit investors from these synods. It has recently assumed responsibility of the investment and loan ministry of the Synod of Lincoln Trails, at the request of the synod.

c. As part of its marketing plan, PILP advertises regularly in Presbyterians Today, is present at many national PC(USA) events, and provides an investment newsletter to its investors. It uses print ads and “email blasts” to reach potential investors and has recently upgraded its website to make it more user friendly. [Refer to Recommendation 6.]

H. Conclusion

The review committee thanks all of those who took time to give input for this review, especially the agency staff, congregational and presbytery finance officers who returned surveys, Research Services, especially Jack Marcum, and the board of directors and entire staff of PILP who took time to patiently share with us. Finally the review committee thanks the General Assembly for trusting us with this responsibility.

The review committee applauds the achievements of PILP in meeting requirements in the areas of church relatedness, policies and program effectiveness, and collaboration. In light of risks and opportunities within today’s environment and in the spirit of encouragement, the review committee makes its recommendations to assure the continuing success of PILP.

Growing a Diverse Church: A Call for Unity and Reconciliation—From the General Assembly Special Task Force to Study Racial Ethnic and New Immigrant Church Growth

The General Assembly Special Task Force to Study Racial Ethnic and New Immigrant Church Growth recommends that the 220th General Assembly (2012) direct the General Assembly Mission Council (specifically, the Office of Racial Ethnic and Women’s Ministries/Presbyterian Women and the Office of Evangelism and Church Growth) and the Office of the General Assembly (specifically, the Mid Council Commission in the Office of the Stated Clerk) to hold a national consultation to develop strategies and policies to support racial ethnic, multicultural, and new immigrant church growth in the PC(USA). This consultation shall bring together representatives of these offices, experienced leaders in racial ethnic and new immigrant churches, and mid council executives. [The consultation shall be held in coordination with the African American Church Growth Strategy consultation.] The consultation shall:

1. Assess the effectiveness of church growth and evangelism programs and initiatives of the PC(USA) at national, regional, and local levels in integrating racial ethnic and new immigrants into the church.

2. Create measurable goals for racial ethnic, multicultural, and new immigrant church growth.

3. Develop a cohesive coordinated strategy for realizing the goals and mechanisms for deploying resources at the presbytery and local congregation levels.

4. [Designate a monitoring group to assess progress toward these goals that shall report at each General Assembly.] [Designate the GAMC to monitor and report on the progress toward these goals at each General Assembly.]

5. Include in its strategies a plan to encourage presbyteries to recognize and receive ministers of new immigrant fellowships and congregations as authorized in G-2.0505a(1).1

7. Study the successes of other denominations.

Rationale

The Presbyterian tradition, in accordance with Scriptural directives, has demonstrated a commitment to Christ’s call for the unity of believers (Jn. 17:20–23) and reconciliation of all people (2 Cor. 5:11–17). Since the historic reunion of 1983, the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) has affirmed that God intends for the church to be a diverse body. A General Assembly special task force (task force) has spent the past year studying the church’s progress in living out this commitment in relation to racial ethnic and new immigrant worshipping communities. This report summarizes the task force’s findings and directs the church to expand its efforts in becoming a more diverse and inclusive church.
The denomination has not realized the vision for a diverse body because it lacks a cohesive, coordinated strategy; adequate financial and human resources for doing the work; and mechanisms for deploying resources where they are most needed. The previous goals for increasing diversity in the church have been viewed by many church leaders as “top down” proposals. They were developed with little if any input from those most affected by and able to respond to the challenge. Furthermore, the task force heard from many that institutionalized racism and the fear of change continue to be underlying factors in the church’s failure to grow in diversity.

I. Background

A. The Assignment

The 208th General Assembly (1996) of the PC(USA) established a goal to reach 20 percent racial ethnic membership in the denomination by 2010. At that time, racial ethnic groups represented more than 20 percent of the total population of the United States. The racial ethnic membership of the PC(USA) was 4.7 percent.

In 2010, the racial ethnic population of the United States reached 27.6 percent and 9.1 percent in the PC(USA). The numbers of racial ethnic members, however, remained relatively stable between 1996 and 2010. However, the increase in the percentage of racial ethnic members, we have learned, was due to the declining numbers of white, non-Hispanic members.

The 219th General Assembly (2010), acting on the recommendation of the Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns (ACREC), established the task force in order to ascertain why the PC(USA) did not meet the 20 percent goal. The charge of the task force was to:

- Review the strategy of the church in this area from 1998, in consultation with staff in the Racial Ethnic and New Immigrant Church Growth offices.
- Analyze and determine reasons for not reaching the 1998 goal.
- Identify mid council bodies that are responding to demographic change in effective ways and collect modes of new church development and transformation that can work in other contexts.
- Discern what resources—personnel, funding, multimedia, technology, social network, and other—are needed at the General Assembly level to assist and support efforts at the mid council level.
- In light of Jesus’ continuing call to us to repent of our racism and to make disciples of all nations (Mt. 28:19), revisit the goal set in 1998 and determine what the call to the church is now that we as the church might become a reflection of Jesus in the world.
- Bring a report to the 220th General Assembly (2012) with recommendations for action.

B. Members of the Task Force

The task force consists of the following members, appointed by Elder Cynthia Bolbach, Moderator of the 219th General Assembly (2010):

- Task force moderator, the Reverend Eddie L. Knox Jr. (Presbytery of Chicago), pastor of Pullman Presbyterian Church in Chicago, who has served the denomination as a presbytery, synod, and general assembly commissioner and leader.
- Deacon Mario Bolaños (Presbytery of Riverside), member of First Presbyterian Church of San Bernandino, California, and a member of the presbytery’s Hispanic mission task force.
- Deacon Sung Yeon Choi-Morrow (Presbytery of Chicago), member of First Presbyterian Church of San Bernandino, California, and a member of the presbytery’s Hispanic mission task force.
- Elder Sandra C.R. Freier (Presbytery of Central Florida), member of New Hope Presbyterian Church, Ocoee, Florida, member of the immigration task force of the Presbytery of Central Florida, and executive director of the New Hope Assistance Center, a center of assistance to the Brazilian immigrant population in Orlando. She has a degree in pastoral counseling from Asbury Theological Seminary.
- Elder Ann Kelson (Presbytery of Great Rivers), member of First Presbyterian Church, Springfield, Illinois, moderator of the presbytery, and liaison to immigrants.
- The Reverend Mary Newbern-Williams (Presbytery of Giddings-Lovejoy), designated pastor of the Cote Brilliante Presbyterian Church in St. Louis, and former general presbyter of the Presbytery of John Calvin.
- Elder Julia Schaeffer (Presbytery of National Capital), member of Silver Spring Presbyterian Church in Silver Spring, Maryland, a predominantly African immigrant congregation.
• The Reverend Reginald Tuggle (Presbytery of Long Island), former pastor of Memorial Presbyterian Church in Roosevelt, New York, and president of two, nonprofit organizations focusing on economic development and youth services.

• The Reverend Perry Wootten (Presbytery of New York City), pastor of a multicultural church in the Bronx, former moderator of the Presbytery of New York City, and a commissioner to the Synod of the Northeast.

The task force was supported in its work by the Reverend Sterling Morse, coordinator for Cross Cultural Ministries and Congregational Support in the Racial Ethnic and Women’s Ministries/Presbyterian Women ministry area (RE & WM/PW) of the General Assembly Mission Council (GAMC).

C. Meetings

The task force was authorized to meet for two years. The first meeting was held in January 2011, and the group has gathered for six in-person meetings and held one conference call. There has been a frequent exchange of e-mails as well.

D. Defining the Terms

For purposes of this report, a racial ethnic congregation is composed primarily of persons of an identifiable racial or ethnic background. A new immigrant church is comprised of persons who have recently arrived in the United States. In a multicultural congregation, no one racial ethnic group constitutes 80 percent or more of the congregation. Chapel is a term used for communities of faith by Native Americans on reservations.

Membership statistics for the PC(USA) include only those persons who are members of congregations or chapels. Other forms of corporate witness exist in our denomination, particularly among new immigrant groups in various stages of growth. The RE &WM/PW uses the following terminology to describe these forms of ministry. Bible study groups are small groups of persons who gather for Bible study and worship, to share their faith, and to engage one another in Christian community. Many gather without pastoral leadership and without organizational structure. As these groups grow and take on greater organizational structure and leadership, they are often referred to as fellowships. Some racial ethnic and new immigrant communities gather in networks to collaborate in mission and promote common ministries. Continued growth may lead to a new church development (NCD), a worshipping community with an organizing pastor and the official recognition of a presbytery. New church developments seek to become self-supporting, chartered congregations.

E. Data Gathering

The task force conducted face-to-face interviews with a number of church leaders throughout the denomination in order to finalize its recommendation. Online surveys and questionnaires were also forwarded to mid council executives. Members and experts of the GAMC and OGA, racial ethnic caucuses and councils, and pastors and members of churches with diverse congregations were also interviewed.

Appendix A lists the resources contacted by the task force. Appendix B contains the survey questions and a summary of responses received from the participants.

II. Observations

Though the goals set in 1998 have not been met, it is important to note that more than 1,300 racial ethnic congregations exist in our denomination, and anecdotal evidence in certain regions of the country point to a growing participation in established PC(USA) congregations by many new immigrants. The primary focus of the task force’s exploration, however, has been on the movement of the Spirit among new immigrant worshiping communities that identify as Presbyterian or Reformed, many of which are not yet chartered congregations and are therefore not counted in official membership statistics.

These worshiping communities include 172 Presbyterian Bible study fellowships and 82 Presbyterian new church developments serving new immigrants and racial ethnic persons. Fellow Presbyterians from other nations are engaged in vital ministries of worship, Bible study, and service. In particular, they provide much-needed support and encouragement to newcomers in this country. Growth in these ministries has taken place despite the many challenges facing immigrant communities of faith, among them funding, leadership, and immigration issues.

Typically, these groups get their start when a group of families from the same country of origin and with a common language gather for prayer and Bible study in a ministry leader’s home. The leader is often a teaching elder or lay leader in the church in his or her home country. As the group grows in membership, it looks to be more formally connected to the PC(USA). Administrative and financial support may come from a variety of sources, depending on the situation or region. A local congregation may take interest in the group, or the presbytery may have a program to support immigrant ministries. In some cases, the group is referred to the GAMC New Immigrant Congregational Support Office. In partnership with the presbytery, this office may provide seed money for a limited time. If the group is able to demonstrate growth and financial stability, the presbytery may take full responsibility for it to become an NCD with support from the GAMC church growth and evangelism ministry area.
Key to the success of a new immigrant ministry is a dedicated charismatic leader with evangelistic and administrative skills and a partnership with a presbytery that accepts this specialized ministry and seeks to recognize and accept its leadership. Many other factors contribute to success, but these two elements are essential for effective, established ministry.11

Untapped opportunities for church growth and evangelism among the growing immigrant population of this country call for a new openness to our brothers and sisters in Christ and a coordinated strategy that engages all levels of the church.

III. Biblical and Theological Foundations

As mentioned in the introduction, in John 17:23 Jesus prayed for complete unity of believers. God wants the church to seek wholeness. To do so, God’s people must be reconciled with God and one another (2 Cor. 5:11–17). In reconciliation, the church glorifies God.

The PC(USA) has made a strong commitment to reconciliation as evident in its confessions. It longs to be a community that is in complete unity. The Brief Statement of Faith states:

In sovereign love God created the world good and makes everyone equally in God's image male and female, of every race and people, to live as one community.12

In the Confession of 1967, the church professes the importance of being reconciled to God and one another.

In Jesus Christ, God was reconciling the world to himself. Jesus Christ is God with humankind. He is the eternal Son of the Father, who became human and lived among us to fulfill the work of reconciliation. He is present in the church by the power of the Holy Spirit to continue and complete his mission. This work of God, the Father, Son, and Holy Spirit is the foundation of all confessional statements about God, humanity and the world. Therefore the church calls all people to be reconciled to God and to one another.13

The Foundations of Presbyterian Polity renews the church’s commitment to diversity in community. It seeks “a new openness in its own membership, becoming in fact as well as in faith a community of women and men of all ages, races, ethnicities, and worldly conditions, made one in Christ by the power of the Spirit, as a visible sign of the new humanity.”14

These statements evidence the PC(USA)’s ongoing commitment to reconciliation and unity. As the church lives out these commitments, the fruit it will bear is racial ethnic and new immigrant church growth.

Survey and Summary of Responses of Mid Council Executives

An open-ended survey was distributed to the mid councils—173 presbyteries and 16 synods. The task force received 97 responses (51.3 percent).

Question 1. Why has the PCUSA not met the 1998 goals?

- Top-down goals do not work. Grassroots involvement and commitment are needed, as well as resources for the grassroots to reach the goals. (This response was provided by at least half of the respondents.),
- Some presbyteries are over 90% white, and the goals were unrealistic for their demographics.
- The goals were unrealistic, with no real strategic plan for accomplishing them.
- The denomination lacks focus. There are too many other goals and not enough prioritizing.
- The denomination lacks the resources for the work.
- The work is mainly left up to Racial Ethnic and Women’s Ministries/Presbyterian Women to accomplish and is not a shared effort of the entire General Assembly Mission Council (GAMC).
- Churches remain in “survival mode,” afraid of change or of taking risks for change.
- The current “church model” is not receptive to including more Racial Ethnic and New Immigrant (RE/NI) communities.
- New Church Development (NCD) strategies and Committees on Ministries have not done enough to support racial ethnic/new immigrant leaders/pastors and worshipping communities.

Question 2. How is your governing body supporting racial ethnic and new immigrant church growth?

- Most respondents mentioned supporting NCDs and fellowships financially or by providing space.
- Note that quite a number of people who mentioned new NCDs also indicated that they had failed and/or are financially subsidized by the presbytery.
- Some respondents mentioned putting time and resources into developing leadership for RE/NI, in particular Hispanic commissioned lay pastors.
- Some mentioned multi-ethnic taskforces to engage the whole presbytery and strategic planning for better integration of these communities into the Presbytery.
- Some specifically said they are not doing anything.

Question 3. Please describe the specific ways by which your governing body is addressing this issue through staffing, committees and training opportunities and leadership development.

- Some of presbyteries have a racial ethnic executive or associate executive who is responsible for NCDs.
- There is one synod executive who is a person of color.
- Presbyteries have formed committees to support this work – the Ethnic Concerns Committee, the Presbytery Administrative Commission, the Hispanic Mission Task Force.
- Some presbyteries have hired Hispanic evangelists and NCD organizing pastors for racial ethnic churches.
- Some are not doing anything.

Question 4. How is the church responding today to Jesus’ call to repent of our racism, classism and other non-diversity practices?

- 78 of the 97 respondents provided answers to this question, most indicating that the church is not doing a good job in this area, despite the church’s rhetoric to the contrary.
  - Specific mentions were made of under-funding programs/initiatives and focusing more on international mission than domestic/national mission.
- Some mentioned specific things they are doing, mostly training on anti-racism.
- Some were offended by the question.

Question 5. How is your governing body being resourced by your higher governing bodies to help you with your church growth endeavors?

- Office of Evangelism and Church Growth of the GAMC
- OGA Office of Immigration
- NCD grants, synod grants, transformation grants, and re-development grants
- Conferences (the Big Tent and the Multicultural Conference were specifically named)
- GA staff
- Some specifically said they don’t get any support from synod or GA.

Question 6. Please describe the resource you need to assist and support your efforts to develop or further your work in racial ethnic and new immigrant church growth.

- Funding specifically for racial ethnic staff persons who can help racial ethnic NCDs
- Guidance and training on how to talk to/work with RE/NI communities
- Resources for work
- Regionally based staff from GA who work on this specifically
- Examples of churches, presbyteries, synods that are doing this well
- Some expressed concern that nFOG will make this work more difficult.

Question 7. What specific recommendations for action can you offer for developing racial ethnic and new immigrant churches in the PCUSA?

- The denomination needs more RE/NI leadership at the top.
- The denomination needs to engage at the grassroots rather than force a top down approach.
- The denomination needs to consult with other denominations that are doing this well (RCA and ECC were named).
- The denomination needs to provide more funding.
1. PC(USA), The Book of Order: The Constitution of the PC(USA) 2011–2013, 32. The text of G-2.0505a(1) reads as follows: “In the case of ministers for immigrant fellowships and congregations, a presbytery may, if it determines that its strategy for mission with that group requires it, recognize the ordination and receive as a member of presbytery a new immigrant minister who furnishes evidence of good standing in a denomination, even though at the time of enrollment that minister lacks the educational history required of candidates, and provide such educational opportunities as seem necessary and prudent for that minister’s successful ministry in the presbytery.”

Advice and Counsel on Item 16-06—From the Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns (ACREC).

The Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns (ACREC) advises that Item 16-06 be answered by the advice and counsel of ACREC to Item 05-12 (Mid Council Commission Report of the General Assembly), which was to approve an alternate resolution to read as follows:

“2. Empower the appointed commission to develop strategies to address the questions raised in the reports noted above, and to be granted adequate budget for this work.

“3. Direct the commission, in consultation with representative groups, to develop strategies toward the path forward for the PC(USA)

“a. for the development and support of ministries and structures that support and grow established and emerging racial ethnic congregations;

“b. for the development and support of ministries and structures that support and grow multicultural congregations;

“c. for the development and support of ministries and structures that support new immigrant congregations;

“d. for the growth of understanding of the issues race, culture, and ethnicity raise within the Christian community, including development of churchwide strategies to raise consciousness of white privilege.

“5. Give representation on the commission to the following groups:

“a. racial ethnic caucuses
“b. new immigrant congregations and ministries
“c. racial ethnic congregations
“d. multicultural congregations
“e. Women of Color Joint Working Group
“f. mid council staff
“g. ACREC
“h. GACOR;

“and that all decisions would be made by consensus in order to ensure voice for all commission members.

“6. Direct the commission to consult with other groups as needed, both within and outside the PC(USA), to develop workable and sustainable strategies.

“7. Bring recommendations to the 221st General Assembly (2014).”

Rationale

The Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns hears echoes of voices from across the church in the report’s Recommendation 8, which calls for the formation of a National Racial Ethnic Ministry Task Force. Specifically in reports to this General Assembly, calls have been made for

• a national consultation to develop strategies and collaborate on growing new and existing African American congregations and communities of faith in the PC(USA) (Item 16-03, African American Church Growth Strategy Report, Recommendation 1);

• the development of a national strategy for Hispanic/Latino Church Growth, and infrastructure built to support this new strategy (Item 10-17, Hispanic/Latino/a Leadership Conversation Group Report, Recommendation e.);

• a national consultation to develop strategies and policies to support racial ethnic, multicultural, and new immigrant church growth in the PC(USA) (Special Task Force to Study Racial Ethnic and New Immigrant Church Growth, Recommendations 1–6);

• recommendations to develop effective strategies for the development of racial ethnic and new immigrant worshipping communities; train seminary students in emerging cultural realities, and develop strategies within our seminaries to work toward curricular and faculty reform and change, that we might train racial ethnic and new immigrant leaders more effectively; develop multilingual resources and translation capacities to better witness within our increasingly diverse society; explore disparities in compensation between those of more and less represented groups in our church; develop resources to support the growth of new immigrant ministries and congregations, and increase the understanding among Presbyterians of white privilege that we might repent and be renewed and empowered for more faithful service (Item 10-13, Report of the Special Committee on the Nature of the Church in the 21st Century, Recommendations1.c., 3.a., d., e., 4., 5., 6.b., c., f., and 8, respectively).

These, in addition to the recommendation from the Mid Council Commission to develop a National Racial Ethnic Ministry Task Force, make it clear that while Presbyterians have been thinking about racial ethnic and new immigrant ministries for over a century—and while many faithful ministries have been launched in many contexts that have borne much fruit—we know and are voicing in many arenas our awareness that there is still much work to do. Race, culture, and language still divide us, marring the image of Christ we share with a world in need and blunting our witness to the good news. The current excitement about developing “1001 New Worshipping Communities” will not be realized without the engagement and investment of racial ethnic Presbyterians. To date, the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) has not addressed issues of race and culture sufficiently to ensure either that the needed engagement would happen, or that the voices of racial ethnic Presbyterians would be heard in the conversation.
Therefore, to faithfully steward the resources entrusted to us by taking a proactive approach to a number of overlapping initiatives and recommendations, the Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns (ACREC) advises the 220th General Assembly (2012) to answer all the recommendations noted above with the approval of this recommendation.

GACOR COMMENT ON ITEM 16-06

Comment on Item 16-06—From the General Assembly Committee on Representation.

The General Assembly Committee on Representation (GACOR) respectfully advises that Item 16-06 be approved by the 220th General Assembly (2012) and offers this comment:

When assembly and mid council participation is a goal, committees on representation may be helpful partners, especially when the concern is the adequate support and nurture of constituencies traditionally underrepresented in leadership and decision-making. The GACOR is willing to assist the leaders of this task force in connecting to relevant mid council leaders for their purposes, and targeting digital training resources for leaders involved in the conversation.

The General Assembly Committee on Representation is made up of sixteen persons, elected by the General Assembly, who are drawn from ruling and teaching elders from across the church. Its mandate and functions are described in G-3.0103 of the Book of Order (Form of Government).

Comment on Item 16-06—From the General Assembly Mission Council and the Office of the General Assembly.

The General Assembly Mission Council and the Office of the General Assembly believe that GAMC should be the agency assigned to report on progress toward goals related to racial ethnic, multicultural, and new immigrant church growth at each General Assembly rather than incurring the expense of creating an additional monitoring group. The GAMC staff provide support for racial ethnic, multicultural, and new immigrant church growth in the PC(USA), and report regularly on this work to GAMC elected members.

Report of the Special Committee on the Nature of the Church in the 21st Century.

The Special Committee on the Nature of the Church in the 21st Century recommends that the 220th General Assembly (2012) do the following:

[The assembly approved Item 16-07, Recommendation 1 with amendment. See pp. 48, 49–50.]

1. Regarding Discerning New Ministries

   a. Call upon mid councils to actively identify and assist congregations to discern future possibilities utilizing available programs including New Beginnings, Starting New Churches, and Engage.

   b. Call upon mid councils to give wise and caring support to closing churches. Each presbytery should appoint a point person who would actively identify closing congregations and provide guidance in the process of selling assets and distributing the proceeds for new church development.

   c. Call mid councils to utilize these newly acquired assets in holistic evangelism for the purpose of starting new churches (especially amongst new immigrant communities and communities of color) and encouraging underrepresented leadership (particularly women and people of color), utilizing programs provided by the Office of Evangelism and Church Growth of the General Assembly Council and others as needed [while strengthening existing churches].

   Rationale for Recommendation 1.

   In this season of great transition, many of our established churches are struggling, while new ministries and faith communities lack the resources they need to grow. We will work to respond to struggling congregations with grace and compassion, helping them to close if so led, and use their resources/assets to plant new congregations.

2. Regarding Bi-Vocational [and Tent-Making Ministries]

   Charge the 220th General Assembly (2012) [to appoint a task force to study and make recommendations] [to] affirm[ing] ordained bi-vocational ministry as a critically viable form of ministry in the 21st century church. [This task
The General Assembly Mission Council shall be directed to make recommendations regarding vocational development and training; fundraising, support, and interpretation of bi-vocational ministry within church councils; increasing the utilization of the Church Leadership Connection to connect churches and teaching elders called to bi-vocational ministry; and addressing issues surrounding the compensation and provision for benefits to support this important form of ministry. [This task force would work with the Office of Vocation, the Committee on Theological Education, and other bodies to make recommendations to the 221st General Assembly (2014).]

Rationale for Recommendation 2.

Currently about 44 percent of PC(USA) congregations are without a full-time minister, and that number is likely to increase in the coming decades. At the same time, many seminary trained leaders and teaching elders have been educated and equipped for ministry but not prepared for this new reality. Encouraging and equipping bi-vocational ministry within the PC(USA) will allow for greater creativity and flexibility for congregations, teaching elders, and ministry in the 21st century, while revitalizing the Reformed and Presbyterian witness in communities across the country.

The assembly approved Item 16-07, Recommendation 3 with amendment. See pp. 48, 50.

3. Regarding Education and Support for Developing New Churches and Ministries in a New Day

a. Call on PC(USA) seminaries to develop courses to better prepare students for emerging cultural realities. These would include training in new church development, non-traditional worshipping communities, and transformation of congregations. Courses should also address cross-cultural experiences, community organizing, and how to engage in ministries with underrepresented populations such as communities of color and people with disabilities.

b. Call on presbyteries to establish policies, consistent with the Book of Order, allowing for new categories of church (such as worshipping fellowships or missional communities) and develop richer understandings of membership. These designations would allow for more adaptive witness in diverse local contexts.

c. Call on presbyteries and the General Assembly Mission Council (through its Office of Vocation and Office of Evangelism and Church Growth) to consider alternative ways to resource the development of church plants, including the funding and sending of local missioners, individual and multiple leader church plant teams, as well as the creation and increase of grant-making funds for the creation of new ministries.

d. Call on the Committee on Theological Education (COTE) to work with PC(USA) seminaries to intentionally recruit and increase the numbers of racial ethnic and immigrant students in the seminaries.

e. Call on COTE to work with PC(USA) seminaries to develop plans to hire, mentor, support, and retain scholars from underrepresented communities, and to commit to prioritize finding candidates to replace retiring faculty with scholars from underrepresented communities.

[Call upon PC(USA) seminaries to develop resources for congregations to use to analyze their particular local mission contexts.]

Rationale for Recommendation 3.

Changing contexts require adaptive church leadership, but much of our education focuses on pastoring established congregations and older models of ministry. When pastors want to start a new community, they often have to take courses in non-Presbyterian seminaries in order to gain the tools they will need. In order to nurture innovation and creativity, it will be important to develop and offer opportunities for this education within Presbyterian seminaries.

4. Regarding New Immigrant Communities

Urge presbyteries to develop strategies to identify, engage, and welcome into membership Reformed and Presbyterian immigrant fellowships within their bounds, including investing financial resources to support these ministries.

Rationale for Recommendation 4.

Many immigrant communities already identify as Reformed Christians or Presbyterians, but find numerous institutional barriers keeping them from full inclusion and participation in the PC(USA). These communities often lack the financial resources needed to establish churches. Simply removing these barriers would greatly enrich our community and diversity.
5. Regarding Multi-Lingual Communications and Resource Development

Instruct the General Assembly Mission Council (GAMC) and the Office of the General Assembly (OGA) to work together to develop and implement specific and comprehensive plans to offer all denominational news, policy statements, web information, telephone direction, church statements, and other communications in Korean, Spanish, and other languages as needed. Both entities [provide basic accessibility of essential GAMC information to major non-English language groups, specifically Korean and Spanish, via links on the web page, telephone answer prompts, and other devices as technologies and resources evolve. The GAMC] will report to the 221st General Assembly (2014) as to their progress.

Rationale

In spite of the multilingual presence in our church, only a few selected PC(USA) resources and statements are translated into languages other than English. Presently, callers to the Presbyterian Center who do not speak English are not able to communicate in their own languages. The PC(USA) web site is predominantly in the English language. Thus, many current and prospective church members cannot read or hear information in their own languages, preventing them from full participation in the connectional church. As we prepare for an increasingly diverse future, we can make the ministry of the PC(USA) accessible to those who do not speak English.

6. Regarding Supporting and Equipping Pastoral Leaders

   a. Charge the General Assembly Mission Council, through its Office of Theology, Worship and Education, to articulate a Reformed understanding of just compensation based on our theology of God’s providence and the grace in which we all live and serve.

   b. Charge the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy to study how to bring teaching elders receiving below-minimum compensation—a group that includes women and pastors of immigrant and underrepresented racial ethnic congregations, ministries, and fellowships—up to or above the minimum compensation set by presbyteries.

   c. Charge the Office of the General Assembly to add annual compensation to the Annual Statistical Report, including salary and benefits, of all exempt church workers [who participate in the Board of Pensions], identified by gender and race/ethnicity.

   d. Urge presbyteries to set a maximum compensation level correlated with their minimum compensation level. Congregations, ministries, and institutions of the church wishing to offer compensation beyond the maximum would then be expected to match, dollar for dollar, the compensation beyond the maximum into a fund that could subsidize the salaries and/or benefits for teaching elders engaged in ministries that do not meet presbytery minimum terms of call.

   e. Charge the General Assembly Mission Council, through its Office of Vocation, to study how to effectively address the pernicious situation set up by the ongoing and increasing debt crisis for many seminarians and recent seminary graduates combined with compensation offered to new pastors that is not adequate to service the debt load faced by many.

   f. Charge the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy to revisit study documents on compensation and justice, particularly the reports of 1983 and 2010, and to bring a report to the 221st General Assembly (2014), including a comprehensive review of lack of parity in compensation based on class, gender, ethnicity, and type of service in the church.

Rationale for Recommendation 6.

Even as Presbyterians advocate for justice and equity, great inequalities in pay exist within ecclesial bodies and congregations. These inequalities particularly affect women and ministers from underrepresented racial ethnic communities. This not only inhibits the ministry of the church, but also distorts the witness of the church around issues of justice and stewardship of resources and gifts. The inequities can impede our capacity to grow the church deep and wide.
7. Regarding Christian Vocation

Charge the General Assembly Mission Council (through its Office of Theology, Worship and Education and its Office of Vocation) and the other five agencies of the PC(USA)—Board of Pensions, Foundation, Office of the General Assembly, Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) Investment and Loan Program, Inc., and Presbyterian Publishing Corporation—to articulate a renewed call for the priesthood of all believers, moving away from models of church that rely on unhealthy dependence on professionalized ministry and ignore the call of believers for mission and ministry in daily life. [affirming the gifts for ministry of all believers, freeing those called to ordered ministry to carry out their calls better.]

Rationale for Recommendation 7.

In many contexts, a top-down, corporate model of church that encourages over-dependence on professional church staff for the work of ministry has been dominant. This model is no longer financially sustainable for many congregations and diminishes the role of baptized believers to participate fully as members of the Body of Christ. We must recover the Reformed understanding of vocation that recognizes the call of the baptized to ministry in the Body of Christ.

8. Regarding Understanding Privilege

Urge presbyteries to examine the cultural contexts in which their congregations do ministry to enumerate compelling reasons for congregational leaders to broaden their understandings of community. We urge presbyteries to offer training to learn how white privilege and other discriminatory attitudes and practices limit potential for building up the Body of Christ.

Rationale for Recommendation 8.

The General Assembly has declared that it is opposed to racism, yet many presbyteries and their congregations have resisted the call to learn how internalized privilege informs attitudes about people from underrepresented racial ethnic communities and how racism harms the Body of Christ. By recognizing the changed cultural and demographic contexts, we can grasp compelling reasons for changing these attitudes. We are called to minister in a broken world, and, equipped with openness to all God’s people, we will be prepared to discern together how to heal the brokenness.

9. Regarding Ongoing Resources

[That the General Assembly direct the chair of the Nature of the Church for the 21st Century to appoint a five-person subcommittee of that committee and limit in the next two years $26,000 expenses, completing work and reporting to the 221st General Assembly (2014).] [Equip a subcommittee of the Special Committee on the Nature of the Church for the 21st Century] [The purpose of the subcommittee is] to develop practical resources for further communication with and use for mid councils, congregations, and individuals on forming faithful plans for our common future.”

Rationale for Recommendation 9.

The Special Committee on the Nature of the Church for the 21st Century’s mandate included a charge to bring a report, make recommendations, and if appropriate, prepare “practical resources for individual and congregational use.” At the conclusion of our study, we determined that practical resources are appropriate, but realize we need more time to develop them.

10. Regarding Living Out Our Faith Publicly

a. Call on the PC(USA) to focus its ministry and resources on the society-at-large and to mobilize its agencies/entities, councils, congregations, and members/disciples to reach out holistically with the Gospel of Jesus Christ to participate in God’s just peace and sociopolitical transformation.

b. Call on PC(USA) to mobilize our agencies/entities, councils, congregations, and members/disciples to prayerfully discern afresh where and how God is calling the whole church to live out our faith.
The church exists in the world to serve society-at-large, not only its own membership/disciples; the world is the context and society is the mission field, not the pews, and not the choir lofts. The church is called to focus not inwardly on buildings, programs, staff, and institutions, but outwardly on the local communities, neighborhoods, and implications of government policies, and dishonest market practices, and to challenge unethical societal norms. The PC(USA) has come to represent the elite and the rich, and must not fail to reflect and demonstrate God’s grace, love, and compassion. Society, not church institutions, is the context of the church, and the church must grow and develop resources to respond more effectively to the ongoing social injustice and emerging societal challenges. The church is sent out to the world to bring about true healing and reconciliation, to serve practically and selflessly, to love genuinely and sacrificially, and to minister to all including the marginalized and outcasts in our society. The church is called to proclaim justice and hope, and to speak truth to the powers to be. The church is called to share power, resources, and fellowship with the least among us, to feed the hungry, and to minister to the vulnerable.

The PC(USA) has been emphasizing both the social witness and evangelism, and we have yet to bring about the impact on the larger society to which God is calling the church to serve. Despite the decline in membership and resources, the PC(USA) is still positioned to make a larger impact on transforming the world and living out our calling more faithfully. The PC(USA) is still positioned to make a larger impact on transforming the world and living out our calling more faithfully. The call for councils and congregations is to serve their local communities, and for individual Presbyterians the call is to live out their faith in their neighborhoods and environments. We need to evaluate better our mission and witness in order to refocus our resources, both human and material, to serve society more faithfully and love the neighbor more genuinely.

Overall Rationale

These recommendations are in response to the following referral: 2010 Referral: Item 11-10, Direct the Moderator of the 219th General Assembly (2010) to Appoint a Committee of Eleven Persons to Study the Nature of the Church for the 21st Century—From the Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns (Minutes, 2010, Part I, p. 878 of the electronic version, p. 338 of the printed version)

The 201st General Assembly (1989) formed a special committee to study “The Nature of the Church and the Practice of Governance,” which reported to the 205th General Assembly (1993). That committee found, ten years after reunion, that the church suffered from a lack of identity and had no clear and comprehensive strategy for the future of the denomination. Particularly noted were diverse biblical and theological interpretations and life experiences leading to different understandings of where the mission priorities of the church should be. The committee’s study indicated that while the church held stated values for racial, ethnic, and theological diversity and inclusivity, the church had chosen to serve those values by requiring participation on committees and in governing bodies, neglecting a deeper commitment to learn the diverse cultural, racial, and theological values included in the body, to incorporate these diverse perspectives into our operative understanding of the church, and to plan for the future.

Today, the situation mirrors much of what the special committee found in 1993, except that in many ways the diversity of opinion has led to increased polarization and a more serious lack of communal identity. This has occurred in a time when demographic projections move us to look at where the PC(USA) is in our membership, evangelism, and stewardship strategies in a changing world.

Now, in a new century, with efforts to integrate increasing diversity into the church and its leadership, the time for a new study has come. The General Assembly created this special committee during the 219th General Assembly (2010) with a mandate to “help to increase understanding of the church from a Reformed and Presbyterian perspective and assist current and new members in forming faithful plans for our common future” (Minutes, 2010, Part I, p. 879 of the electronic version).

We began our work by creating a list of resources, articles, and books to read about the church, its context, conditions, dreams, and visions. The committee established goals and created questions to use as a survey tool in seeking feedback from people across the church. We met with staff from the OGA and the GAMC, people working in new and creative ministries, church members, leaders, and groups across the country who shared observations about the present and future of the denomination. Committee members spoke to attendees of the Big Tent gathering in June 2011 and offered an opportunity for shared conversation about the nature of the church and visions for its future.

The committee surrounded the process of discernment by worship and prayers for the guidance of God’s Holy Spirit. The committee members thank all of those who prayed for us as we worked, and are grateful for this opportunity to serve the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.).

The report is in the form of a worship service and includes Scripture, prayer, litanies, and a hymn. We hope these will help the church catch a vision of ministry to the people of God well into the 21st century.

Prologue

Nearly 2,000 years ago, a group of people from Galilee gathered together in a room in Jerusalem. This diverse group included men and women, wealthy and poor. Language and origin united them, along with one other crucial thing: the living God had touched each life, and now, in the midst of uncertainty and turmoil, they anticipated what God would do. As they waited, they prayed, and as they prayed, they waited, there, in a room.

With the sound of a violent wind, the Holy Spirit broke into the room and poured out upon this group of people. Individuals who followed the person of Jesus became the Body of Christ.

The story could have ended there, but it didn’t.

Outside of the room, in the streets of Jerusalem, an even greater diversity of people—from many lands and of many tongues—had come together for the day of Pentecost. They gathered in astonishment, for they heard these Galileans speaking in their own languages. The Holy Spirit emboldened and empowered those in the upper room to share the good news of Jesus Christ. On that day, three thousand people were added to this pied tapestry of Holy Spirit weaving.

When they left the room, they became united with brothers and sisters from all corners of the world and all stations of life. Together they devoted themselves to teaching, fellowshipping, breaking bread, sharing resources, and praying for each other. None had any need. And day-by-day the Lord added to their number.

But what if they had never left that room?

They could have invited a few more into the room, and naturally, there would be some growth. They might form a building committee to add some new rooms to the house, or a wing for education. Their identity and nucleus would remain centered in that room. Perhaps others would hear some of the good news in passing, and want to follow the same Way. They could build their own chambers, of course, providing that they could raise enough money to do so.

The Galileans might determine that the same old room was no longer big enough for people of different opinions or persuasions. They might bisect the room with a new wall. Another group might decide to build their own house, and their own rooms, with other like-minded individuals. Some of the rooms are open to everyone—as long as the newcomers don’t expect anything to change. Other doors remain tightly shut, opening only from the inside. Individuals gather in the rooms with others who look like, talk like, and think like themselves, while a whole new world develops just outside their doors. Those in the rooms fight over dwindling resources, fret about crumbling buildings, and devote more time to housekeeping, forgetting why they gathered in the first place.

What if those Galileans hadn’t left the room?

As we prayed about our common future of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) in the 21st Century, this challenge stayed in the forefront of our minds, “Will we, as Presbyterians in the 21st Century, leave our rooms? Will we venture from our comfortable sanctuaries? Will we go out into the streets, learning different languages, embracing diversity, planting new congregations, and proclaiming the good news of Jesus Christ?”

CALL TO WORSHIP

Praise be to God, Creator of all that is!

Praise be to the Almighty, Advocate for us all!

Blessing and honor be to the Eternal, the Great I Am, who brought the world into being and birthed the Body of Christ, the Church. The Church is God’s and God’s alone; through grace and in love, God grants us the opportunity to work with the Triune God in ministry in the church and the world.

CONFESSION

The Galileans left the room, but we have built many more rooms since then. Too often we have stayed inside our comfortable places in like-minded contentment. In this crucial time, as we discern God’s call for the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) in the 21st Century, we need to confess our sins—those things we have done as well as those things we ought to have done. We acknowledge our wrongs as we think about our inability to respond faithfully to cultural change, spiritual poverty, erected barriers, accumulated power, amassed resources, social witness, and theological education.
Cultural Change

The church of the 21st century exists in a radically different context than the church of the past, yet we confess that we have done little to understand and engage our surroundings. Congregations focus inward. We build and maintain buildings, programs, membership, and mostly serve our own membership. This model prospered decades ago, but has contributed to a self-centered church.

Most congregations no longer reflect our communities or engage them in significant ways. In addition, underrepresented racial ethnic and new immigrant constituencies are often perceived as unequal partners. Seeking comfort and safety in financial, cultural, and socioeconomic stability, we condemn the Gospel of Jesus Christ as irrelevant and out of touch with the needs and realities of our context.

Many church members grasp at former eras. With outdated cultural assumptions, we operate as in the past, spending for staff and programs that offer little return in terms of ministry or mission. Churches may fail to recognize, welcome, and provide support or programming for segments of their 21st century communities, including single parents, single adults, same-gender couples, disabled men and women, and underrepresented racial ethnic and immigrant adults and their families.

Spiritual Poverty

We confess our external and internal spiritual poverty. We neglected to share the good news of Jesus Christ to the detriment of those inside and outside of our church. We have been reluctant to step outside of comfort zones and incorporate different resources for spiritual formation. We have held onto rituals that no longer inspire and deepen faith, and some practices may obstruct the goal of nurturing disciples.

We have found easy comfort in church membership. Clinging to the way things were, we fear rather than embrace change. We worry about dying and fiercely grasp on to what we have and what we have always done. When the church does adapt, it is often to the disordered parts of the culture. Called to be countercultural, avoiding controversy keeps the church from the hard work of discipleship.

Caught up in the pressures of congregational leadership, church leaders neglect the time to nurture rich personal spiritual lives that undergird ministry. Without spiritual development, church leaders may never realize the power of prayer, and lack confidence in God’s presence as we work for change. We understand the need for transformation but may be unsure how to proceed. Lacking resources, knowledge, or support to proceed with transformational work, many church leaders resort to continuing to do things the way they have always been done.

Erected Barriers

Though the church strives to speak the truth of God’s love for all people and creation, we confess our complicity in the societal sins of racism, sexism, ageism, and homophobia, and have perpetuated them within the church through formal and informal barriers to full inclusion.

A report from the Church Growth Strategy Team to General Assembly in 1996 projected potential growth in faith communities of color. It concluded that the church had the potential to have underrepresented racial ethnic membership of 20 percent by the year 2020. At present, the church has less than 10 percent membership from those groups. The barriers to eliminating ongoing racism are multiple. The denomination’s five “racial ethnic caucuses” and other communities must compete with one another for the shrinking resources.

Shifting patterns in immigration resulted in an influx of diverse communities, not only from Latin America, but also the Middle East, Africa, Southeast Asia, and India. Rather than being welcomed fully into the Body of Christ, their arrival can invoke fear of the other and fear of social and institutional change. The way forward must be to journey together.

We confess that we erect institutional barriers to welcoming immigrant ministers from global Presbyterian churches. The denomination has the structure to waive some requirements, but many presbyteries are not inclined to bend when new congregations ask to affiliate with the presbytery.

Racism, sexism, and patriarchy still have a hold on the church. Evidence includes the vast difference in pay for women and ministers from underrepresented racial ethnic communities in comparison to what white men receive for the same positions. Few women or underrepresented racial ethnic pastors serve as heads of staff of congregations over 1,000 members. Guidelines about the use of inclusive and expansive language for God and the people of God have been in existence since 1984, yet pastors resist modeling this language, and parishioners follow their lead, perpetuating sexist language in the next generation.

Accumulated Power

We confess that we misuse our power and privilege. As we look at the church institutions, including the six agencies of the PC(USA), mid councils, seminaries, and congregations, we recognize that we still struggle with issues of power sharing, particularly along lines of gender and underrepresented racial ethnic groups. Those with power to decide who shall be at the table can make decisions about how far to expand the circle. Even with the best of intentions, those in power may unconsciously resist changes that threaten to take away some of that influence. Others may even make conscious decisions to exclude those with whom they are not comfortable or whom they perceive as a threat to their efforts to control. Implicit hierarchies impede the empowering of congregational leaders and diminish the priesthood of all believers.

Even though church members may realize they are called to be a welcoming, inclusive community, hospitality itself becomes an exercise of power. Members happily and easily show hospitality to those who are like them, but pull back when visitors differ in dress, language or skin color.

Amassed Resources

We confess our disordered relationship with money and pray that God will lead us to recover a faithful understanding of living into stewardship. There may be little discussion about giving, tithing, and generosity. In times of recession, teaching stewardship may seem too controversial for pastors to address except in an occasional sermon when pledges are due. We confess that we preach a God of abundance but live with a worldview of scarcity.

Substantial inequalities exist in our pay structures. Large churches offer high salaries while small churches struggle to afford part-time or weekly pulpit supply, let alone full-time pastors. While wealthy churches might be able to support ministers and ministries in contexts that cannot be self-supporting, this is rare in practice. Though we identify ourselves as a connectional church, that connection remains tenuous when it comes to sharing financial resources.

By continuing to define church by sustainability, independence, financial security, and size, many new churches and fellowships are not included in the Presbyterian family. It must be noted that this definition of a church—a self-governing, self-sustaining, self-propagating entity—is a 19th century church model not found anywhere in Scripture.

The majority of congregations continue to worship in buildings that require increasing costs in maintenance and upkeep, even as membership continues to decline, saddling fewer members with greater costs simply to keep the doors open. Congregations could seek out new ministries to house in the building or explore options for selling property, but often resist such alternatives. As a result, fewer and fewer resources go to support mission and outreach as funds are tied up in maintaining aging properties that are often impractical and inaccessible for many individuals.

Social Witness

We confess that the church has been more concerned with declining membership and revenues than with following the call of Jesus. Particularly in a time of economic crisis, we turn inward, focusing on buildings, budgets, and bureaucracies, while becoming isolated from the local communities we are called to love and serve. Dedicating diminished resources to self-serving survival strategies makes us prone to divisions and power struggles. In such a time as this, God urges the church to love sacrificially and serve faithfully, to take risks, to take up our cross and follow Jesus. The church must strengthen its social witness, promote just peace, and actively engage society as the heart of our mission.

Theological Education

We confess that a lack of culturally proficient theological education perpetuates blindness to the changing context of the church. Theological education often does not prepare ministers for shifting realities in our world and ministry, but seems designed to educate leaders who maintain the status quo. We lack courses that can develop social awareness and skills in the traditions and languages of new and younger communities. Courses geared toward changing needs in congregational and missional leadership are largely absent from required or elective curricula.

Theological education that includes an understanding of other Christian denominations would go far toward encouraging clergy to work cooperatively with others who share the same concerns for the needs in the context in which they minister. Sharing ideas, resources, and skills with other churches in an effort to benefit neighbors in need can provide the kind of hospitality that demonstrates God’s love. Courses to expand understanding can eliminate the tendency to judge and to compete with other denominations in a local context.

Call To Confession

If we say we are without sin, we deceive ourselves, and the truth is not in us. Our God, who continually makes all things new, is ready and eager to forgive us our sins, and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness. In faith and humility, let us confess our sin together.

Litany Of Confession

One: Holy One, we have built walls around us to keep us safe and comfortable with others who look, think, speak, and act like us.

All: Forgive us, God of grace. Help us to open the doors of our closed rooms and listen for the voice of the Holy Spirit.
One: We confess that we are timid in the face of change and do not welcome your children in all their diversity.

All: Forgive us, God of strength. Help us to be brave enough to open the doors of our churches to the world outside to see where the Spirit of God may lead us.

One: We have not greeted those we do not know. We have not sought ways to journey together with those different from us.

All: Forgive us, God of all. Help us to leave our sanctuaries to listen, work, and pray with others in ministry and to the community around us.

One: We do not notice those missing from our churches, those who cannot attend church on our schedule, who do not understand our traditions and practices because of language and cultural differences, and who may feel pressured to join and contribute, but who feel excluded because of stressful financial realities.

All: Forgive us, God of mercy, and help us to suspend the judgments that narrow our world.

One: Our failure to take time from our busy lives to spend time relating to you, dear God, has left us poor in spirit, fearful, clinging, and critical. We go through the motions of worship, thinking it is for our comfort but gaining little in spiritual nourishment.

All: Forgive us, God of power. Help us remember our worship is for you.

One: We see the poverty and injustice in our communities, yet we fail to understand how our own privilege contributes to the inequities. We do not make the effort to work with the voiceless, the marginalized, the suffering to learn how our resources and voices might be used to change oppressive systems.

All: God of justice, forgive our blindness to our privilege and our fear that keeps us from working with others to confront the status quo.

One: We repent of our grasping for power, position, and financial security. Our clenched hands hang on to buildings and traditions that no longer give vitality, but add burdens that overwhelm us, depriving us of joy.

All: God of freedom, forgive us for lacking the courage to let go, share, and discover the life-giving energy that comes from hearing all the voices, not just those that are loudest. Free us from fear. Open us to new ways of being Christ’s Body in the world.

Assurance Of Pardon

One: We worship a God of grace and mercy, who creates us, loves us, redeems us, and is ready to forgive our failures. The Spirit of God has opened the doors of our closed rooms and has invited us into the world, to live lives devoted to service and love. Even before we repent of the sin that separates us from God, God is ready to greet us as cleansed and renewed disciples. In the name of the Holy Trinity, we are forgiven!

All: All thanks and praise to God!

THE WORD

Present Situation

The passing of the first decade of the 21st century reinforced how dramatically different the social landscape of this century is from the last. In the United States, the first decade has been marked by terrorism, war, and deep economic recession. Environmental disasters threaten our land and make us vulnerable. The challenges that stem from those realities affect not only Americans, but also the entire global community.

Despite these issues, we also see hope and possibility. Ethnic minority communities grow, not just in population, but in economic, social, and cultural contributions. Advancing technologies alter the structures that dominate the way we speak, write, and collaborate as a society.

Since the Nature of the Church report published in 1993, areas of tension within our denomination have become more visible and urgent. Like many denominations, our ability to influence government and business has ebbed, yet we still have a great deal of material wealth. We hope to overcome our divisions in successive generations, however, many people in younger demographics feel disaffected, neglected by Presbyterian communities of faith. We continue to ignore the gifts and contributions of underrepresented racial ethnic groups, depriving us of the richness of the full Body of Christ.

We are grateful for the churches that have come to the end of their lifespan and celebrate their ministries. We also recognize the challenging fact that the loss of churches has grown steadily over the decade. Congregations have been dissolved...
As we thank God for the vital ministries of these congregations, we hope that their land, buildings, and resources (when available) will be used to plant new communities of faith. If a congregation leaves the denomination, we encourage presbyteries to negotiate for money or resources for starting a new congregation or supporting an emerging immigrant fellowship. (See Figure 2, Merged, Received, and New Congregations, in the pdf file, sp-com-nature-of-the-church-in-21st-century; or page 1493.)

As we look at the trend over the decade, we see that we lost more churches than we planted and the loss of churches has more than doubled in the last eleven years. (See Figure 3, Net Loss of Congregations, in the pdf file, sp-com-nature-of-the-church-in-21st-century; or page 1493.)

Currently, 44 percent of our congregations are without installed pastoral leadership, and an increasing number of congregations can no longer afford an installed pastor. Though we rejoice in the vital work of those congregations who are led by commissioned ruling elders and stated supply pastors, we also recognize the fragile position that these congregations face in the coming decades. (See Figure 4, Pastoral Leadership, in the pdf file, sp-com-nature-of-the-church-in-21st-century; or page 1494.)

Even as we support congregations who face changing realities, as we think about our plans for our common future, we know we must put more energy into planting new congregations that focus on diverse communities and younger generations. As we look at new immigrant fellowships and new church developments, we rejoice in these new communities. Yet, we realize that there are many obstacles before these communities of faith become officially organized or can be received in our larger denomination.

Most presbyteries want congregations to be self-sustaining, self-governing, and self-propagating before they become officially organized. This causes difficulties, because it means that those who are part of new communities do not have a recognized vote or voice within our larger system. Often worshipers in new communities are more diverse and younger than the dominant church culture, and we need to hear their perspectives in order to meet the challenges of the years ahead.

We, as a committee, recognize common roadblocks for developing worshiping communities, particularly relating to our cultural bias and finances.

Cultural Bias

In the next generation, Caucasians will be a minority in our country. As we look toward vital years ahead, we will need to focus on nurturing diverse communities. Even though immigrant fellowships and other diverse communities are the fastest growing groups in our denomination, they can face considerable obstacles as they try to organize as Presbyterian congregations. Here are four examples.

- A Somali community meets every week to worship together. It’s a vibrant body, with more than three hundred in attendance. Yet, the presbytery has not recognized them as a “church” because they do not have enough official members.

  The people who attend worship do not have the same notions of membership that the prevailing Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) has. A person might be active in a congregation, but reluctant to give up membership in a former congregation. Other worshipers find it odd that they would have to stand up in front of the congregation, profess their faith, and have their names written in a book in order to become members. The PC(USA) idea of membership has kept the church from organizing.

- A Mexican community gathers in a living room, praising God. The community is Reformed and they have a Presbyterian pastor. As they work and worship together, they grow in numbers and vitality. They visit their local presbytery and ask if they can become a part of the denomination. The pastor, with many years of ordained ministry experience in Mexico, faces numerous roadblocks—he must pass culturally biased ordination exams, meet very specific educational requirements, and navigate unwieldy committee structures. The barriers become so numerous and costly that the community eventually gives up on trying to become a part of our denomination.

- A Presbyterian Portuguese community worships together. When they outgrow the living room of the pastor’s house, they ask the presbytery if they know of a space where they can worship. The presbytery leads them to a wonderful building, home to an aging Caucasian congregation. At first, the situation works out well, as the Portuguese community grows into its new space. The immigrant community gives a portion of its income to the white congregation.

  Friction arises over the shared space, and the white congregation begins to complain about the mess that the children make, the additional electricity costs, and the wear and tear on the building. Quickly, the white congregation no longer sees the situation as a ministry partnership, but they see themselves as landlords and the immigrant community as tenants. They begin to pressure the emerging congregation to find another home.
An immigrant pastor begins a congregation in her neighborhood, and she is welcomed into presbytery membership. As she continues to work in her congregation, she sees that she is well below the presbytery’s minimum salary. She notices that when the denominational body is planting a white church, they call it an “intentional new church development,” but her community is an “immigrant fellowship.” With all of the work that she has been putting into the church, she knows that her community has also been “intentional.” The only thing that is not intentional is the level of commitment and resources that the denomination allots. The difference between what the presbytery puts into a white church plant versus her immigrant congregation is substantial.

As we think about the decades to come, we encourage presbyteries to understand the ways in which they work against diverse communities, and find ways to nurture the fellowships in their midst.

Finances

Financial stability is a major criterion for a congregation to move from the development phase to being recognized as an organized congregation. A new immigrant fellowship or a new church development officially becomes a “church” when the membership can support a full budget. Although this hurdle seems like a practical necessity, it can be difficult for diverse and younger communities to become financially stable in the short time that funding allows. In fact, most of our congregations would not be financially independent if it weren’t for the faithfulness of previous generations; existing congregations have been blessed with property, buildings, and (sometimes) endowments that have been passed onto our generation. Even with those gifts, an increasing number of established congregations can no longer afford an installed pastor.

As we plan for future decades, we can realize the tenuous position in which many new communities might find themselves. We can realize that financial independence should not be the leading signifier of a worshipping community. We can recognize alternative categories of church (such as worshiping fellowships or missional communities) and support them for longer periods.

Scripture Stories

Change and crisis are not simply endemic of our present situation; they are part and parcel of the journey of God’s people. When the disciples of Jesus gathered on Pentecost after his resurrection, they commemorated God’s giving of the Law at Sinai. The tongues of fire sent by the Holy Spirit upon the disciples that day were like the divine fire that inscribed tablets of the Law before Moses at Sinai. The Law served as God’s gift to bind together the mixed multitude that came out from Egypt in a covenant with God and one another. After the fresh experience of liberation from bondage, the Law instructed them how to remain a free people, loving God, neighbor, and self through true worship and holy living.

Many generations later during the Babylonian exile, the prophet Ezekiel had a vision that illustrated how God would again unify this chosen people in the midst of change. Ezekiel’s vision of God descending from the sky on a throne moved by large wheels represented God’s willingness to move in order to comfort a chosen people. It reminds us that God’s presence will take up residence wherever we are. As the prophet Isaiah confirmed, God can indeed do a new thing among us (Isa. 43:19).

Because God maintained relationship with God’s people in and out of exile, the disciples gathered at Pentecost knew the unbound power and presence of God. Scripture tells us that the disciples gathered together with one accord. However, the Spirit disrupted that easy unity. In its place, the Spirit offered them a deeper unity that could withstand the sending of the disciples out of the room and into a world of risk and opportunity. The world took notice of this miracle of unity amidst diversity, and the Gospel was shared to the ends of the earth. If the disciples hadn’t left that upper room, where would we be today?

The New Testament gives us a portrait of what Christian community looks like when it accepts this miracle. The body of believers, conceived in the life, death, and resurrection of Jesus, grew into a koinonia—a community known by its deep communion and sharing. Common practices that resulted from their Pentecost encounter held this community together.

They devoted themselves to the apostles’ teaching and fellowship, to the breaking of bread and the prayers. Awe came upon everyone, because many wonders and signs were being done by the apostles. All who believed were together and had all things in common; they would sell their possessions and goods and distribute the proceeds to all, as any had need. Day by day, as they spent much time together in the temple, they broke bread at home and ate their food with glad and generous hearts, praising God and having the goodwill of all the people. And day by day the Lord added to their number those who were being saved (Acts 2:42–47).

They held things in common, sharing in the manner that Jesus had demonstrated to them in feeding multitudes. They broke bread together, sharing a common table that spoke of their willingness to welcome, overcome differences, and become mutually vulnerable. They prayed, seeking to be attentive to the Holy Spirit and to better follow their Lord and Savior.

They dared to yield to the hospitality of others. When Cornelius, a Roman soldier, sent for Simon Peter in Joppa and brought him back to instruct him as to the Gospel of God and the new community, Peter’s understanding of community changed. Peter changed his behavior according to the Spirit, and his mind was transformed (Acts 10:27–28). What could have been a failure to accept the unsettling command of the Holy Spirit was redeemed in risky discipleship. Accepting the welcome of a Gentile allowed Peter to make a startling confession:

I understand that God shows no partiality, but in every nation anyone who fears [God] and does what is right is acceptable to [God]. You know the message [God] sent to the people of Israel, preaching peace by Jesus Christ—[who] is Lord of all (Acts 10:34–36).
These Scriptural reminders of the source of our unity and the unbound power of God affirm that the nature of the church in the 21st century and the heart of Presbyterian witness will be in making disciples in diverse and transformative communities to the greater glory of God.

Many have understood what has happened in our denomination in the late 20th and early 21st centuries through the lens of exile. While there are many elements of the biblical experience of exile within our context, there are signs of liberation and restoration, characteristic of exodus. Indeed both exodus and exile co-exist in the PC(USA). In exodus, we journey from the known to the unknown, from old ways to new ways. What sustained the PC(USA) in past generations is not what will sustain us in this generation and beyond. We must go out by a different way, discerning our path in discipleship together.

Disciples

As disciples we witness to Christ in word and deed, and in doing so understand the fullness of our identity in Christ. To strengthen our witness within the context of 21st century America, Christians in PC(USA) congregations must move from a focus on membership to a focus on discipleship as the primary locus of their identity. Disciples seek to love God and love neighbor in the way and person of Jesus Christ.

When we shift from membership to discipleship, our understanding of leadership changes. In a membership-oriented model of church, members are the recipients of benefits within the congregation. In a discipleship-oriented model of church, disciples seek to serve and be served in the nurturing of Christian faith and life. The future of leadership in the 21st century church belongs not only to teaching elders, but also to ruling elders, deacons, and others equipped for the ministry to which we are being called.

A shift from membership to discipleship occurs as God sends us out into the world. In a membership-oriented model of church, we often stay within our own silos, more concerned with our guilds and circles than with the larger mission of Jesus Christ. We become tethered to our customs in an unhealthy way. In a discipleship-oriented church, we stay rooted in tradition and yet are sent out in an apostolic manner, requiring adaptation to changing circumstances so that we can more closely mirror Christ in our context. Education, worship, spiritual disciplines, service, and mission, form us more completely as disciples.

Transformed And Transformative Communities

The Holy Spirit transforms Christian communities into communities that shape disciples, empowering them to become transformative in a world marked by God’s gifts of diversity. In encounters with enemies, strangers, and the marginalized, the disciples understood the power of Christ to form their full humanity. The Christian community appreciates that it takes the whole people of God, in all their diverse perspectives, in order to get a fuller glimpse of God’s vision for us in the 21st century.

While we may feel more comfortable focusing our efforts on specific groups of like-minded people, ethnically, theologically, or socially, God calls us to exhibit the reign of Christ to the world and to model a society in which the reconciling of differences is at the source of divine power and the purpose of human community. In living in such communities seeking transformation, disciples within that community are themselves transformed.

Transformed communities need the resources necessary to thrive. We recognize that the established churches in our denomination continue to benefit from the faithful stewardship of those saints who have gone before, through the benefits of property, endowments, and other funds that continue to enable ministry today. New church developments and new missional communities today begin without those benefits, and often find themselves reaching out to those on the margins of society and the church—groups that lack the financial means for full support. These communities need more equity and flexibility. They need more support from the connectional church, not simply in terms of prayer and good will, but in terms of finances, property, and other material helps.

Discipleship and apostleship drive us toward the risk necessary for Christian witness in our time. As Christians we should not only sustain ourselves or perpetuate our existence; rather our uniqueness is in following the one who gave himself up for others, emptied himself, humbled himself and became obedient to the point of death—even death on a cross.

This servant posture accounts for the honor given Christ. Christ calls us to be willing to serve, learn from, heal, and comfort those unlike ourselves. This is the heart of true evangelism.

God has given us a bigger mission than we have given ourselves. Just as disciples cannot be nourished by worship or service or education alone, so our mission cannot be relegated to only one area of human life or community. Likewise, the gifts we have been given are not meant for our own satisfaction or comfort. For to whom much has been given, much is expected. At a time when Presbyterians are among the wealthiest of Christians in the United States, we need to respond with faithful stewardship, to receive our blessing as a responsibility to be a blessing to all the nations of the world.

God is glorified when we are reconciled in our diversity to anticipate the realm of God, and to exhibit that great vision to the world around us.
As we recognize the world in which we live, the ways in which we have been blessed and gifted to minister in that world, and our call to do so, we cannot help but give thanks to God. We give thanks because God is good. We belong to God in life and in death by the costly grace of Jesus Christ through the Holy Spirit.

However, for more than two decades denominations, including the PC(USA), have been preoccupied with dim statistics of relentless decline in membership and funding, and division of all kinds. Deep in anxiety, we focus upon ourselves rather than on God and God’s work in our midst. The church is in danger of having its life of thanksgiving replaced by a life of anxiety. Paul, in his letter to the Philippians, urges the church not to worry about anything, but instead to engage in a life of prayer and thanksgiving in joy. Paul also writes in 1 Thessalonians 5:18, “give thanks in all circumstances …. .” From these passages and many others we learn that thanksgiving is more than an acknowledgement of mutual benefit or a kind of thankful feeling. Thanking, according to Paul, is to focus our whole lives solely on God. This has several important implications for the church in the 21st century.

We give thanks, acknowledging that God is restoring and renewing the church for God’s glory.

We continue to give thanks for God’s faithful accompaniment and steadfast love for the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) as well as for the privilege of participating in mission in the past, present, and future.

We give thanks, affirming that the PC(USA) is part of God’s church founded by Christ in the Holy Spirit. We give thanks and praise in all circumstances because we belong to God, and for the hope that we have through the resurrection of Christ.

We give thanks, anticipating the new and unfamiliar ways that God will renew the church for mission, in ways that may be hidden to us. We continue to trust that God will finish the good work started in us through Jesus Christ.

We give thanks for the wonderful ways God has gifted the PC(USA). We are thankful for the continuing ministries of more than 10,000 congregations and many emerging worshiping communities; for the colleges and seminaries educating people in witness to our Lord Jesus Christ; for the ordained women and men who serve as teaching and ruling elders; for the deacons who serve those in need; for the mission partners around the world bringing the Good News and hope of Jesus Christ to those thirsting for righteousness; for the mid-church councils and their leaders who serve God and neighbors; for the marvelous diversity of racial ethnic communities in our denomination; for the older and younger generations who worship and engage in mission together; for the challenging ministry and mission opportunities around us that we can engage in creative and faithful ways with the help of the Holy Spirit.

We are grateful for the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ, the love of God, and the fellowship of the Holy Spirit that we have received. We thank God for the rich faith tradition of our Reformed heritage through which we can thank and praise God through our minds, hearts, and strength. For the church in the 21st century, we pray that the Holy Spirit will move us powerfully and set our hearts on fire for God’s justice and righteousness, that we will be passionate disciples of Christ and agents for God’s steadfast love for this world. We will recover and own that part of our Reformed heritage, from Calvin to Jonathan Edwards, and from feminist and womanist theologies to liberation theologies of many different contexts, that affirm that God transforms us through faith.

We are thankful for the gift of the sacrament of the Eucharist, through which we receive the visible and the living Word by the host, our Lord Jesus Christ. Through bread and wine, words and action, this sacrament makes the promise of God visible and concrete. “In the Eucharist the church blesses God for all that God has done, is doing, and promises to do, and offers itself in obedient service to God’s reign.” Eucharist is a way in which God the Holy Spirit empowers the church, nourishes the church, nurtures and challenges the church with the very presence of Jesus Christ. We will give thanks for God’s mighty acts in the past, in the present, and in the future. We will praise God for God’s creation of the world and the cosmos as well as God’s providential care for all that God has made. We will give thanks to Christ for his redemptive life, death, and resurrection. We will continue to call upon the Holy Spirit to empower us to be faithful disciples of Jesus Christ who can faithfully carry out God’s work.

Looking back at the first decade of the century, we thank God that we have planted new congregations and found vital life and better use of resources as congregations merge, resulting in 370 new churches. (See Figure 5, New Churches, Received Churches, and New Church Developments Comparison, in the pdf file, sp-com-nature-of-the-church-in-21st-century; or page 1494.)

We give thanks for the new things that God is doing in our midst.

Sending

Gathered by God, we confessed our sins, listened to the Word, and gave thanks for the continuing work of the Holy Spirit in our lives and church. We embraced the call and challenge to ministry. In virtue of our baptism, we are all called and empowered to go forth into the world in new and creative ways to witness to God’s saving love and grace in the communities in which we live.
As we go out, we will need to meet the challenges of this transitional time—the increasing loss of congregations, the lack of diversity in our denomination, and the inability for churches to call full-time pastors. We can do it, with the Spirit’s leading, by leaving our like-minded rooms, planting diverse communities, and encouraging creative ministries and vocations.

As congregations come to the end of their lives, we will support churches that are called to close, and use our resources for emerging immigrant fellowships and new ministry opportunities. We will affirm pastors who feel called to bi-vocational ministry and innovative communities. Realizing our changing cultural contexts, we will identify, plant, and nurture immigrant fellowships, taking care to remove the barriers that might keep them from full participation in our life together. We will support and equip pastoral leaders through just and equitable pay, especially for women and people of color.

Moving forward, we lift up and learn from new and diverse models for authentic ministry in the 21st century, inspired by the faithful and creative work that God is doing in our midst. Here are several examples of models alive within the PC(USA):

New immigrant fellowships. A group of people who recently immigrated from another country will meet, worship, and support one another in someone’s living room. Often they outgrow their house church and continue to be a viable community and church.

New communities planted by an established church. Using money from a large congregation and denominational funding, a church is planted. Neema Community Church, now a chartered congregation, was birthed from Village Presbyterian Church in Prairie Village, Kansas.

Multicultural congregations. Often churches realize that they can’t connect with their changing neighborhoods, so they welcome another immigrant congregation within their existing church structure. This works best when it’s not seen as a landlord/renter relationship, or even a “nesting” relationship, but a mutual ministry and partnership. Beechmont Presbyterian Church in Louisville, Kentucky, has become a multicultural congregation by incorporating Latino and Sudanese communities into a multicultural model of shared ministry and governance. Alternately, multicongregational models of church share facilities and some mission, while maintaining their unique identities and leadership structures. Other congregations have managed to move away from mono-ethnic identities to incorporate members, leaders, traditions, and gifts from multiple and diverse ethnic groups in a vibrant witness to God’s diverse creation.

Intentional Christian Communities. A group of Christians live together and share resources so that they can serve their larger community. The members of the community might work part-time and spend the rest of their time worshipping, praying, and loving their neighbors. They might plant a community garden, provide child-care for children, or help neighbors navigate immigration bureaucracy. The Formation House in Pittsburgh is a good example of an intentional community.

Church and nonprofit hybrids. Presbyterian congregations, along with the presbytery, came together to form The Common Table in Bend, Oregon. It is “a nonprofit Social Entrepreneurship project for the betterment of our community and world.” As a restaurant and ministry, they put faith in action as they invest in people who need jobs, wholesome food, community, education, and experience.

Pastors serve bi-vocational callings. Pastors go into bi-vocational ministry so that they can serve the congregation as well as the community. Pastors may roast coffee, brew beer, counsel the community, write books, or participate in a number of callings alongside their call to the local church. Teaching Elder Edward Hilton serves as the pastor of Truckee Lutheran Presbyterian Church in Truckee, California. He works full-time as a teacher at the Sierra Continuation High School, allowing him to minister in multiple ways to the small mountain community. Some of our seminaries support this model through offering joint degrees along with the M.Div. such as the MSW, MAMFT, JD, MBA, and others.

Art ministries. Churches find new vitality as they begin to look toward the arts as a way of serving the community and attracting creative membership. Wicker Park Grace in Chicago is a good example of this type of community. Wicker Park Grace was planted in an art gallery, and creating art, poetry, and music has become central to who they are in their work and worship. In other places, a church might rent space to artists or partner with artists-in-residence.

Food ministries. Many congregations are using food—farmer’s markets, local food movements, and community gardens—to connect with the community and (in some cases) provide additional funding. Milwood Community Presbyterian Church in Spokane, Washington, has been a leader in the locavore movement, encouraging its community to eat locally produced food.

Through the guidance of the Holy Spirit, in the years ahead, we can continue to expand into new churches and forms of ministry, supporting innovation and encouraging growth.

CLOSING AND SENDING

Two thousand years ago, a group of Galileans left the room where they were gathered, and the world hasn’t been the same since. Empowered by the Holy Spirit, they became the diverse body of Christ in the world, going out near and far to share the good news of God’s love, grace, and mercy with all. We inherit this legacy, and the legacy of our Reformed and...
Presbyterian heritage, even as we seek to follow God’s call to us in a new day and time. May we be transformed through the work of the Holy Spirit into the body of Christ that God has created us to be, leaving our rooms of comfort and going out into the world of God’s good creation.

Sending Hymn

“Send Us Out” (Can be sung to NETTLETON [Come, Thou Fount of Every Blessing])

With the dawning of each new day, nature sings a song of praise;
Let us join with all creation, hearts and hands and voices raised.
For all that you’ve done before now, and all that you’re doing new,
God, Creator, we now offer, this new song of praise to you.

For our heritage, we thank you, and we honor what has been,
And we pray now for your guidance to be with us, now, as then.
Through your Holy Spirit, bind us, so that we may be set free—
Free from all that would divide us. Lord restore our unity!

Give us sight to catch your vision of a world transformed by grace.
Let us bear your hope and justice into every time and place.
Lead us, God, into a new day; may we boldly heed your call.
Send us out again in mission, serving you by loving all.

Charge

Go out! Let us go out from the rooms of our own creation; let us move beyond all that would divide us.

Go forth! Let us go into this world of God’s creation, bearing God’s justice, peace, and love to a world scarred by strife and division.

Go in the faith, hope, and love of Jesus Christ, empowered by the Holy Spirit, to the glory of God!

Benediction (from Ephesians 6:23 and Romans 15:13)

Peace be to the whole community, and love with faith, from God the Father and the Lord Jesus Christ. May the God of hope fill you with all joy and peace in believing, so that you may abound in hope by the power of the Holy Spirit. Alleluia! Amen.

We will submit an informed paper that sets out a compelling vision for the nature of the church for the 21st century that will make a difference in our church. In addition, we will help create practical, interactive, well-designed resources that individual churches can use to help us to:

- Rethink the model of the church in response to our shifting cultural contexts (immigration, race, age demographics, and technology). We will offer nimble and creative strategies for planting churches and for existing congregations to engage more fully in their context. And we will encourage congregational vocational discernment as well as individual discernment that includes pastors, elders, deacons, and lay people.
  - Communicate our faith as Presbyterians from a Reformed perspective. Equip members to evangelize and share the gospel.
  - Recognize the impact and contribution on the church of emerging majorities on U.S. society and in the PC(USA), seeking new ways of being church together, learning together, and engaging with one another.
  - Understand the particular challenges and gifts of younger generations.
- Recognize technology’s impact on our culture and church.

3. (1) What is your vision for the church in the 21st century? (2) What characteristics will draw the great diversity (racial ethnic, age, gender, etc.) of our country into our community of faith in the 21st century? (3) What do you think are the highest priorities and challenges for the church in the 21st century? (4) What unique voice do we, as Presbyterians in the Reformed tradition, bring regarding vital ministry in churches and in society? (5) How do we move the church past division in theology, evangelism and mission to work toward unity in Christ?

4. As a committee, we confess that our language has limits. We struggled with words to appropriately describe different communities. As we use the terms “people of color” or “communities of color,” we refer to those underrepresented racial ethnic communities in our Euro-American constituencies.

5. African American, Asian American, Hispanic American, Middle Eastern, and Native American caucuses and related councils as well as staff working with new immigrant communities.

7. From Item16-07 comment by the Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns, 212th General Assembly (2010). The use of inclusive language for the people of God and expansive language for God was affirmed by the 196th General Assembly (1984). Again, the 197th General Assembly (1985) adopted Definitions and Guidelines on Inclusive Language (PDS 70420-01-003).

ACREC ADVICE AND COUNSEL ON ITEM 16-07

Advice and Counsel on Item 16-07—From the Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns (ACREC).

The Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns (ACREC) advises that Item 16-07 be answered by the advice and counsel of ACREC to Item 05-12 (Mid Council Commission Report of the General Assembly), which was to approve an alternate resolution to read as follows:

2. Empower the appointed commission to develop strategies to address the questions raised in the reports noted above, and to be granted adequate budget for this work.

3. Direct the commission, in consultation with representative groups, to develop strategies toward the path forward for the PC(USA)
   “a. for the development and support of ministries and structures that support and grow established and emerging racial ethnic congregations;
“b. for the development and support of ministries and structures that support and grow multicultural congregations;
“c. for the development and support of ministries and structures that support new immigrant congregations;
“d. for the growth of understanding of the issues race, culture, and ethnicity raise within the Christian community, including development of churchwide strategies to raise consciousness of white privilege.

“5. Give representation on the commission to the following groups:
   “a. racial ethnic caucuses
   “b. new immigrant congregations and ministries
   “c. racial ethnic congregations
   “d. multicultural congregations
   “e. Women of Color Joint Working Group
   “f. mid council staff
   “g. ACREC
   “h. GACOR;

   “and that all decisions would be made by consensus in order to ensure voice for all commission members.

“6. Direct the commission to consult with other groups as needed, both within and outside the PC(USA), to develop workable and sustainable strategies.

“7. Bring recommendations to the 221st General Assembly (2014).”

Rationale

The Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns hears echoes of voices from across the church in the report’s Recommendation 8, which calls for the formation of a National Racial Ethnic Ministry Task Force. Specifically in reports to this General Assembly, calls have been made for

- a national consultation to develop strategies and collaborate on growing new and existing African American congregations and communities of faith in the PC(USA) (Item 16-03, African American Church Growth Strategy Report, Recommendation 1);

- the development of a national strategy for Hispanic/Latino Church Growth, and infrastructure built to support this new strategy (Item 10-17, Hispanic/Latino/a Leadership Conversation Group Report, Recommendation e.);

- a national consultation to develop strategies and policies to support racial ethnic, multicultural, and new immigrant church growth in the PC(USA) (Special Task Force to Study Racial Ethnic and New Immigrant Church Growth, Recommendations 1–6);

- recommendations to develop effective strategies for the development of racial ethnic and new immigrant worshipping communities; train seminary students in emerging cultural realities, and develop strategies within our seminaries to work toward curricular and faculty reform and change, that we might train racial ethnic and new immigrant leaders more effectively; develop multilingual resources and translation capacities to better witness within our increasingly diverse society; explore disparities in compensation between those of more and less represented groups in our church; develop resources to support the growth of new immigrant ministries and congregations, and increase the understanding among Presbyterians of white privilege that we might repent and be renewed and empowered for more faithful service (Item 16-07, Report of the Special Committee on the Nature of the Church in the 21st Century, Recommendations1.c., 3.a., d., e., 4., 5., 6.b., c., f., and 8, respectively).

These, in addition to the recommendation from the Mid Council Commission to develop a National Racial Ethnic Ministry Task Force, make it clear that while Presbyterians have been thinking about racial ethnic and new immigrant ministries for over a century—and while many faithful ministries have been launched in many contexts that have borne much fruit—we know and are voicing in many arenas our awareness that there is still much work to do. Race, culture, and language still divide us, marring the image of Christ we share with a world in need and blunting our witness to the good news. The current excitement about developing “1001 New Worshipping Communities” will not be realized without the engagement and investment of racial ethnic Presbyterians. To date, the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) has not addressed issues of race and culture sufficiently to ensure either that the needed engagement would happen, or that the voices of racial ethnic Presbyterians would be heard in the conversation.

Therefore, to faithfully steward the resources entrusted to us by taking a proactive approach to a number of overlapping initiatives and recommendations, the Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns (ACREC) advises the 220th General Assembly (2012) to answer all the recommendations noted above with the approval of this recommendation.

COTE COMMENT ON ITEM 16-07

Comment on Item 16-07. Report of the Special Committee on the Nature of the Church in the 21st Century—From the Committee on Theological Education.

The Committee on Theological Education makes the following comments regarding the Report of the Special Committee on the Nature of the Church in the 21st Century:

Recommendation 3.a.: The Committee on Theological Education (COTE) recognizes that PC(USA) seminaries have, do, and continue to adjust courses, supervised ministry, and continuing education opportunities as the cultural and other shifts take place.

Recommendation 3.d.: Seminaries play supportive role in discernment for ministry where God, through the Church, calls people into ministry. Specifically, a call to ministry of a teaching elder is the responsibility of sessions, congregations, and presbyteries. The General Assembly may want to call on congregations to recognize these gifts in young persons and encourage the PC(USA) to be more intentional in seeking a diversity and depth of persons supported as they discern a potential call to ministry as a teaching elder. Seminaries of the PC(USA) have, do, and will continue to recruit members of underrepresented populations, many of which are not Presbyterian.

Recommendation 3.e.: Since 1997 and according to action of the 209th General Assembly (1997), the COTE has been tracking and reporting to subsequent General Assemblies the race, gender, and ecclesial status of board members of PC(USA) seminaries. See current report in Item 17-04, page 1504, New Trustees Elected by PC(USA) Theological Institutions.

Recommendation 6.e.: The COTE invites the 220th General Assembly (2012) to consider the larger issue of educational and consumer debt in the U.S. and to encourage the study to focus on the seminarian debt side of this complex national issue. A 2010–11 Association of Theological Schools educational debt report shows that 90 percent of students graduating from PC(USA) seminaries incur less than $30K debt with 52 percent adding no debt versus 77 percent and 46 percent respectively for all ATS schools. The COTE welcomes continuing conversation about reducing seminarian debt.

Recommendation 9.: The Committee on Theological Education (COTE) welcomes the opportunity to work in partnership with this subcommittee should it be established and suggests the COTE be consulted and/or represented on it.

GACOR COMMENT ON ITEM 16-07

Comment on Item 16-07—From the General Assembly Committee on Representation.

The General Assembly Committee on Representation (GACOR) respectfully offers the 220th General Assembly (2012) the following comments on Item 16-07 and its recommendations:

The GACOR concurs with the recommendation made by the Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns (ACREC) in its comment on this item and Items 05-12, 10-17, and 16-03. In addition, GACOR offers these comments on Item 16-07:

1. Comment on Item 16-07, Recommendation 1.c.

While the scope of this recommendation is limited to mid councils using resources from the Office of Evangelism and Church Growth, GACOR wants to commend the attention paid to “encouraging underrepresented leadership (particularly women and people of color).” Seeking leaders is a first step. Connecting those leaders to resources (and people) is part of building the church and equipping the saints. We encourage the ministries and programs to make their materials accessible in the widest way possible and to search for better ways to reaching their intended leaders. We encourage mid councils to include their committees on representation in the process as it falls within their function to “advocate for diversity in leadership” in their council.

2. Comment on Item 16-07, Recommendation 2

The challenges of bi-vocational ministry are great and affect one’s capacity to participate in the life of the larger church. Investing resources to explore how to support these ministries better is intelligent given the recent trends of ministry in the PC(USA). Task forces are expensive and ideally the constituents we hope would be recruited for leadership with this group will have challenges in meeting face-to-face. Being tied to additional jobs limits most bi-vocational people from serving in a traditional task force pattern. The church needs to learn new patterns of service and engaging in this work promises to provide a learning opportunity.

3. Comment on Item 16-07, Recommendation 3.a.–e.

The GACOR appreciates the intentional references in this recommendation to under-represented groups (including communities of color and people with disabilities). We annually examine who is serving as teaching elders in the PC(USA). When we look at that data in disaggregated forms, we find that there are missing persons and categories within the larger groups—young women of color in particular are very rare. Encouraging COTE and the seminaries to “intentionally recruit and increase the numbers of racial ethnic and immigrant students in the seminaries” is important. There’s much more to do to enable non-dominant culture groups to enter the seminary process. Perhaps this work will encourage deeper conversations and prompt insights. The efforts will be better informed and effective in this work if the communities of the desired leaders are involved in the process from the very start. Encouraging seminaries to “hire, mentor, support, and retain scholars from underrepresented communities” is a part of the solutions. May the church embody these recommendations throughout its life and ministries.

4. Comment on Item 16-07, Recommendation 4

This recommendation encourages connecting new immigrant communities to the PC(USA). The GACOR would want to remind the church that meaningful involvement in decision-making, true partnership, and sharing power are also important aspects of what we know to be in ministry and relationship. We encourage mid councils to think in innovative ways, to build mutuality into its shared ministries and mutual openness in its relationships with these emerging communities, opening themselves to be transformed as they do ministry together and submitting to one another’s leadership.

5. Comment on Item 16-07, Recommendation 5

The General Assembly Committee on Representation (GACOR) respectfully advises approval of 16-07, Recommendation 5 and offers the 220th General Assembly the following comment:

Regarding Multi-Lingual Communications and Resource Development, Recommendation 5 is already happening in many of the ministries of the PC(USA) but there is always room for improvement. The GACOR encourages offices in the Office of the General Assembly to do more than they have to—that said, everything from the Constitution to the Stated Clerk’s monthly column appear in Spanish, Korean, and English as a rule. The GACOR would like to see more web communications available multilingually. The primary means for distributing documents and information in the PC(USA) is web and social media. Resources need to be distributed appropriately to empower this more faithfully.

6. Comment on Item 16-07, Recommendation 6.a.–f.

Within its function regarding the employment of personnel, GACOR enthusiastically advises approving this action. It would reduce vulnerability to pay inequalities while bringing awareness to the ways we do not yet value all according to their gifts. If this recommendation were to be accepted and implemented, it would strengthen GACOR and other CORs ability to give effective advice with regard to the employment of personnel (G-3.0103). Parts of this recommendation strive to limit wide pay gaps and model more equitable compensation frameworks. We applaud the intent and acknowledge this would be difficult to implement. Hard conversations and decisions must be made if pay inequality is to be addressed. People from underrepresented groups generally have less wealth and are more vulnerable to the pitfalls of debt. Examining the inequities through lenses of “class, gender, ethnicity, and type of service in the church” will benefit the wider witness as well as give good contextual snapshots of how the church is an employer. Complex work: but valuable.

7. Comment on Item 16-07, Recommendation 7

The General Assembly Committee on Representation (GACOR) respectfully advises approval of Item 16-07, Recommendation 7, and offers the 220th General Assembly (2012) the following comment:

The Elders Conferences (now likely called Ruling Elders Conferences if we comply with the language of the Form of Government) have been growing stronger each year. “Elders Rule!” is not just a t-shirt and bumper sticker. There are good things happening to encourage these spiritual leaders and more needs to be done. The GACOR commends the special committee in reminding the church that all are called to ministry—some to particular service.

8. Comment on Item 16-07, Recommendation 8

The General Assembly Committee on Representation (GACOR) respectfully advises approval of 16-07, Recommendation 8, and offers the 220th General Assembly (2012) the following comment:
For a church that is 91 percent Caucasian, it is imperative we all do work in looking at privilege and power, and particularly white privilege. The GACOR has included this content in its biennial synod COR training events for more than six years and have found them critical in helping council leaders and ourselves understand the context in which we serve. We commend committees on representation in the mid councils and as resources and means for this good work. How does one till the soil for the planting so that one day the Lord can reap if one doesn’t look first at the soil and its context. Discriminatory practice is alive and well, we still struggle with the words we confess, claiming belief

“In a broken and fearful world the Spirit gives us courage to pray without ceasing, to witness among all peoples to Christ as Lord and Savior, to unmask idolatries in Church and culture, to hear the voices of peoples long silenced, and to work with others for justice, freedom, and peace” (The Book of Confessions, A Brief Statement of Faith, 10.4, Lines 65–71, emphasis added).

This is but one of the confessions, but the these returns over and over (an assurance that we are not the first to claim Christ and struggle with loving one another and that it has been important to the church for a long time).

9. Comment on Item 16-07, Recommendation 9

The General Assembly Committee on Representation (GACOR) respectfully advises disapproval of Item 16-07, Recommendation 9, and offers the 220th General Assembly (2012) the following comment:

While we appreciate the work the special committee did, we respectfully suggest that permanent General Assembly committees, ministry units, and offices have the means to implement their recommendations with little or no additional financial implications beyond the costs of printing or designing.

10. Comment on Item 16-07, Recommendations 10.a.–c.

The General Assembly Committee on Representation (GACOR) respectfully advises approval of Item 16-07, Recommendation 10, and offers the 220th General Assembly (2012) the following comment:

We agree with the special committee and, with them, assert, “budgets and programs must reflect our commitment to mission.” Authenticity and integrity are essential in ministry as well as other justice work.

The General Assembly Committee on Representation is made up of sixteen persons, elected by the General Assembly, who are drawn from ruling and teaching elders from across the church. Its mandate and functions are described in G-3.0103 of the Book of Order (Form of Government).

GAMC & OGA COMMENT ON ITEM 16-07

Comment on Item 16-07—From the General Assembly Mission Council and the Office of the General Assembly.

The Office of the General Assembly (OGA) and each mission area of the General Assembly Mission Council (GAMC) provides resources, content, and expertise in various languages. The following text highlights much of the work already completed or underway in the area of multicultural translation.

1. Resources

Congregational Ministries Publishing (CMP) publishes key language-specific resources for teaching and study in the Reformed Tradition. Currently CMP provides materials in Korean, Spanish, and Portuguese. While this ministry is greatly valued by the respective constituents, the costs to produce these materials substantially outweigh the available market in which to sell these resources; therefore GAMC underwrites the deficit between the sales and costs. This amounts to approximately $350,000 per year from unrestricted monies. Resources currently provided are listed below:

a. Spanish

Asi Creemos. Based on the We Believe curriculum, this resource is the denominational curriculum for children in Spanish. This is now offered at no charge online as a way to aid Spanish-language new church developments.

The Spanish Language office has launched its new adult curriculum called Estudio Bíblico Reformado, which is a thematic, quarterly curriculum written especially for Spanish-speaking Presbyterians.

Two of the more popular Being Reformed adult studies have now been translated into Spanish. Titles now available include: Theology for Presbyterians and Discipleship.

b. Korean

Korean Present Word is a transformational Bible study resource for building mature faith communities. The quarterly curriculum consists of both a leader’s guide and a student book.
Kuyuk. Kuyuk Bible study has been published for more than ten years and is written by Korean Presbyterian pastors. It reflects the life and faith of Korean American immigrants and congregations and connects with a variety of subjects such as discipleship, caring ministry, stewardship, justice, and peacemaking issues.

Three of the more popular Being Reformed adult studies have now been translated into Korean. Titles include: Theology for Presbyterians, Worship as Evangelism, and The Lord’s Prayer.

c. Portuguese

Nos Acreditamos: Palavra de Deus para as Pessoas de Deus for youth is the newest member of the We Believe and Así Creemos family. It teaches youth about biblical truths using the Bible and the confessional documents of the church. These materials are offered free of charge to our Portuguese-language congregations and fellowships.

2. Documents and Materials

Key GAMC and OGA documents and other materials have been translated into other languages. The following list highlights some of the documents translated to date.

- Book of Order 2011–2013 (Korean, Spanish, Mandarin Chinese, and selections in Portuguese);
- The Book of Confessions (Korean, Spanish, and selections in Portuguese);
- Communication regarding changes in standards of ordination (translation of different interpretation materials);
- Presbyterians Today magazine Lenten devotion was translated in Korean in 2011 and Spanish in 2010;
- Promotional materials for Big Tent;
- Ordination exams;
- Confession of Belhar (Korean and Spanish);
- Special Offerings (various resources);
- Presbyterian Women’s Horizons Bible study (two times);
- Living the Vision: Multicultural Ministries in Spanish;
- Translation of Presbyterian Disaster materials (Haiti, for example);
- Presbyterians and Military Service (Spanish);
- Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (document regarding mental illness: Enfermedades mentales severas: Buscando una respuesta cristiana integral);
- Translation of Who Are We Presbyterians video;
- Translation work for the Office of Mission Grants;
- Translation of OGA materials include: Proposed Form of Government materials, Peace Unity and Purity Task Force report, Proposed Book of Amendments, Statistical Workbook for Congregations, General Assembly Committee on Representation Fact Sheet (Spanish and Korean);
- In addition, OGA provides the following study documents in Spanish and Korean: All the Live Long Day; Brief Statement of Faith; Church and Homosexuality (Korean); Covenant of Life (Spanish); General Assembly Bible Study: Crossing Ten Seas, Is Christ Divided; Parliamentary Procedures; Seeking Peace, Unity, and Purity video; Turn to the Living God.

3. Websites

In order for Spanish- and Korean-speaking constituents to find resources efficiently, specific pages on the PC(USA) website have been created that enable language-specific material to be found in one place. Links to the webpages are referenced below.

All Spanish resources: http://www.pcusa.org/browse/resources-resource/language/spanish/
The current PC(USA) website is comprised of approximately 12,000 sub-pages, donation pages, and resources pages. Given the current in-house rate for translation, the estimated cost to translate the entire website using a trained translator would be approximately $300,000 per language. If translation software were to be utilized instead, the cost would decrease, but a proofreader/editor would still be required to ensure cultural context and correct translation. Estimated cost of this process is $84,000 per language, as well as ongoing costs for regular updates and maintenance of the website.

The Church Store (store.pcusa.org) is equipped with multi-language functionality. Customers wishing to purchase products on-line, can choose to view the web store and shopping cart in Spanish or Korean by using the language selection feature.

4. On-site Translation for Customer Service

The GAMC employs staff who have expertise in multiple languages and are available to serve as interpreters and translators for constituent inquiries. More than twenty staff members provide this service in the following languages: Korean, Spanish, Mandarin Chinese, Arabic, French, German, Hindi, Malayalam, Portuguese, Tshiluba.

Recommendation 5 calls for the GAMC and OGA to implement specific and comprehensive plans to offer all communications in Korean, Spanish, and other languages as needed, without providing specific direction on the need. Considerable effort is already expended to produce the results listed above. If additional translation efforts are sought by the General Assembly, designating some projects as a priority would assist the General Assembly Mission Council and the Office of the General Assembly in meeting that need.

OGA (OFFICE OF VOCATION) COMMENT ON ITEM 16-07

Comment on Item 16-07—From the Office of the General Assembly (Office of Vocation).

In regards to Recommendation #2 of this report, the Office of Vocation, a department of the Office of the General Assembly, would like to inform the assembly that they have already made the nurture of bivocational ministry a priority by

- affirming bi-vocational ministry in news stories, in web resources and advisory handbooks, and in all of our education events with presbytery committees on preparation for ministry;
- providing debt assistance for bi-vocational ministers (see www.pcusa.org/tlda);
- partnering with Union Presbyterian Seminary’s Supervised Ministry department as they design new contextual courses preparing for bi-vocational ministry;
- planning a webinar series “Moving into Bi-Vocational Ministry” with a variety of leaders providing expertise;
- including more types of positions, more flexibility in CLC as it is revised (2012–2013).

In regards to Recommendation 6, the Office of the General Assembly urges the 220th General Assembly (2012) to consider the following issues in relation to this recommendation:

1. Currently, the Office of the General Assembly (OGA) collects and publishes the salary and benefits information for exempt staff of all presbyteries, synods, and General Assembly agencies in the Minutes of the General Assembly, Part II, Statistics. The term "church worker" encompasses a wide variety of exempt employees within the PC(USA) including and not limited to teaching elders and staff of local congregations. To accommodate the collection process proposed in the report, the OGA would be required to hire a part-time employee, at minimum.

2. Only 65 percent of the mid councils comply with the current mandate to submit salary information. Unless a higher percentage of the 10,000 plus congregations comply with the proposed request for salary and other information on staff, the information gathered will be inconclusive and give an inaccurate picture of the race/gender breakdown in the church.

3. Another consideration is the issue of privacy, which become a concern when asked to publish gender and race/ethnicity of persons. Policies in place at the present time prevents the PC(USA) from publishing and/or providing personal information about individuals.

Commissioners’ Resolution. On Directing the Evangelism and Church Growth Ministry Area to Share Stories of Great Commission Congregations.

The 220th General Assembly (2012) directs the General Assembly Mission Council, through its Evangelism and Church Growth ministry area to do the following:

1. Share the stories of Great Commission congregations and encourage all Presbyterian pastors and sessions to lead their congregations in ministry and mission shaped by the Great Commission.

2. Report to the 221st General Assembly (2014) examples of congregations that have significantly demonstrated their focus on the Great Commission.

Rationale

The membership of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) continues to decline.

The Savior’s last command was, “… All authority in heaven and on earth has been given to me. Go therefore and make disciples of all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Spirit, and teaching them to obey everything that I have commanded you. And remember, I am with you always, to the end of the age. (Mt. 28:18–20; see also Mk. 16:15; Lk. 24:46–49; Jn. 17:18 and 20:21; Acts 1:8).

We are addressing our multiethnic and immigrant communities, but not our current, older congregations that need to grow and stay vital in Christ’s mission.

We wish to share/encourage churches in our denomination with stories of Great Commission faithfulness.

This resolution was inspired by:

- A growing multiethnic congregation pastored by the Reverend Dr. Angel de la Cruz.

- 1001 new worshipping communities [www.pcusa.org/get/resources/resource/17929/].

- “Engage” resources from Evangelism and Church Growth ministry area [http://www.pcusa.org/resource/engage/].

Bill Budnick, Presbytery of John Calvin

GAMC COMMENT ON ITEM 16-08

Comment on Item 16-08—From the General Assembly Mission Council (GAMC).

The Evangelism Office is committed to helping churches live into and out of “The Great Commission” by assisting churches and mid councils to help in the nurture and equipping of disciples of Jesus Christ. We believe that followers of Jesus authentically share faith and serve others. Our resource “Engage” is designed to help people in our churches engage the Gospel, discipleship, and mission (www.pcusa.org/engage).

See also the Evangelism Office website to view stories of how Engage is helping local churches at www.pcusa.org/evangelism.
Item 16-09

[The assembly approved Item 16-09. See pp. 48, 51.]

Commissioners’ Resolution. On Inviting the Community to Attend Presbyterian Churches.

The 220th General Assembly (2012) designates a national day to be recognized annually [on the third Sunday of September] by all of the PC(USA). This day will encourage Presbyterian church members to offer an invitation to acquaintances outside the church community to attend a Sunday church service. This national day would facilitate church growth and would open the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) to the community.

[The assembly approved Item 16-10 with comment. See pp. 48, 51.]

Comment: The 220th General Assembly (2012) directs the Office of Collegiate Ministries to present a progress report regarding the Collegiate Ministries Task Force Report received by our committee to the 221st General Assembly (2014).

Response: This referral is answered by the “Collegiate Ministries Task Force Report” below.

Collegiate Ministries Task Force Report

As of January 1, 2011, the Office of Collegiate Ministries was established and staffed with a full-time associate position and a half-time administrative assistant position. The Collegiate Ministries Task Force was formed and prepared the following Strategy for Mission.

VISION STATEMENT

“Where there is no vision the people perish.” For decades there hasn’t been a cohesive vision or identity for PCUSA collegiate ministry. A vision statement is the first and significant step to developing and regaining a semblance of organization within and importance to church for collegiate ministries. This simple statement has elements of evangelism, compassion and education—all hallmarks of reformed ministry.

WORSHIPPING COMMUNITIES

This recommendation could have been a directive, but instead was listed as an encouragement with anticipation that it would be given the weight of a directive by the Office of Collegiate Ministry. The intention is that Collegiate Ministries would be engaged in the 1,001 New Worshipping Communities endeavor. As details become available with the 1,001 Worshipping Communities program, Collegiate Ministries would incorporate the details of the program while developing new worshipping communities near campuses that have no PC(USA) presence and transforming existing worshipping communities near college campuses that are currently underserved by the PC(USA).

REGIONAL OFFICES

Ministry is contextual. For local collegiate ministries to receive the most excellent and relevant help, the staff members that work with these ministries need to be familiar with their context. Also, with the 101 new ministries being established and renewed, there will hopefully be more ministries established. With the increase in ministry locations, collaboration with and support from regional entities and agencies (mid councils, related schools, camps and conference centers) is essential. The staff will need to be more aware and acquainted with the agencies in the region. For this new model, more centralized staff is not the answer; a regional staff will be more responsive.
SUSTAINABLE FUNDING

It is no secret that many of the traditional funding streams are drying up or being redirected. Many offices are dealing with a reduction in funding; the uniqueness of Collegiate Ministries is the highly restrictive nature of the overall budget. The level of restriction on the budget does not lend itself to creatively moving a program forward. In anticipation of further declines and reductions, the task force recommends that, with the help of Communications and Funds Development, a capital campaign be established to fund the important and ongoing work of the Office of Collegiate Ministries in perpetuity. For the Office of Collegiate Ministry to be able to respond to ministry needs timely and appropriately, both now and in the future, an innovative and productive fundraising effort is essential.

PCUSA COLLEGIATE MINISTRIES STRATEGIC PLAN OUTLINE

VISION STATEMENT

We are a church that reaches, loves and teaches college students to become life-long followers of Jesus Christ.

STUCTURE AND NETWORK

- A stable national office with consistent funding of programs and staff
- Network in covenant with the GAMC
  - Part-time regional coordinators
  - Communications Coordinator
  - Institute a structured, replicable and adaptable collegiate ministry model that can be used by congregations to engage in collegiate ministry
    —Establish a structure to promote establishing local Presbyterian Collegiate Ministries (PCM)
  - A national Presbyterian Collegiate Ministry Advisory Team would work with the Office of Collegiate Ministries to engage local churches and mid-councils to consider establishing a PCM

RENEW OR START 101 WORSHIPPING COMMUNITIES / COLLEGIATE CONGREGATIONS

- Identify 101 university communities with the potential for collegiate ministry growth
- Identify 25 Collegiate Congregations
  - Churches located within reasonable proximity to a college campus
  - A church actively involved in living out the Collegiate Ministries vision statement
- Gather Worshiping Communities / Collegiate Congregations
  - Share how Collegiate Ministries vision plays out in a University Church setting
  - Ask congregations to research other churches and campuses in their region
- Classify Worshiping Communities / Collegiate Congregations into 3 categories
  - Those making a solid impact on the campus community through a planned ministry —Create a network, collect and organize best practices, get on board
  - Those with potential for such ministry but aren’t organized around it or realizing it —Offer to partner with congregation using an eighteen-month plan
  - Those that have the right location but not potential without a major overhaul —Offer a three-year plan with Church Growth office

SUSTAINABLE FUNDING STRATEGY

- Office of Collegiate Ministries
  - Increased funding of OCM budget for an initial five-to-six-year period
  - Five-year Plan
Presbyterian Collegiate Ministries Network

- Mainly from OCM budget preliminarily until regions are established
  - Regions will work toward 501(c)3 status for fundraising purposes
- Regional coordinators will be trained and encouraged to raise funds immediately
- Proactively work with entities within the church to secure collegiate ministry funds
  - Mid Councils, Foundation, Communications and Funds Development

RECRUITING AND TRAINING POSSIBILITIES

- Chaplaincy Internships
  - Positions are supported by institutions and responsible to chaplains

- Congregational Internships
  - Positions to be supported by congregation

- Collegiate Ministry Volunteers
  - Program supported by Office of Collegiate Ministries

- Seminary Field Education
  - Office of Collegiate Ministries will work with Committee on Theological Education to create a proposal to encourage PC(USA) partner seminaries (possibly other seminaries) to create field education placements in campus ministry settings

- Professional Education
  - Develop Master’s level Collegiate Ministry certificate or degree programs with one or more of our partner seminaries

- Continuing Education
  - National & Regional Gatherings
  - Online Opportunities

220TH GENERAL ASSEMBLY (2012) 1489
Item 16-A

[The assembly acknowledged Item 16-A. See p. 48 and 52.]

Sam and Helen Walton Awards

The General Assembly Mission Council reports the recipients of the Sam and Helen Walton Awards for 2011 and 2012 and recommends that the 220th General Assembly (2012) recognize the recipients as outstanding new church developments:

2011
1. Covenant Fellowship Presbyterian Church, Synod of the Pacific, Redwoods Presbytery
2. Temecula Valley Korean Presbyterian Church, Synod of Southern California & Hawaii, Riverside Presbytery
3. Grace Presbyterian Church, Synod of South Atlantic, Cherokee Presbytery
4. Chapel in the Pines Presbyterian Church, Synod of the Mid-Atlantic, Salem Presbytery
5. Misión Hispana El Buen Pastor, Synod of the Mid-Atlantic, Salem Presbytery

New Hope Presbyterian Church, Orange, California, Los Ranchos Presbytery, Synod of Southern California and Hawaii.

Rationale

In late December 1991, Sam and Helen Walton made a generous gift through the Presbyterian Foundation of $6 million that included $3 million to be used for new church developments that have placed an emphasis on site acquisitions. All nominees must meet the qualifications as set forth in the application. The General Assembly Mission Council, acting on behalf of the General Assembly between meetings, approved the above recipients during its September 2011 and February 2012 meetings.

[The assembly acknowledged Item 16-B. See p. 48 and 52.]

The General Assembly Mission Council recommends that the 220th General Assembly (2012) recognize the following Women of Faith award recipients at the 220th General Assembly (2012):

Elder Judith Henry,
Commissioned Ruling Elder Rosemary Rice McMahan, The Reverend Ann Rhee Menzie.

Rationale

Women of Faith Awards

The Women of Faith Awards were established in 1986 to honor women in the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) whose lives exemplify their Christian commitment through witness, service, and leadership.
Each year a theme is chosen. Nominations are received from throughout the church and honorees are selected by a committee of representatives from various groups.

Awards are presented at the Women of Faith Breakfast during the General Assembly. This breakfast is an annual celebration of God’s activity in the lives of women and their response to God’s presence.

The theme for this year’s awards is “Courageous Women Transforming Communities of Faith, Hope, Love & Witness” and therefore honors women who have courageously transformed and strengthened their congregations in an era of great change and transition.

The 2012 selection committee included Mary Marks King, moderator; Shardé Chapman, Racial Ethnic Young Women Together; Cindy Eschliman, National Network of Presbyterian College Women; Sue Ezell, General Assembly Mission Council; Gloria Moorman, Presbyterian Women Churchwide Coordinating Team; and Jerri Rodewald, Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns.

The selection committee members were instructed to consider the following criteria in reviewing the twenty-four nomination forms and in making their selection of the four women who receive this award:

- Selection of the Women of Faith awardees are based on the theme.
- How has the nominee courageously transformed and strengthened her congregation in an era of great change and transition?
- How has the nominee implemented a new program or ministry?
- Three nominees will be selected.
- Strive for racial ethnic diversity.
- Strive for geographic diversity.
- Awardees will be women.
- Awardees will be Presbyterian.
- Current staff serving the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) are ineligible for nomination.
- Previous award recipients are ineligible to be nominated again for the Women of Faith award (one time recipients; no duplications).

The election of the three honorees was approved by the Evangelism Mission Committee and the General Assembly Mission Council.

Biographical sketches of these four women are as follows:

1. Elder Judith Henry, St. Albans, New York

   Elder Judith Henry is a member of the Presbyterian Church of St. Albans. Henry immigrated to the United States from the West Indies as a child, is a Jamaican American and a member of the Esther Circle of Presbyterian Women. She has a Bachelor of Science in Nursing and is a care manager in diabetes education. Using her knowledge in nursing as a volunteer at St. Albans Presbyterian Church, she leads an annual HIV/AIDS concert at the church to benefit organizations that assist children with the disease and is an active member in the AIDS Institute of Faith, which raises community awareness about HIV/AIDS.

   Henry is also involved in New York City’s Community Emergency Response Team, preparing people to respond to emergency situations. She leads Black History Month event planning, plans community health fairs, blood drives, and organized donation efforts for Haiti disaster relief.

2. Commissioned Ruling Elder Rosemary Rice McMahan, Brownsboro, Alabama

   Commissioned Ruling Elder Rosemary Rice McMahan was commissioned in 2003 as a commissioned ruling elder at Big Cove Presbyterian Church. She and the congregation, under the guidance of the Holy Spirit, have grown the small congregation of Big Cove from a membership of 18 to 95. The congregation, with the help of the presbytery, will move out of the 100-year-old, white clapboard church this spring into a new building following the congregation’s vision “to be disciples who make disciples.”
During the last several years, McMahan has tripled the congregation’s fundraising. She also adopted a style of community outreach within the church including adding a second service with a different worship style.

3. The Reverend Ann Rhee Menzie, San Francisco, California

The Reverend Ann Rhee Menzie is a Korean American minister-at-large in Redwoods Presbytery. She is a founding member and director of Shintuh, a program that addresses domestic violence within the Korean American community, including providing linguistically and culturally sensitive services for Korean American survivors of domestic violence and their children. Menzie works at the Korean Community Center (KCCEB) and is in dialog with communities of faith to support the work of Shintuh and KCCEB. She promotes gender justice and healthy family relationships, works with both domestic violence survivors and their abusers, and sparked an initiative to write a Bible study on domestic violence.

Menzie also served as racial ethnic liaison from 1999 until 2002 for the National Association of Presbyterian Clergywomen and currently serves on the Board of Korean American Presbyterian Clergywomen.

On Undertaking a Parenting Initiative Called the “Institute for Effective Parental Leadership”—From the Presbytery of Long Island.

The Presbytery of Long Island overtures the 220th General Assembly (2012) to do the following:

1. Undertake a parenting initiative called the “Institute for Effective Parental Leadership.”

2. Authorize the following four presbyteries as “project presbyteries”: the Presbytery of San Francisco, the Presbytery of Heartland, the Presbytery of New York City, and the Presbytery of Chicago.

3. Assign one of its entities to distribute the program resources and enlist consultant(s) to assist the project presbyteries to undertake the program. The appropriate entity will report progress on this overture to the 221st General Assembly (2014).

[Comment: The Assembly Committee on Theological Issues, Institutions, and Christian Education commends the Presbytery of Long Island for its commitment to addressing parenting issues with at-risk families. The General Assembly also wishes to encourage the Presbytery of Long Island to contact the Presbyteries of Heartland, San Francisco, New York City, and Chicago, and to proceed with this hopeful and much needed ministry.]

Rationale

The Presbytery of Long Island supports a parenting initiative called the “Institute for Effective Parental Leadership” (see 023-long-island-institute-for-parental-leadership.pdf; also page 1524) that will, among other things, teach effective parenting skills for parents with children six years old and younger.

The PC(USA) has as one of its goals the building and maintaining of healthy families by focusing on raising healthy children to adulthood as paramount to sustaining society.

Unfortunately, poverty, racism, abuse, and neglect often accompany a child as he or she grows in adulthood, and these social pathologies can create complex physical, emotional, and intellectual challenges that come directly from childhood traumas.

The 207th General Assembly (1995) particularly noted the factors that especially implicated young African American males as noted: “Young African American males are dying disproportionately from homicide. They are overrepresented in the prison population and school dropouts, but underrepresented in the college population. The plight of African American males has declined to the point where they are considered an ‘at risk’ population” (Minutes, 1995, Part I, p. 405).

There exist overwhelming data supporting the notion that an interlocking set of socioeconomic factors account for the precarious plight of young African American males and among these data more than 65 percent of African American children are born into settings headed by a single parent (usually the mother). Such interlocking factors as racism, poverty, family disintegration, economic shifts, and community disorganization are contributing factors that continue to play critical roles in the vulnerability of African American males.

The 207th General Assembly (1995) approved a resolution stating in effect that the PC(USA) had historic interest and commitment to educating this nation’s children.

The 207th General Assembly (1995) reaffirmed the church’s position on supporting presbyteries and synods to share resources and models for congregational dialogue.

The 209th General Assembly (1997) approved a perspective on this issue entitled, “The Nature and Task of Christian Education from an African American Presbyterian Perspective,” by Gayraud S. Wilmore. It is appropriate that renewed efforts be put forward within the context of a new paradigm. The church needs to help save and build the future of African American youth by doing ministry differently, namely, by working directly with the parents of young children. The parent’s role is the single most critical contribution to a child’s development. Nothing in society can replace the importance of the role of a parent. The church must focus on educating, training, equipping, and assisting parents to be more effective in discharging their responsibilities.

As noted in a New York Times article (January 8, 2012) entitled, “A Poverty Solution That Starts with a Hug,” by Nicholas D. Kristof, “This new research addresses an uncomfortable truth: Poverty is difficult to overcome partly because of self-destructive behaviors. Children from poor homes often shine, but others may skip school, abuse narcotics, break the law, and have trouble settling down in a marriage and a job. Then their children may replicate this pattern.”

As Frederick Douglas noted, “It is easier to build strong children than to repair broken men.”

ACREC ADVICE AND COUNSEL ON ITEM 17-01

Advice and Counsel on Item 17-01—From the Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns (ACREC).

The Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic concerns advises that the 220th General Assembly (2012) disapprove Item 17-01.

Rationale

The ACREC applauds efforts by presbyteries that tackle issues that impact racial ethnic communities. This overture addresses the plight of young African American males in American society and proposes a pilot program that would teach parenting skills to parents with children under the age of seven years old. While recognizing many socioeconomic factors impact the lives of African American children, the factor lifted up here is the role of a parent. The particular initiative proposed is the “Institute for Parental Leadership” and the four presbyteries selected for the pilot program are the Presbyteries of San Francisco, the Heartland, New York City, and Chicago. There is no explanation as to why this initiative was selected or whether it has been successfully implemented. Further, there is no indication that the designated presbyteries have agreed to participate in the pilot program. The ACREC believes that there should be greater involvement of the church in this area, but more information is needed before this initiative is approved.

GAMC COMMENT ON ITEM 17-01

Comment on Item 17-01—From the General Assembly Mission Council.

At the repeated urging of the church, the General Assembly Mission Council is focusing on areas of ministry where it can have the greatest impact. While developing healthy families is a concern for all who would lead Christ’s church, this focus has not emerged as one of the areas in which the GAMC can have primary impact. The 2013–2016 GAMC Mission Work Plan, which is proposed for approval with our budget for 2013–2014, focuses GAMC work on: Transformational Leaders; Young Adults; Compassionate Prophetic Disciples; 1001 New Worshiping Communities; GA Engagement; Organizational Integrity.

Item 17-02

[In response to Item 17-02, the assembly approved an alternate resolution. See pp. 12, 13.]

On Amending the “Setting of the Service” of Ordination and Installation for Teaching Elders (W-4.4002)—From the Presbytery of New Castle.

The Presbytery of New Castle overtures the 220th General Assembly (2012) of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) to direct the Stated Clerk to send the following proposed amendment to the presbyteries for their affirmative or negative vote:

Amend W-4.4002 as follows [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]:

“W-4.4002 Setting of the Service

“The service of ordination and installation for ruling elders or deacons, or for commissioning a ruling elder to pastoral service, or for commissioning other church workers may take place during the Service for the Lord’s Day as a response to the proclamation of the Word. (W-3.3503). Ordination and installation, or commissioning, may also take place in a special service that focuses upon Jesus Christ and the mission and ministry of the church and which includes the proclamation of the Word. The service of ordination or installation of a pastor or associate pastor teaching elder shall be conducted at a convenient time to enable the substantial participation of the presbytery.”

In response to Item 17-02, the 220th General Assembly (2012) approved the following alternate recommendation:

The 220th General Assembly (2012) directs the Stated Clerk to send the following proposed amendment to the presbyteries for their affirmative or negative vote:
Amend W-4.4002 as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

“The service of ordination and installation, or commissioning, may take place during the Service for the Lord’s Day as a response to the proclamation of the Word. (W-3.3503). Ordination and installation, or commissioning, may also take place in a special service that focuses upon Jesus Christ and the mission and ministry of the church and which includes the proclamation of the Word. The service of ordination or installation of a pastor or associate pastor teaching elder shall be conducted at a convenient time to enable the substantial participation of the presbytery.”

Rationale

The current wording of W-4.4002 does not clearly explain that the ordination service of a teaching elder (formerly “minister of Word and Sacrament”) should take place at a time that is convenient to enable the substantial participation of the presbytery. Sadly, this has sometimes resulted in these presbytery services occurring on Sunday mornings when pastors and elders from other churches cannot participate. The result is that what should be a presbytery worship service becomes a congregation’s worship service with only a handful from the presbytery present.

Ordination and installation services are celebrations that “focus upon Jesus Christ and the mission and ministry of the church.” Just as a baptism is not just for the person being baptized but is a visible sign of God’s grace for the whole Church, so also services of ordination and installation are not just for those being ordained or installed and their congregation; they are times to focus on our Lord, our shared ministry, and our mission for the benefit of the whole presbytery.

Similarly, a wedding is not only for the couple being married, but we pray, “Grant that all who have witnessed these vows today may find their lives strengthened, and that all who are married may depart with their own promises renewed” (Book of Common Worship, p. 771). Presbytery services of ordination and installation are times when those individuals who are already ordained can be strengthened in their continuing shared ministry as they are reminded of the promises that they made at their own ordination to follow our Lord and serve the church. They can also be inspiring times when people discern God is calling them to new ministry.

At the heart of the church (including its presbyteries) is worship whereby our bonds to God and to the people of God in community are strengthened. Many people who attend regular presbytery meetings often report back to their sessions that the presbytery worship service was “the best part,” “the most inspiring time,” “the most worthwhile part” of the whole meeting. When a presbytery worship service is scheduled at a time (Sunday morning) when many people cannot attend, the presbytery deprives these people of this unifying practice that can build up the presbytery as a part of the Body of Christ. While people can worship in their own churches, a presbytery worship service builds presbytery-wide community as people worship God together.

Presbyterians believe that all should be welcome in worship and that all parts of the Body of Christ are worthy of respect. A presbytery worship service on Sunday morning contradicts these foundational beliefs, for it welcomes only those who can leave their responsibilities in their own churches to attend such a service. The implied message to those who cannot attend is that their participation simply does not matter to the presbytery or the hosting congregation.

Pastors and elders need more opportunities to worship when they are not responsible for leading in worship in their own churches. Recent insights in spiritual formation and the care of/self-care for pastors have lifted up the importance of church leaders finding opportunities to worship when they have no responsibilities for the worship service so they can focus on worship alone. Presbytery worship services help nurture the spirits of the presbytery’s members when all have the opportunity to worship together.

Beyond the benefits to the presbytery and its members when all can attend presbytery worship services not on Sunday mornings, there are also benefits to those being ordained and installed as well as benefits for the congregation hosting the presbytery worship service. They have the opportunity to see more people from presbytery supporting them by their ability to be present in the service; for example, the tradition in many presbyteries of ministers wearing robes and red stoles and processing in together makes a very positive, powerful impression and lasting memory. The increased participation by presbytery members reminds all that the service is truly a presbytery worship service and it is the presbytery that has the authority to ordain and install. The teaching elder is a member of presbytery and the service of ordination and installation with a good participation by the presbytery members builds affirming ties; these ties will help the teaching elder in the years to come as he or she is encouraged to faithfully live out the ordination vow to participate in the governing bodies of the church (thus benefiting the teaching elder and the presbytery).

While there are numerous excellent reasons for having presbytery worship services of ordination and installation at times other than Sunday mornings for better participation by the presbytery, it is important to address the concerns that led some presbyteries to allow these services on Sunday mornings.

The poor participation of members of presbytery at special worship services of ordination and installation needs to be creatively changed. The best practices by those presbyteries who are successful in having good participation can be shared, through church-wide networks (meetings and email lists) for presbytery ministry committees (formerly “committee on ministry” and “committee on preparation for ministry”), executive presbyters, stated clerks, church administrators, moderators’ conference, music & worship conferences, seminaries, and the PC(USA) web site sections for Middle Governing Councils (formerly “Middle Governing Bodies”), Presbytery Ministry Committees, and Theology & Worship Office.

Some practices that have helped to encourage attendance have included careful planning that gets the date on calendars early so people have plenty of time to arrange their schedules to participate; lifting up the date in timely individual mailings (email, postal mail, social network notes, etc.) as well as in presbytery newsletters and meetings; presbytery ministry committees making personal calls to individual presbytery members to encourage their participation; presbytery ministry committee lifting up the importance of such participation in candidates’ preparation for ministry and in visits with pastors/session (formerly “triennial visits”); all presbytery leaders (not just those who have a role in the commission or service) leading by example in their own participation and encouragement of others; news releases about the service to the media (newspapers, local television, and radio); a joint choir for the service made up of many congregations’ choir members, and a special reception with refreshments after the service (some have made this a potluck with presbytery members bringing food items).

Some of the above ideas are also used to encourage members of the congregation to attend the special service. In addition, churches may use special inserts for worship bulletins/church newsletters, and slides or video for those who use projection in sanctuaries.

Congregations are enthusiastic about those that they have nurtured in the faith when they become teaching elders and installing those they have called to be pastors. Creative ways can be shared with congregations to help them recognize teaching elders in their Sunday morning worship services (after their ordination and/or installation). Churches can be offered sample prayers, special bulletin inserts (such as “How to Minister to Your Minister” which has been adapted by some from a Presbyterian Today article), and ideas about gifts related to the pastoral office.

As in any presbytery worship service, careful planning should be done in preparation for services of ordination and installation. Training for officiating at services of ordination and installation needs to be made available for presbytery moderators, showing best practices from other presbyteries. Clear guidelines should be given to those planning and participating in the service.

Such planning and the presbytery worship itself is a great deal of work, but it is among the most important work that can be done. In presbytery worship at its best, God is glorified, participants are inspired to faithful ministry, the community of the presbytery is built up, and people will desire to come to future services of ordination and installation.

ACC ADVICE ON ITEM 17-02

Advice on Item 17-02—From the Advisory Committee on the Constitution.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises the 220th General Assembly (2012) that Item 17-02 raises matters the assembly should consider.

Rationale

The overture proposes two changes in the text of W-4.4002, concerning the setting of services of ordination and/or installation. The effect of the first change is to limit the application of the first sentence to the ordination and installation of deacons, ruling elders, ruling elders commissioned to pastoral service, and other commissioned church workers. The effect of the second is to include in the final sentence the requirement that services of ordination (as well as those of installation) of teaching elders be conducted at convenient times to enable the substantial participation of the presbytery.

In its present form, W-4.4002 permits the setting of services of ordination and installation, as well as commissioning, as part of the Service for the Lord’s Day, but it also provides that they may also be part of a special service. This statement, in its present form, applies to the ordination and/or installation of all candidates for ordered ministry. The final sentence of the section is limited in scope to the ordination and/or installations of pastors or associate pastors, and requires that they be conducted at such times as may permit the substantial participation of the presbytery. The intent of the overture, as stated in the accompanying rationale, is to ensure that ordination and installation services of teaching elders are conducted at times that allow for greater presbytery participation.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises the assembly that the amended language of W-4.4002 does not substantially broaden the present wording of the paragraph. Differentiating between the commissioning of ruling elders to pastoral service and that of other church workers appears unnecessary; both are commissioning services, albeit to different service. Limiting the scope of the first sentence to deacons, ruling elders, ruling elders commissioned to pastoral service, and other commissioned servants, does not preclude the celebration of the ordination or installation of a teaching elder at a Service of the Lord’s Day. In both the present and the proposed amended versions, ordination and installation services of pastors and associate pastors are under the mandate of convenience to the participation of the presbytery.

The advisory committee notes, however, that the use of the term “teaching elder” in place of “pastors and associate pastors” in the final sentence does include within the reach of this provision services of ordination and/or installation of those teaching elders who serve in validated ministries other than installed pastoral relationships, such as the staff of higher councils. Whether the inclusion of these persons is significant enough reason to propose amendment to the Constitution, as opposed to entrusting the matter to the discretion of the presbytery itself, is a matter the assembly should consider in weighing the benefits of this overture. The advisory committee notes that many presbyteries have policies governing the scheduling of ordination and installation to permit maximum participation on the part of the presbytery. The assembly may wish to encourage the development of such policies as an alternative to amending W-4.4002.

If the 220th General Assembly (2012) agrees with the intent of Item 17-02, the Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises that this intent can better be accomplished with the following alternate language:

“The service of ordination and installation, or commissioning, may take place during the Service for the Lord’s Day as a response to the proclamation of the Word. (W-3.3503). Ordination and installation, or commissioning, may also take place in a special service that focuses upon Jesus Christ and the mission and ministry of the church and which includes the proclamation of the Word. The service of ordination or installation of a pastor or associate pastor teaching elder shall be conducted at a convenient time to enable the substantial participation of the presbytery.”

[The assembly approved Item 17-03 with amendment. See pp 12, 13.]

The Committee on Theological Education recommends that the 220th General Assembly (2012) approve the revised Covenant Between the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) and Auburn Theological Seminary below and to review this covenant before the 223rd General Assembly (2018).

A COVENANT BETWEEN THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY OF THE PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH (U.S.A.)
AND AUBURN THEOLOGICAL SEMINARY

I. Purpose

The purpose of this covenant is to define the nature and scope of the relationship mutually agreed to by Auburn Theological Seminary (hereinafter “Auburn”) and the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.).

II. Brief History and Current Mission of Auburn

Auburn Theological Seminary was founded in 1818 to educate Presbyterian ministers to serve the growing population of the American frontier in Central and Western New York. In later years, the seminary worked across denominational lines to prepare clergy for the American frontier and foreign missions. Auburn participated in the great social movements of the time: the struggles against slavery and for women’s suffrage, temperance and reforms that uplifted the poor. Auburn was one of the first theological schools in the country to educate women and to enroll students from Asia, and it was among the first to establish a summer session and a school of religious education.

Following its move to New York City and the campus of Union Theological Seminary in 1939, Auburn transformed itself into “a seminary without walls” that understands religious leadership and the pulpit in both traditional and innovative ways.

Today, Auburn Seminary equips bold and resilient leaders—religious and secular, women and men, adults and teens—with the tools and resources they need for our complex, multifaith world. We provide them with education, research, support, and media savvy, so that they can bridge religious divides, build community, pursue justice, and help heal the world. Based in New York City and reaching across the country and around the world, Auburn focuses on at least four key areas: education, research, movement-building, and media. In these four areas, Auburn conducts its own programs, research, and events. Auburn also works with a wide range of partner institutions and organizations: Presbyterian, ecumenical Christian, multifaith and beyond; seminaries, institutes, social action organizations, and media outlets. Auburn incubates and develops educational models to galvanize religious life and leadership. It identifies, analyzes, shapes, and responds to emerging trends that affect theological education, faith communities, and society at large. It convenes diverse people from around the country and world to understand themselves and each other better and to work together for justice.
Auburn organizes its work around the kind of leaders it seeks to develop: spiritually grounded, intellectually rigorous, pursuing justice, bridging divides, entrepreneurial, wise about money, courageous in the face of conflict, media savvy, and resilient.

Education

Auburn Seminary’s diverse array of theological education and leadership development programs equip people of all faiths to build dynamic communities of faith and reach across lines of religious difference to build a more just and peaceful world. Auburn offers programs for religious leaders from teens to adults. These programs are housed within the Center for Christian Leadership, the Center for Multifaith Education, and Auburn Media.

Research

Through the work of the Center for the Study of Theological Education (CSTE), Auburn Seminary has become the pioneer in theological research. The CSTE offers research and consulting services to strengthen institutions that educate religious leaders. The Center studies a wide range of topics, including students, faculty, finances, administrative leadership, educational programs, and the public role of theological schools. Using the Center’s extensive database, consultants from the Center help schools evaluate programs, balance budgets, plan strategy, forge partnerships with other institutions, organize searches, and support seminary leadership, especially new presidents.

Movement Building

Auburn Seminary’s work in movement-building is housed within Groundswell, the social action initiative of Auburn Seminary. Groundswell seeks to unite people of faith and moral calling in a movement for justice that transcends partisan politics. Groundswell has led campaigns calling for people across the United States to stand together against anti-Muslim bigotry on the 10-year anniversary of 9/11 and beyond; for the eradication of sex trafficking of children and minors in the United States; and is beginning campaigns for LGBT equality and a moral economy.

Media

Auburn Media is an innovative program and platform that operates at the junction of religion and mainstream media. The program trains religious leaders, more than 2,000 to date, to communicate effectively through media channels, platforming the strongest voices to provide a faith perspective on critical justice issues. It also acts as a resource to connect journalists to engaging and responsible faith voices across the United States.

III. Brief History of Auburn’s Relationship to the General Assembly

In 1818, the Synod of Geneva, comprised of the presbyteries of Geneva, Cayuga, and Onondaga, presented an overture to the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in the United States of America “requesting the advice of the General Assembly relative to the establishment of an academical and theological seminary, which the synod proposes instituting within their bounds … ” (Minutes, Presbyterian Church in the United States of America, 1818, Part I, p. 25; or The Presbyterian Constitution and Digest, p. 1865). Andover and Princeton were unable to supply sufficient ministers to the rapidly developing “northwest,” which was experiencing a flood of immigration, and the synod deeply felt the urgency of establishing such an institution.

The General Assembly responded to this overture as follows:

Resolved, That the Assembly are not prepared at present to give an opinion or advice on the subject of the overture from the Synod of Geneva, which contemplates the establishment of an academical and theological seminary, which the synod proposes instituting within their bounds. (Minutes, Presbyterian Church in the United States of America 1818, pp. 25–26; or The Presbyterian Constitution and Digest, p. 1865)

The Assembly’s response no doubt reflected its preoccupation with the support and development of the seminary at Princeton, which it had founded in 1812. Having heard this response, the Synod of Geneva, during a special session at Auburn, N.Y., on Aug. 6, 1818, voted to found a seminary “for the purpose of completing the education of pious young men for the gospel ministry.” The synod then petitioned the legislature of the state of New York for appropriate action, which it took on April 14, 1820, when it chartered “the Presbyterian Theological Seminary” at Auburn.

In the controversies over doctrine, polity and mission that soon developed in the Presbyterian Church, Auburn stood firmly with the New School camp. A convention of New School representatives met at Auburn in mid-August 1837. Among other documents, it produced the “Auburn Declaration,” which Robert Hastings Nichols called “the most important official or semi-official doctrinal formulation of the Presbyterian Church since the Adopting Act {of 1729}.”

In 1870, all the other seminaries in the northern United States that were founded under local auspices agreed to shift their relationship to the General Assembly, giving the assembly veto power over faculty appointments. Auburn decided not to enter into this relationship, believing that its presbytery-elected board already maintained sufficient connection to the church, and after about 40 years of attempts on the assembly’s part to change the board’s decision, the matter seemed to have been dropped.

In 1916, the Auburn board declared the “unbroken friendship” between the seminary and the assembly. The board further declared Auburn’s “organic connection with the presbyteries in Central and Western New York, maintained now as from the first; which through these ninety-eight years of history, the Seminary has sought to serve with all fidelity; and which it intends to serve in coming years with fullest service and devotion.”

In 1924, the Reverend Henry Sloane Coffin and various Auburn faculty spearheaded the drafting of the Auburn Affirmation, a plea for theological tolerance in the midst of the fundamentalist-modernist controversies.

Throughout all these years, Auburn’s annual report to the General Assembly was regularly received and included in the Minutes.

In 1939, Auburn took up residence on the New York City campus of Union Theological Seminary (hereinafter “Union”). Auburn retained its endowment and form of governance. The proposed agreement between Auburn and Union was included in the Minutes of the 1939 General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in the United States of America. One of its provisions assured that the agreement:

shall not alter or modify Auburn’s relationship with the presbyteries which elect members of its Board of Directors, nor with the Presbyterian Church in the United States of America, nor the General Assembly thereof; and Auburn hereby reaffirms its loyalty to, and present relationship with, such presbyteries, Presbyterian Church in the United States of America, and the General Assembly thereof. (Minutes, PC[USA], 1939, Part I, p. 256)

Auburn’s relocation to New York City caused a temporary chill between the General Assembly and the seminary. Auburn’s annual report did not appear in the Minutes beginning in 1940. Reporting resumed in 1947, however, and continued into the early 1980s.

Today, Auburn continues to be an independent theological institution chartered in the state of New York. While Auburn leases space from Union, it has never merged with Union. While Auburn does not currently grant degrees, it retains its authority to do so. Since 1980, Auburn has been an active participant, as a corresponding member, in the Committee on Theological Education and its predecessor. At the time of reunion in 1983, Auburn asked the Special Committee on Theological Institutions to clarify Auburn’s status as a Presbyterian theological institution. That committee, appointed under the Articles of Agreement to propose a governance and funding arrangement for the 11 institutions listed in the Articles (which did not include Auburn), handed questions about Auburn to the Committee on Theological Education, which included this issue in the mandate of the Special Committee to Study Theological Institutions (SCSTI), appointed in 1988. SCSTI recommended and the General Assembly concurred that the COTE should investigate the feasibility and desirability of a covenant relationship between Auburn and the General Assembly.

In its report, approved by the General Assembly in 1993, the Special Committee to Study Theological Institutions recommended that Auburn Theological Seminary relate to the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) through the Committee on Theological Education. The special committee judged that existing categories of membership on the Committee on Theological Education did not adequately serve in respect to Auburn Theological Seminary. Accordingly, the special committee recommended the adoption of a unique agreement between the General Assembly and Auburn. The Committee on Theological Education concurred with the recommendation and developed a covenant agreement with the board of Auburn Theological Seminary was approved by the General Assembly in 1996. The original covenant between the General Assembly and Auburn expired on December 31, 2001. The covenant was renewed in 2001 and 2006; the current covenant expires on December 31, 2012.

IV. Parties to the Covenant

The parties to this covenant, Auburn Theological Seminary, governed by its board of directors, and the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), operating as a [governing body] [council], are distinct entities. They are independent, neither being controlled by the other.

V. Partnership Agreements Under the Covenant

A. Auburn affirms its commitment in the following areas:

1. Educational Programs and Research
   a. Auburn’s mission is to equip bold and resilient leaders who can bridge religious divides, build community, pursue justice and heal the world. It does so through its programmatic emphases on Christian leadership, multifaith education, religion and media, and through its research center on theological education. In all these arenas, relationships with Presbyterian congregations, presbyteries and other governing bodies will continue to be a priority for Auburn, which also has strong ecumenical and multifaith commitments.
b. Auburn will continue to provide an array of innovative theological education for ordained and lay leadership in a variety of configurations and locations, working with individuals, congregations, networks, and governing bodies, with special attention given to Presbyterian leaders, congregations, and councils.

c. Auburn will continue to conduct research on theological education through its Center for the Study of Theological Education. The Center is the foremost educational research center with a major focus on theological education. It provides research and reports that benefit a wide spectrum of schools and faith traditions. Auburn will continue to make research findings available to the Committee on Theological Education, other interested Presbyterian Church agencies, and Presbyterian theological institutions, as appropriate.

d. Auburn will continue to provide resources for Presbyterian students enrolled for degrees at Union Theological Seminary in New York and at New York Theological Seminary. These provisions include: qualified instructors for courses in the polity, worship, and confessions of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.); a program of counseling, informal denominational instruction, and fellowship for these students; and assistance in matters related to candidacy and placement. Auburn will provide a letter to the Committee on Theological Education in January 2016 to report an update on its relationship with these and any other theological schools.

e. Auburn will continue to administer the Presbyteries’ Cooperative Examinations, designating a proctor as appropriate.

2. Denominational Cooperation

a. Auburn will continue to participate in cooperative ventures undertaken by other Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) institutions. As is the case with the other institutions, this cooperation is voluntary.

b. The seminary will submit reports to the Committee on Theological Education (or its successor), for informational purposes only. Such reports shall ordinarily include information about finances, program and mission, student enrollment and graduates, changes in the charter and bylaws, appointments to the staff, elections to the board of directors, and a brief narrative account of activities.

c. Auburn and its staff will maintain an active presence in PC(USA) meetings, events, councils, and networks, particularly those related to its areas of expertise (e.g., leadership development, media issues, interreligious concerns, movement-building, theological education).

d. The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), from time to time, turns to its related theological institutions as an educational and theological resource for various purposes. Auburn will offer such resources when feasible and fitting.

e. Auburn recognizes the importance of the Theological Education Fund for support of the preparation of ministerial leadership. Therefore, Auburn will encourage support for the Theological Education Fund from PC(USA) congregations. Auburn may seek funding from the Theological Education Fund, as well as from other Presbyterian sources.

B. The General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) recognizes that Auburn has, throughout its history, been a significant partner in the education of the ministers of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). Today Auburn continues to play a critical role in the PC(USA) through vital enterprises for the benefit of the church in the world. Therefore, the PC(USA) affirms its commitment to this covenant in the following ways:

1. Membership on the Committee on Theological Education (or its successor)

This covenant relationship with Auburn will give to that institution voice and vote on the Committee on Theological Education (or its successor). Travel and lodging expenses associated with attendance of Auburn’s representative at meetings of the Committee on Theological Education (or its successor) shall be reimbursed by the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) in accordance with its reimbursement policies.

2. Public Identification of Auburn

Auburn will be publicly identified, in relevant announcements of the Committee on Theological Education and other entities that refer to theological institutions related to the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), as a “theological institution related by covenant to the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.).” For PC(USA) financial aid for studies purposes, Auburn will be understood as a Presbyterian-related seminary.

3. Representation of Auburn in Presbyterian Church Life

Presbyterian students whom Auburn Seminary enrolls in its Presbyterian Student Program will be represented at meetings of the General Assembly on an occasional basis as specified in the Standing Rules of the General Assembly. Auburn will be represented at occasional Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) gatherings on the same basis as other institutions that are in a covenant relationship with the General Assembly. The General Assembly and its entities will welcome and encourage Auburn’s participation and service in the range of Presbyterian events and networks that take place throughout the denomination.

4. Auburn’s Autonomy

Notwithstanding any other provision of this Covenant, the General Assembly acknowledges and agrees that the board of directors of Auburn is elected in accordance with its charter from the state of New York. Also notwithstanding any other provision of this covenant, the General Assembly acknowledges and agrees that, in the event of the dissolution or winding up of the affairs of Auburn or any of its successors, or the insolvency or bankruptcy of Auburn or any of its successors, or any merger, consolidation or other change in the legal structure or status of Auburn or any of its successors, none of the rights, privileges, powers, purposes, or property, and none of the liabilities, of Auburn or any of its successors shall be distributed to, assigned to, or otherwise revert to or be appropriated by the General Assembly or the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) or any successor of either or both. All such rights, privileges, powers, purposes and property, and all such liabilities, shall be disposed of or transferred as the board of directors of Auburn or any of its successors shall determine in its sole discretion, in accordance with the laws of the United States and the state of New York.

VI. Amendment

Changes in the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) or in the circumstances of Auburn may affect portions of this covenant. Either party to this covenant—Auburn and the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) as represented by the Committee on Theological Education—or their successor entities may request revision of parts or all of this covenant during the term of this agreement. Amendment to this covenant may be executed by mutual agreement of the board of directors of Auburn and the General Assembly.

VII. Term

The term of this covenant shall commence when formally approved and signed by the designated parties and shall expire on December 31, 2022. The covenant may be renewed by mutual consent.

VIII. Formal Approval

This covenant shall be effective upon formal approval by the board of directors of Auburn and by the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) and when signed by the moderator and the stated clerk of the General Assembly for the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) and by the president and the chair of the board of directors for the seminary.

Endnotes

Rationale

The content of the proposed covenant with Auburn Theological Seminary remains largely the same as the covenant approved in 1996 by the General Assembly and reaffirmed in 2001 and 2006. However the document structure of the proposed covenant is reordered, a few partnership agreements highlighted below would change, and the term of the covenant would be extended from six to 10 years. The current covenant expires on December 31, 2012, and this is the fourth time the General Assembly of the PC(USA) will consider renewing a covenant agreement with Auburn. While the covenant is between Auburn and the PC(USA) and not with the Committee on Theological Education, some of the changes in the proposed covenant have a direct bearing upon Auburn’s relationship to the COTE. Those changes have been approved by COTE as it forwards this revised covenant to the 220th General Assembly that has:

1. A new document structure: It now begins with a brief history of the school and focuses on its current mission to equip “bold and resilient leaders … with the tools and resources they need for our complex, multi-faith world” through “at least four key areas: education, research, movement-building and media.” [Proposed covenant, Sections I. and II.]

2. An updated description of Auburn’s expanded and expanding mission: Auburn agrees to prioritize relationships and service to Presbyterian organizations in addition to PC(USA) seminaries. Similarly, will continue to provide resources for Presbyterian students at Union Theological Seminary, but also promise to serve schools they already have been serving, including New York Theological Seminary. Notable here is a provision added that Auburn will send a letter to the COTE in January of 2016 as “an update on its relationship with these and any other theological schools.” The COTE would have time to revisit this covenant, if need be, in preparation for the 222nd General Assembly (2016). [Proposed covenant, Section VII.A.]

3. A provision that Auburn “may seek funding from the Theological Education Fund’’ (TEF): The language of “funding” is specific here. The percentage of the TEF allocation going to PC(USA) seminaries is 97.5 percent. A small cooperative grant fund of 2.5 percent of the allocation is the funding this covenant is describing.

4. A provision that Auburn be given voice and vote on the COTE: Auburn has had a corresponding member status that includes only a voice on the COTE. This would mirror the privileges of the only other covenant member of the COTE, the Evangelical Seminary of Puerto Rico. [Proposed covenant, Section VII.B.1.]

5. Extended term length: The COTE affirms this renewal process; but given the long relationship, multiple renewals of covenants with Auburn and outstanding service, Auburn believes ten years is a more appropriate term. This would save on costs of time, energy, and funds as well. As noted above, the COTE will check in with Auburn about halfway into this covenant period. [Proposed covenant, Section VIII.]

Members of the COTE elected task force to review the former covenants with the Auburn Theological Seminary include: Chandler Stokes (convener), K. Nicholas Yoda, and Iain Torrance. The task force worked closely with the following leaders at Auburn: Katharine Rhodes Henderson, president; J. C Austin, director of the Center for Christian Leadership; and Mark Hostetter, chair of the board of directors. In addition, the task force was staffed by Lee Hinson-Hasty of the Office of Theological Education.

The Committee on Theological Education’s Auburn-PC(USA) Covenant Renewal Task Force met with leaders of Auburn in New York, N.Y., Jan. 25–26, 2012. The meeting was the culmination of several months’ planning for the renewal of the covenant relationship.

The task force reviewed and discussed the covenant as it currently stands a number of times. The task force invited representatives from Auburn to share their expectations, to state their priorities, and to describe the mission and vision of Auburn with the task force. From those conversations, Auburn redrafted the covenant at least twice.

The current version was approved by the trustees of Auburn in February 2012 and by the COTE Executive Committee on behalf of the COTE in March 2012.

Item 17-04

[The assembly approved Item 17-04. See pp. 12, 13.]

The Committee on Theological Education recommends that the 220th General Assembly (2012) approve the new trustees elected by Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) theological institutions in 2010–2011:

1. Austin Presbyterian Theological Seminary: Claudia D. Carroll, Consuelo Donahue, Jackson Farrow Jr., G. Archer Frierson II, Roy Kim, James H. Lee, David Peeples, Cynthia Rigby, James C. Shaw, Lita Simpson, Carlton D. Wilde Jr.

2. Columbia Theological Seminary: Laura Cunningham, Pam Driesell, Lucie B. Eggleston, Andrew Kintz, Jan Swetenburg, Thomas W. Walker, Valarie Wilson.

3. University of Dubuque Theological Seminary: Jeffery Keith, Ozell Hudson, Scott Tayler.

Rationale

“A Plan for the Governance and Funding of the Theological Institutions of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.),” approved by the 198th General Assembly (1986), requires the COTE to present presidents and trustees of PC(USA)-related seminaries to the General Assembly for approval. A list of the entire board of trustees of each of the ten seminaries as well as biographical information about trustees to be approved will be made available by the COTE for review by the appropriate committee during the 220th General Assembly (2012). Similar information will also be made available about those currently serving on the boards of Auburn Theological Seminary and the Evangelical Seminary of Puerto Rico, which are related to the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) through covenant agreements.

In addition, and as required by vote of the 209th General Assembly (1997), the following information is offered in regard to racial ethnic, gender, and clergy / lay representation on the various seminary boards.

The assembly approved Item 17-05. See p. 12, 13.

The Committee on Theological Education recommends that the 220th General Assembly (2012) grant permission to the following theological institutions to celebrate the Sacrament of the Lord’s Supper in 2013–2014: Austin Presbyterian Theological Seminary, Columbia Theological Seminary, University of Dubuque Theological Seminary, Louisville Presbyterian Theological Seminary, McCormick Theological Seminary, Pittsburgh Theological Seminary, Princeton Theological Seminary, San Francisco Theological Seminary, Johnson C. Smith Theological Seminary in cooperation with the Interdenominational Theological Center and Union Presbyterian Seminary.

Rationale

Beginning in 1989, the General Assembly became the governing body that grants permission to celebrate the Sacrament of the Lord’s Supper at Presbyterian theological institutions. The 219th General Assembly (2010) granted permission for celebrations in 2011–2012.

The assembly approved Item 17-06. See pp. 12–13, 14.

The Committee on Theological Education recommends that the 220th General Assembly (2012) do the following:

1. Approve Frank Yamada as president of McCormick Theological Seminary and James McDonald as president of San Francisco Theological Seminary.

2. Docket time in the plenary session for their brief remarks.

Rationale

General Assembly approval of Dr. Yamada’s appointment as president of McCormick Theological Seminary and Dr. McDonald’s appointment as president of San Francisco Theological Seminary is required by “A Plan for the Governance and Funding of the Theological Institutions of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.),” approved by the 198th General Assembly (1986) and by the seminaries’ current bylaws.

The Reverend Dr. Frank M. Yamada is the president and Cyrus McCormick Professor of Bible and Culture at McCormick Theological Seminary. He is the first Asian American to serve as president of a Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) seminary. Prior to becoming president, Dr. Yamada was the director of the Center for Asian American Ministries and associate professor of Hebrew Bible at McCormick. He also taught Hebrew Bible for nine years at Seabury-Western Theological Seminary in Evanston, Illinois. Dr. Yamada is author of Configurations of Rape in the Hebrew Bible: A Literary Analysis of Three Rape Narratives (Peter Lang) and an editor for and contributor to The Peoples’ Companion to the Bible and The Peoples’ Bible, a cross-cultural study Bible (Augsburg Fortress Press). Dr. Yamada is a minister of the Word and Sacrament in the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.).

The Reverend Dr. James McDonald was appointed the 11th president of San Francisco Theological Seminary in 2011. Since 1998, he began serving in various roles at Bread for the World, a faith-based advocacy organization in Washington, D.C.; including most recently, he served as acting president and managing director. Dr. McDonald holds degrees from Princeton University, Union Theological Seminary (in New York), and American University, where he completed his Ph.D. in 1998. Jim previously served as associate pastor at First Presbyterian Church, Bloomington, Indiana; pastor at Tabernacle United Church in Philadelphia; and director of the Humphrey Fellowship Program at American University.

[The assembly approved Item 17-07. See pp. 12, 14.]

The General Assembly Mission Council recommends that the 220th General Assembly (2012) approve the following nominees to the Mountain Retreat Association, Inc.'s Board of Directors:

Class of 2014: Heath Rada—General Assembly Mission Council
Class of 2015: Dean Thompson—General Assembly Mission Council

[The assembly approved Item 17-08 with comment. See pp. 12, 14.]

The General Assembly Mission Council recommends that the 220th General Assembly (2012) do the following:

1. Approve the following list of colleges and universities as those related to the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.):

   Agnes Scott College, Decatur, Ga.; Alma College, Alma, Mich.; Arcadia University, Glenside, Pa.; Austin College, Sherman, Tex.; Barber-Scotia College, Concord, N.C.; Belhaven University, Jackson, Miss.; Blackburn College, Carlinville, Ill.; Bloomfield College, Bloomfield, N.J.; Buena Vista University, Storm Lake, Iowa; Carroll University, Waukesha, Wisc.; Centre College, Danville, Ky.; Coe College, Cedar Rapids, Iowa; The College of Idaho, Caldwell, Idaho; College of the Ozarks, Point Lookout, Mo.; The College of Wooster, Wooster, Ohio; Cook Native American Ministries, Tempe, Ariz.; Davidson College, Davidson, N.C.; Davis & Elkins College, Elkins, W.V.; Eckerd College, St. Petersburg, Fla.; Grove City College, Grove City, Pa.; Hampden-Sydney College, Hampden-Sydney, Va.; Hanover College, Hanover, Ind.; Hastings College, Hastings, Nebr.; Illinois College, Jacksonville, Ill.; Jamestown College, Jamestown, N.Dak.; Johnson C. Smith University, Charlotte, N.C.;

   King College, Bristol, Tenn.; Knoxvillle College, Knoxville, Tenn.; Lafayette College, Easton, Pa.; Lake Forest College, Lake Forest, Ill.; Lees-McRae College, Banner Elk, N.C.; Lindenwood University, St. Charles, Mo.; Lyon College, Batesville, Ark.; Macalester College, St. Paul, Minn.; Mary Baldwin College, Staunton, Va.; Maryville College, Maryville, Tenn.; Millikin University, Decatur, Ill.; Missouri Valley College, Marshall, Mo.; Monmouth College, Monmouth, Ill.; Montreat College, Montreat, N.C.; Muskingum University, New Concord, Ohio; Presbyterian College, Clinton, S.C.; Queens University of Charlotte, Charlotte, N.C.; Rhodes College, Memphis, Tenn.; Rocky Mountain College, Billings, Mont.; St. Andrews University, Laurinburg, N.C.; Schreiner University, Kerrville, Tex.;

2. Approval the following list of secondary schools as those related to the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.):

   Bachman Academy, McDonald, Tenn.; Blair Academy, Blairstown, N.J.; Chamberlain-Hunt Academy, Port Gibson, Miss.; French Camp Academy, French Camp, Miss.; Goodland Academy, Hugo, Okla.; Menaul School, Albuquerque, N.M.; Presbyterian Pan-American School, Kingsville, Tex.; Rabun Gap-Nacoochee School, Rabun Gap, Ga.; Wasatch Academy, Mt Pleasant, Utah.

[Comment: Just as we attempt to be clear on the nature and scope of our church's relationship with seminaries and covenant partner schools, it is important that we attempt to be similarly clear on the nature and scope of our church's relationship with Presbyterian affiliated colleges, universities, and secondary schools. We would, therefore, request the General Assembly Mission Council, in consultation with the Association of Presbyterian Colleges and Universities, to consider developing a more precise and succinct definition of exactly what it means to be considered “Presbyterian affiliated.”]
Rationale

It has been customary for the General Assembly annually to recognize and approve a list of institutions related to the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) through history, tradition, and covenants with governing bodies, and various relationships of program and financial support.

[The assembly received Item 17-A. See pp. 11, 14.]

The Committee on Theological Education recommends that the 220th General Assembly (2012) recognize the outstanding lifetime contributions of the Reverend Dr. John B. Trotti, professor emeritus of bibliography of Union Presbyterian Seminary, to theological education in and for the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) with the Award for Excellence in Theological Education.

Rationale

The Award for Excellence in Theological Education was established by the Committee on Theological Education in 1996 to “honor a person biennially who has made an outstanding lifetime contribution to theological education in and for the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.).” The award is normally presented during the meeting of the General Assembly. The COTE has selected John B. Trotti, professor emeritus of bibliography at Union Presbyterian Seminary, to be recognized in 2012. Trotti served on the faculty of Union Presbyterian Seminary from 1968 to 2002. A pioneer at sharing theological resources with institutions for theological education around the world for more than twenty-nine years, Trotti organized the contribution of more than 135,000 volumes (books and periodicals) to the libraries of 103 theological seminaries in 49 countries. His example sparked the creation of an American Theological Book Redistribution Project whereby American Theological Library Association (ATLA) libraries share their excess resources with their international counterparts through the Theological Book Network. A graduate of Davidson College, Trotti received his B.D. from Union Theological Seminary, his master’s in library science from the University of North Carolina, and his doctorate in Old Testament from Yale University. He has taught Old Testament or religion and literature at Union, Yale, and Randolph-Macon Women’s College (now Randolph College). Ordained as a minister of the Word and Sacrament in the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), Trotti served as pastor of the Altavista Presbyterian Church in Altavista, Virginia, for four years before accepting a call to Union and is an honorably retired member of the Presbytery of the Peaks. Trotti has served as a board member of the American Theological Library Association (president in 1977–1978, vice president in 1976–1977), the Presbyterian Library Association (president, 1973–1974), the Baptist Theological Seminary at Richmond (1989–1997), Historical Foundations of Presbyterian and Reformed Churches (1979–1986), and Stillman College (1969–1978). In addition, he has taught adult Sunday school classes at First Presbyterian Church in Richmond, Virginia, since the 1970s. Two seminary presidents, five seminary librarians, his current pastor, and the executive director of the American Theological Library Association wrote letters supporting his nomination for this award. The nomination was affirmed unanimously by the Committee on Theological Education on September 15, 2011.

[The assembly approved Item 17-C. See p. 13, 14.]

The Committee on Theological Education recommends that the 220th General Assembly (2012) docket time in plenary session to celebrate the bicentennial celebrations of Union Presbyterian Seminary and Princeton Theological Seminary.

Rationale

In 1811 the General Assembly approved the plan for a theological seminary “… to unite that piety of the heart with solid learning, believing that religion without learning or learning without religion in the ministers of the gospel, must ultimately prove injurious to the church” (General Assembly Minutes of the Presbyterian Church in the United States of America, 1811). That plan created the first Presbyterian seminary in America, Princeton Theological Seminary.

One year later, in 1812, the first Presbyterian seminary in the South was established in Farmville, Virginia, as the Theology Department of Hampden-Sydney College. It became independent of the college in 1822. After the synods of Virginia and North Carolina assumed joint ownership in 1827, it was called Union Theological Seminary. In 1898 the seminary moved to Richmond, Virginia, and now also has a campus in Charlotte, North Carolina.

In agreement with the bicentennial committees and boards of trustees of Princeton Theological and Union Presbyterian Seminaries, the COTE took action on September 15, 2010, to respectfully request time on the docket of the 220th General Assembly (2012) to give thanks for 200 years of support for theological education service to the church, and to celebrate with commissioners and colleagues the gifts of two centuries of theological education in each of these institutions.

Committee on Theological Education Agency Summary

I. Overview

A. Assigned Responsibilities

The Committee on Theological Education (COTE) has the responsibility for developing and maintaining a comprehensive plan for theological education from the perspective of the whole church. The committee seeks to identify, develop, and propose strategies for a denomination-wide approach to theological education. The committee serves as an advocate for theological education, seeking to support the seminaries and to strengthen them for their mission in the world. The Committee on Theological Education can be seen as a two-way communication link between the denomination and its graduate theological institutions. Voting members of the committee include thirteen people elected to represent the church at large and a representative from each of the ten seminaries related directly to the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). Corresponding members of the COTE include: representatives from Auburn Theological Seminary and from the Evangelical Seminary of Puerto Rico (both institutions related to the General Assembly through covenant agreements negotiated every six years), a representative of the Omaha Presbyterian Seminary Foundation, and representatives of two non-Presbyterian seminaries invited by the committee.

B. Accomplishments

The 219th General Assembly (2010) reviewed the COTE, “commend[ed] the recent reorientation of the agenda of the COTE toward various emerging themes,” urged it to “continue the important conversation begun in the Raising Leaders document, particularly in the areas of exploring the changing leadership needs of the Presbyterian churches” and “encouraged COTE to continue to explore opportunities to develop additional funding, particularly in support of students and reducing the indebtedness of beginning clergy” (Minutes, 2010, Part I, p. 1251). Under the leadership over the last two years of Theodore J. Wardlaw, chair of the COTE and president of Austin Presbyterian Theological Seminary, and Kathy Wolf Reed, vice chair of the COTE and associate pastor for youth and campus at First Presbyterian Church in Tuscaloosa, Alabama, the COTE fulfilled its General Assembly assigned functions by working collaboratively on initiatives and projects facilitated by generative conversation time in the 219th General Assembly (2010) affirmed directions outlined above and described below. Committee meetings were held on the campuses of McCormick, Austin Presbyterian, and Pittsburgh Theological seminaries, where the COTE learned firsthand about the ministry and mission of each institution.

1. Cooperative and Collaborative Initiatives

   a. COTE Leadership Initiative

   In September of 2010, the COTE created a COTE Leadership Initiative, along with a task force chaired by Cynthia M. Campbell, president emerita of McCormick Theological Seminary and interim pastor of Highland Presbyterian Church in Louisville, Kentucky. More than a dozen partners from four of the six General Assembly agencies, as well as mid council, congregational, and foundation leaders, plus the COTE institutional and elected members, have been meeting since March of 2010 to address “support of students and reducing the indebtedness of beginning clergy” (Minutes, 2010, Part I, p. 1251). They have assisted the COTE in sending a communication to the larger church (Pentecost 2011) affirming how many congregations and presbyteries have the capacity to support ministry residencies, new ministry ideas, and joint ventures. The task force also is inviting the Board of Pensions into a conversation regarding possible alternatives to meet pension dues for new and innovative ministries. Continuing previous efforts, the task force is exploring the ordination process, seedling ideas to spur responses to issues around first call and leadership in the church, and devising solutions to make first call pastorates more affordable. The task force is now, therefore, seeking to partner with agencies and other entities of the PC(USA) to mobilize the talents of a new generation of pastoral leaders to meet mission needs.

   b. COTE Research and Development

   In an effort to continue to “reorient … the agenda of the COTE toward various emerging themes” (Minutes, 2010, Part I, p. 1251), the COTE formed a Research and Development Task Force that serves as a strategic planning group for the committee. After reviewing research done for the COTE review in 2010 as well as data from the Association of Theological Schools (ATS) and other relevant sources, this group of COTE members, an academic dean, and an ATS official are considering organizing Theological Education Symposia in 2012.
c. Other Representative Cooperative Projects

Through Theological Education Fund special project funds, the COTE sponsored grant requests for the work of the COTE Leadership Initiative and Research and Development task forces and for continuing an Online Supervised Ministry Project. This project of the Presbyterian and Reformed Theological Field Educators Caucus (PRTFE) seeks to improve online supervisor training for seminary students that may be used by all the participating schools. Susan Fox at Union Presbyterian Seminary directs this project. The COTE also referred partnership opportunities with the Young Adult Volunteer program of the General Assembly Mission Council’s Presbyterian World Mission and the Presbyterian Church Camp and Conference Association to PRTFE.

2. Funding for Seminaries Related to the PC(USA)

Raising money for the Theological Education Fund (1% Plan), which is the sole source of denomination-wide support for the ten PC(USA) seminaries and the Evangelical Seminary of Puerto Rico, has been reaffirmed as a priority task for the COTE and the Office of Theological Education. The Theological Education Fund (TEF) was established by the 198th General Assembly (1986). Throughout the twenty-three years of the TEF’s operational life, more than $50 million has been contributed by more than half of the PC(USA) congregations contributing at some time during this history. In 2010, more than 1,500 PC(USA) congregations and middle governing bodies made voluntary contributions to the Theological Education Fund. As a result, $1,350,000 in TEF monies were distributed to eligible schools in 2011, according to a formula developed and monitored by the COTE Institutional Review Subcommittee on which only elected members not representing seminaries sit. In 2011, about 1,450 of PC(USA) congregations and middle governing bodies contributed, and $1,066,432 will be sent to support PC(USA) schools in 2012. While the number of contributing churches declined, the COTE celebrates that 83 congregations have given consecutively for all 23 years, totaling more than $3.6 million and in 2011, 63 congregations contributed for the first time. The TEF helps underwrite quality theological education at PC(USA) seminaries to provide for the leadership of the wider church.

A Seminary Support Network includes more than 130 enthusiastic volunteers and representatives from presbyteries and synods who advocate on behalf of the seminaries with passion for the message “Seminaries and Churches Together—For Generations to Come.” Participation at annual network training conferences continues to grow. Fifteen network synod-level representatives continue to work on a contract basis to make possible improved regional coordination for the Seminary Support Network. Pastors, clerks of sessions, presbytery resource centers, and designated contact persons in PC(USA) congregations receive interpretive materials about our seminaries and requests for support of the Theological Education Fund. Some of the new resources include an e-newsletter focusing on the mission and impact our seminaries are engaging to transform lives, and a joint viewbook that presents an overview of all PC(USA) seminaries. One student representative from each of the twelve PC(USA)-affiliated seminaries also serves on the Seminary Support Network. The COTE is excited about the energy and future direction of this ministry. By action taken September 15, 2011, by the COTE, contributions to the TEF may be invested with the Presbyterian Investment and Loan Program, Inc. (PILP), to help grow ministries of congregations before being distributed to PC(USA) seminaries.

In cooperation with the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) Foundation, active promotion of the Theological Schools Endowment Fund has continued to grow at a modest pace. The Theological Schools Endowment Fund provides an opportunity for individuals to contribute monies to benefit PC(USA) seminaries through gifts and bequests. The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) Foundation manages this fund.

3. Charter Changes in Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) Theological Institutions

One of the governance functions assigned to the COTE by the Report of the Special Committee on Theological Institutions approved by the 198th General Assembly (1986) is the reporting of charter changes by the individual schools to the General Assembly. Two seminaries reported changes in their charters or other constitutional documents since the 219th General Assembly (2010).

a. Louisville Presbyterian Theological Seminary

See Appendix A, new charter of LPTS at the end of this COTE report.

b. Princeton Theological Seminary

Princeton Theological Seminary reported the following change to its charter:

“ARTICLE VII. There shall be a Board of Trustees (“Board”) ordinarily consisting of between thirty (30) and forty (40) persons, with the actual number serving at any particular time to be determined by the Board. All members of the Board shall be members of Christian churches. Approximately one-half of the trustees shall be ordained ministers and approximately one-half shall be communicant (lay) members of a Christian church. All but a maximum of five (5) of those members shall be members of a Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) congregation or ministers of Word and Sacrament of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). Normally, any trustees who are ordained ministers and not members of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) shall be graduates of the Seminary. The officers of the Board shall be a chair, a vice chair, a secretary, and such others as the Board may from time to time determine, each of whom shall be a minister or an elder of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). The number, names and addresses of the Trustees constituting the current Board are as set forth on Schedule A, attached hereto.”

4. Reports from Individual Institutions

The Committee on Theological Education brings to the assembly a narrative report from each of the ten seminaries related to the PC(USA), Auburn Theological Seminary, the Evangelical Seminary of Puerto Rico, and the Omaha Presbyterian Seminary Foundation.

a. Austin Presbyterian Theological Seminary

Since the 219th General Assembly (2010), Austin Seminary has welcomed a new dean, Dr. Allan H. Cole Jr., who is leading the development of new degree programs that will be more responsive to the changing needs of the church. We have also begun the quiet phase of a $44 million comprehensive campaign. The seminary welcomed two new Old Testament professors, Dr. Suzie Park and Dr. Gregory Cuéllar, and created the Education Beyond the Walls department, the outward-looking face of Austin Seminary, to provide expansive theological education for clergy, church leaders, congregations, and communities through workshops and educational experiences. We are also welcoming the AYAVA House, an intentional community for young adults engaged in a year of service, which was made possible through a grant from the Cousins Family Foundation.

b. Columbia Theological Seminary

The ninety-seven members of the Class of 2011 received their degrees and departed to serve Christ’s church shortly after construction began on the Vernon S. Broyles Jr. Leadership Center. The 30,000-square-foot facility includes classrooms, offices, an education technology center, and bookstore. The $11.6 million project was funded by gifts to a successful $60 million campaign concluded in December 2011. In addition to the leadership center and a new residence hall, campaign gifts support student scholarships and have made possible substantial investments in faculty and program development as well as education and information technology. New appointments include Deborah Mullen, dean of faculty/executive vice president, John Azumah, associate professor of world Christianity and Islam, and Ralph C. Watkins, associate professor of evangelism and church growth.

c. University of Dubuque Theological Seminary

The University of Dubuque Theological Seminary graduated its first class of distance Master of Divinity students at the seminary commencement on May 12, 2012. The Distance Master of Divinity Program, which was accredited by the Association of Theological Schools in 2007, allows students to take two-thirds of their required degree credits online. The remaining credits are earned during intensive on-campus residencies in August and January. In 2010, the Association of Theological Schools approved the Master of Arts in Missional Christianity to be offered in distance format. Students in the distance programs represent more than twenty-five states. The University of Dubuque is the only seminary of the PC(USA) to offer fully accredited online degree programs.

d. Louisville Presbyterian Theological Seminary

Louisville Presbyterian Theological Seminary announced a bold strategic plan, Covenant for the Future, which aims to make seminary indebtedness a thing of the past by providing full scholarships for all students in the school’s master’s degree programs: full-tuition scholarships by 2015, and additional stipends for living expenses by 2021. In covenantal exchange for financial aid, students will be required to engage in service throughout their time at the seminary. The plan will enable graduates to go wherever God calls them: planting new congregations, helping struggling congregations, serving in dual vocations, or any of countless roles yet imagined. Liberated from seminary debt, LPTS graduates will be free to take more risks as servants and leaders for the church.

e. McCormick Theological Seminary

This year saw many changes at McCormick Theological Seminary. The Reverend Dr. Cynthia Campbell retired after sixteen years of faithful service as president. In May 2011, the board of trustees called the Reverend Dr. Frank M. Yamada as the tenth president of the seminary. He is the first Asian American to serve as president of a Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) seminary. We said goodbye to the Reverend Dr. Deborah Mullen, who was called to be academic dean and executive vice president of academic affairs at Columbia Theological Seminary, and the Reverend Dr. Jennifer Ayres, who accepted an offer from Candler School of Theology to join the faculty and direct the school’s Religious Education program. We welcomed the Reverend Dr. Brad Braxton as distinguished visiting scholar.
Pittsburgh Theological Seminary recognizes the dynamic life of the church and Christ’s call on Christian leaders whose vision transcends traditional boundaries, and has therefore combined biblically grounded theological education with relevant practical preparation for mission-oriented ministry through a new program: the Master of Divinity with Church Planting Emphasis. The Reverend Dr. John Burgess, professor of systematic theology, received Fulbright and Luce fellowships to further his research on the resurgence of the Russian Orthodox Church and to teach at St. Tikhon’s Orthodox Humanitarian University in Moscow. The Reverend Rebecca Jones (2011) received the Phillips Talbot Global Ministry Fellowship, awarded by Madison Avenue Presbyterian Church, for a two-year program that includes a year-long ministry in Zambia, where she is training lay pastors through Theological Education by Extension Zambia.

Of most significance during Princeton Theological Seminary’s 2010–2011 academic year was a campus-wide process to create a strategic plan to take the seminary into its third century. Led by the board of trustees and President Torrance, the entire seminary community provided input and discussion toward a plan whose initiatives will re-envision the Master of Divinity curriculum (of which spiritual formation will be one primary component, and in which the church will become a primary classroom); will build a community that reflects the diversity of the church and world (reflected in the seminary’s new Navigating the Waters Diversity Competence Initiative); and will reach out to the global church—through a new library that enhances discovery and access both on-site and digitally around the world, and through intentional partnerships with the world church, with a commitment to contribute distinctively Reformed perspectives to the discussion.

At SFTS, the 2010–11 academic year was a pivotal year, which included the closure of the seminary’s Southern California campus, the search and subsequent hiring of a new SFTS president, and the creation and hiring of a new senior staff position, vice president of communications. The SFTS president, the Reverend Dr. Phil Butin, resigned his post effective February 1, 2010. Dr. Laird Stuart was named interim president on March 1, 2010, serving in that capacity until July 2011. Interim President Stuart and the board of trustees, as part of the Financial Equilibrium Plan, closed the SFTS Southern California campus. This effort was deemed necessary in an effort to help restore the financial health of SFTS. On July 8, 2011, the Reverend Dr. James McDonald was hired to lead SFTS as the eleventh president of the seminary. President McDonald added a key position to the SFTS administrative cabinet, vice president of communications. On Nov. 28, 2011, Kay Carney, Ph.D., was hired to fill the position. A search was launched for vice president of development, which was filled in May 2011 by Interim Vice President the Reverend Scott Sheldon, until his departure on Dec. 10, 2011. In September 2011, a committee was formed to plan the inauguration of President McDonald.

Johnson C. Smith Seminary is working to define itself as a national hub of urban ministry training, congregational transformation, and leadership development. We want our students to understand the relationship between their priestly role in the church and their prophetic role in the community. We want them to gain the broad-based skills needed to lead God’s people in conventional and nonconventional ways in the 21st century.

During the 2010–2011 academic year, Johnson C. Smith Seminary’s HIV/AIDS Initiative was birthed in response to the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy’s report entitled, Becoming an HIV and AIDS Competent Church: Prophetic Witness and Compassionate Action. This report was approved by the 219th General Assembly (2010) of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), in June 2010. The HIV/AIDS Initiative provides students with a compelling opportunity to serve an underserved urban community alongside experienced clergy, activists and volunteers from a host of faith traditions. The inaugural HIV/AIDS conference, scheduled for May 17–19, 2012, will offer an HIV/AIDS certification program for clergy and lay leaders. The certification program will produce AIDS-competent churches and church leaders.

Union Presbyterian Seminary has launched a bicentennial campaign to celebrate 200 years of theological education. The celebration began with the September 2011 convocation on the campus of Hampden-Sydney College, where the seminary began in 1812, and will conclude in September 2012 at the new, 22,000-square-foot Charlotte campus facility. The seminary anticipates the initiation of a newly revised curriculum with the start of the 2013 academic year. Already initiated is a Communities of Learning program that brings newly admitted candidates into conversation with faculty, alumni/ae mentors and biblical and theological concepts they will soon address as students. To help facilitate these and other exciting programming initiatives, the seminary anticipates the inauguration of a public capital campaign in the near future.
k. Auburn Theological Seminary

Auburn Theological Seminary continued to equip bold and resilient religious leaders, reorienting our mission into four areas of focus: research, education, movement building, and media. During this academic year, Auburn’s Center for the Study of Theological Education (CSTE) released “Leadership That Works: A Study of Theological School Presidents,” a major report that identifies the ingredients of leadership that create stable, forward-looking theological institutions. The Center for Christian Leadership at Auburn Theological Seminary received a major grant from the Lilly Endowment Inc. to equip bold and resilient leaders for 21st century ministry by bringing pastoral coaching to clergy across the country, bolstering women’s leadership and cultivating wisdom about money in congregational leaders. Auburn launched Groundswell, a multifaith social action initiative that seeks to unite people of faith and moral calling in a movement for justice that transcends partisan politics. Auburn Media continued to provide media training for religious leaders, launching two exciting initiatives to train and provide a platform for religious voices for the 2012 election cycle.

1. Seminario Evangelico de Puerto Rico/ Evangelical Seminary of Puerto Rico

The Doctor in Ministry Program has modified its schedule framework while maintaining its academic goals. The new schedule consists of two two-week intensives in January and July each year. This framework allows Hispanic students in the mainland United States and students from Latin America to participate in the program. It also eases the routine adjustments our students in Puerto Rico need to make to complete the program successfully. In addition to the Doctor in Ministry, Master in Divinity, and Master in Arts Programs, the seminary offers an intensive Master in Arts degree oriented to U.S. Hispanic Pentecostal students in Miami and Los Angeles. The seminary maintains its New Immigrants Program, which equips lay Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) pastors from Africa, Asia, East Europe, and Latin America for ministry. Finally, we are grateful for our new effort in continuing education, Creciendo Juntos (Growing Together), addressed to alumni, laypersons of our sponsoring denominations and church leaders.

m. Omaha Presbyterian Seminary Foundation

Since the 2010 General Assembly, the Omaha Presbyterian Seminary Foundation has continued to provide scholarships for inquirers and candidates attending any of our ten Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) seminaries. It has increased the amount and number of the scholarships and provided a growing list of lifelong education events independently as well as in cooperation with other institutions and programs. Last year, for example, we initiated, along with the University of Nebraska-Omaha, a distance education certificate program in church administration. We are committed to a five-year effort to offer the program with significant scholarship assistance to clergy participants. At present, they are in the second of a three-year strategic planning process it believes will broaden its ministry even further.

Appendix A

AMENDED AND RESTATED BYLAWS OF THE LOUISVILLE PRESBYTERIAN THEOLOGICAL SEMINARY

ARTICLE I

SECTION 1. The name of this corporation shall be “LOUISVILLE PRESBYTERIAN THEOLOGICAL SEMINARY” (also referred to in these Bylaws as the “Seminary”).

SECTION 2. The Seminary is an educational institution related to the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) (“General Assembly”) and from time to time may be in a covenant relationship with other governing bodies of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) as is more fully described in the Seminary’s Articles of Incorporation.

ARTICLE II

The Board of Trustees

SECTION 1. All corporate powers shall be exercised by or under the authority of, and the business and affairs of the corporation shall be managed under the direction of, the Board of Trustees (the “Board” or “Board of Trustees”) except as otherwise provided by law or the Articles of Incorporation. The number of Trustees of the Seminary may vary as the Board of Trustees may determine, provided that the number shall be no fewer than twenty-five (25) and no more than thirty-seven (37), which minimum and maximum numbers shall be changed only by amendment to these Bylaws.

The Board of Trustees ordinarily shall elect Trustees during the annual meeting of the corporation. Election to the Board ordinarily shall be for a term of four years and shall be by the affirmative vote of at least two-thirds (2/3) of the Trustees present at a duly constituted meeting of the Board of Trustees. Trustees are eligible to serve three consecutive four-year terms, after which they ordinarily will step down from the Board for at least one year. After that year, the Board may choose to elect a former Trustee for another term of four years, and that person again would be eligible for three four-year terms. Ordinarily, no Trustee shall serve more than two sets of three consecutive four-year terms. Any exceptions to this pattern of election must be approved by the Board of Trustees.

The Trustees shall be divided into four classes, as nearly equal in number as possible, with approximately one-quarter (1/4) of the total number of Trustees being elected at each annual meeting. Trustees shall hold office until the adjournment of the annual meeting of the Board of Trustees at which their successors are to be elected and until their successors shall have been elected and qualified or until their deaths or until they shall resign or shall have been removed from office in the manner provided in the Articles of Incorporation of the Seminary.

One (1) Trustee shall be nominated by the board of directors of the Alum Association of the Seminary. Said Trustee ordinarily shall be nominated in the spring meeting of the board of directors of the Alum Association. If elected by the Board of Trustees, such Trustee shall serve a term of four (4) years. Such Trustee shall not be eligible for re-election. The President of the Seminary, by virtue of the Office, serves as a member of the Board of Trustees.

SECTION 2. After they have been elected, Trustees shall qualify and assume their offices by taking an oath orally or in writing that they will faithfully perform the duties of a Trustee of Louisville Presbyterian Theological Seminary. Newly elected Trustees shall be installed formally at the next meeting of the Board of Trustees, normally in October.

SECTION 3. The meetings of the Board of Trustees shall ordinarily be held semi-annually in the fall and the spring. The spring meeting, normally held in March or April, shall be designated as the annual meeting. The Board may provide, by resolution, the time and place for the holding of additional regular meetings without other notice than such resolution. Special meetings may be called by the Chair. The Chair shall call a special meeting upon the request of any five Trustees. Written personal notice of special meetings shall be given at least ten days before the time of meeting. A majority of the voting members of the Board shall constitute a quorum.

Trustees may participate in any convened meeting of the Board or any committee appointed by the Board by or through the use of any means of communication by which all Trustees participating may simultaneously hear each other during the meeting. A Trustee participating in any meeting by this means is considered to be present in person at the meeting.

SECTION 4. The Board shall approve the degrees to be conferred by the Seminary. The Board, upon recommendation from the Faculty, may confer such degrees and make such awards as it deems to be in accord with the resources and objectives of the Seminary and the laws of Kentucky.

SECTION 5. The Board shall from time to time fix the amounts of tuition, fees, fines, housing, and other necessary contingent expenses of the Seminary.

SECTION 6. The Board shall have the power to confer the title of Honorary Life Member on any Trustee, who, in the judgment of the Board, has rendered extraordinary service to the Seminary. Honorary Life Members may sit with the Board as a deliberative body and upon invitation of the Board Chair may sit with and vote in Board committees. Honorary Life members may not sit with the Board in executive session or vote in Board meetings.

SECTION 7. The Board shall promulgate and maintain policies governing the operation of the Board and the conduct of Trustees, including, but not limited to, a conflict of interest policy.

SECTION 8. The Board shall set policies for the Seminary regarding: mission and strategic direction; governance; academic programs and curricula; personnel; student admissions, continuance, welfare and conduct; resource allocation and management; Seminary facilities and campus use; asset acquisition, disposition, and management; fiscal matters; ethics; risk management; and audit. Ordinarily, policies established by the Board shall be at the strategic level and provide guidance to the administration’s actions or at the functional management level and guide activities in major Seminary functions and operations.

SECTION 9. As a deliberative body, the Board adopts the latest revision of Robert’s Rules of Order, with the exception that mail ballots, facsimile ballots, and decisions reached in conference calls authorized by the Board are as legitimate and binding as decisions reached in a regular meeting of the Board or Board committee.

SECTION 10. The Board shall have the authority to appoint representatives of outside organizations associated with the Seminary to serve as Advisory Members of the Board. Advisory Members shall be entitled to report, in writing, at least annually to the Board and shall have voice, but not vote, in meetings of the Board. At the invitation of the Board Chair, Advisory Members may sit with Board committees. Advisory Members shall not sit with the Board in executive session.

ARTICLE III

Officers of the Board

SECTION 1. The officers of the Board shall be a Chair, a Vice Chair, and a Secretary. These officers shall be elected by the Board from its members and shall serve for two-year terms, or until their successors are elected. They shall be eligible for re-election for up to three additional two-year terms. Vacancies in these offices may be filled at any meeting of the Board for the unexpired term.

SECTION 2. The Chair, or in the event of the Chair’s absence or disability, the Vice Chair, shall establish the agenda for meetings of the Board, shall preside at meetings of the Board, and shall have the powers and perform the duties usually pertaining to the office. In the event of the absence of both these officers, the Secretary shall preside until a Chair pro tempore has been elected.

SECTION 3. The Secretary shall maintain a full and accurate record of all the meetings of the Board and its committees and shall give due notice of its meetings. The Secretary shall also authenticate records of the Seminary.

SECTION 4. The Board may appoint, pursuant to applicable Kentucky law and upon recommendation of the Finance Committee, agents who will serve as managers and/or custodians of all securities and/or property held by the Seminary. These agents may invest and reinvest the properties and funds of the Seminary under their control as they may deem advisable and as permitted by investment policies approved by the Board and permitted by Kentucky law. These agents shall collect all income from the investments in their custody and shall dispense... these funds to the Seminary upon direction of the Vice President for Finance and Administration. These agents shall collect the proceeds of all securities sold, matured, or redeemed and invest the proceeds as herein provided.

ARTICLE IV

Committees

SECTION 1. The Chair shall annually appoint an Executive Committee with the approval of the Board, consisting of at least eight (8) Trustees and the President of the Seminary. The elected officers of the Board shall be members of this Committee. The Chair of the Board shall be the chair of the Executive Committee. To the extent allowed pursuant to Kentucky law, the Executive Committee shall have the full powers of the Board in the interim between the meetings of the Board, excepting the power to amend Bylaws and Articles of Incorporation and to elect, transfer, and terminate the Seminary President or an Officer of Instruction. The presence of five (5) members of the Board who have been appointed to the Executive Committee or, in the alternative, one-third of the total membership of the Executive Committee (whichever is larger) shall constitute a quorum. It shall report all its actions at the next regular meeting of the Board.

SECTION 2. The Chair shall appoint annually an Academic Affairs Committee, an Audit Committee, a Finance Committee, a Governance Committee, a Seminary Relations Committee, and a Student Life Committee. The membership, powers, and duties of these Committees shall be as authorized by the Board in policy.

SECTION 3. The Board may create such other committees as it sees fit. The members and chairs of all committees shall be appointed by the Chair of the Board except as otherwise provided in these Bylaws, Board policy or other Board action. The Chair and the President, by virtue of their Offices, shall be members of all Board committees, with voice and vote, except that the President shall not be a member of the Audit Committee or a committee charged with reviewing the performance of the President. A Trustee may attend any meeting of any Board committee and may participate in committee discussion but may not vote unless the Trustee is a committee member.

ARTICLE V

Administration

SECTION 1. General:

(a) Unless otherwise provided in these Bylaws or in a Board policy, by affirmative vote of two-thirds of all members present, the Board shall have the power, at a regular or a special meeting called for the purpose, to take the following actions with reference to the President and those other persons who are designated herein as “administrative officers:”

(i) To elect and to induct or to inaugurate them into office, chair, or position to serve at the pleasure of the Board or for a term;

(ii) To transfer them from one office, chair, or position to another;

(iii) To suspend them preliminary to and pending investigation of charges against conduct or competent performance of duties;

(iv) To remove them from office within the limitations and subject to the procedures stated in Board policy; and

(v) To fix their duties, compensation, remuneration, and emoluments of office and position and, within the limitations, if any, provided by express written agreement or contract, change such duties, compensation, remuneration, or emoluments at any time and from time to time.

(b) The administrative officers shall include the following: President, Academic Dean (also referred to in these Bylaws as the “Dean”), Vice President for Finance and Administration, and Vice President for Seminary Relations.

(c) The title of Vice President may be conferred upon another administrator upon recommendation of the President and approval by the Board.

(d) The qualifications, authority, and duties of such other administrative officers as the Board may authorize shall be prescribed by the Board upon recommendation of the President.

(e) The President shall be elected by the Board and shall serve for an indefinite period at the pleasure of the Board unless the Board should authorize a term appointment. The Academic Dean shall be elected by the Board on recommendation of the President and shall serve for an indefinite period at the pleasure of the Board unless the Board should authorize a term appointment on recommendation of the President. All other administrative officers shall be appointed by the President and shall serve for an indefinite period at the pleasure of the President unless the Board should authorize a term appointment on recommendation of the President. The President is authorized to accept the resignations of other administrative officers, including the Dean, and shall report resignations to the Board. The Chair of the Board is authorized to suspend the President from the active duties of office as provided in Section 1(a)(iii). The President is authorized to suspend other administrative officers, including the Dean. In the event that the Chair suspends the President or the President suspends another administrative officer, the Chair or the President shall notify the Board or the Executive Committee.
SECTION 2. The President:

(a) The President is the chief executive officer of the Seminary, shall administer the Seminary under the direction of the Board, and shall implement the policies of the Board. The President shall be a teaching elder in good standing in the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) or an active member in a particular congregation of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), as these terms are used in the Book of Order of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). The authority and duties of the President shall be those ordinarily vested in the chief executive officer of an educational institution, except as they may be otherwise prescribed in these Bylaws.

(b) The President of the Seminary shall be responsible to the Board. The President shall have general supervision and direction of all other officers and agents of the Seminary and shall supervise in general the work of the Faculty, the administration, and the students.

(c) The President shall be the principal representative and spokesperson for the Seminary. The President shall ordinarily preside on public occasions and shall confer degrees and make awards authorized by the Board.

(d) The President, by virtue of the Office, shall be a member of the Faculty and all Faculty committees. The President shall be the Presiding Officer of the Faculty. As Presiding Officer, the President’s responsibilities shall include: calling all regular and special meetings of the Faculty, presiding over those meetings, appointing the standing committees of the Faculty, appointing, in consultation with the Faculty, all Faculty search committees, and performing such other duties as are ordinarily conferred on a Presiding Officer. The President attends and has voice and vote at any meeting of the Faculty or component of the Faculty constituted to conduct the business of the Seminary. The President may delegate any or all of the President’s authority and responsibilities as Presiding Officer to the Dean.

(e) The President shall recommend long-range goals and objectives to the Board and, upon adoption by the Board, devise the organization, policies, financial plans, and schedules designed to reach those goals. The President shall recommend strategic academic and curricular decisions to the Board following Board policy and procedures in which the Faculty has a principal role. The President shall submit annually for adoption by the Board a budget for the next fiscal year’s operations and shall have general supervision of all expenditures authorized by that budget. At meetings of the Board, the President shall report on the progress of the Seminary. Normally, all petitions and recommendations to the Board shall reach the Board through the President.

(f) In the event of an extended absence or incapacity of the President or in the event of a vacancy in the office of the President, unless the Board designates otherwise, the duties and powers of the President shall devolve upon the Dean or, in the event that the Dean is unavailable or unable to act, upon the Vice President for Finance and Administration.

SECTION 3. The Dean:

(a) The authority and duties of the Dean shall be those ordinarily vested in such an officer of an educational institution, except as they may be otherwise prescribed in these Bylaws. The Dean shall perform such other duties as are assigned by the President. The Dean shall be elected by the Board of Trustees upon recommendation of the President made pursuant to Board policy and procedures that include substantive consultation with the Faculty.

(b) The Dean shall be the chief academic officer of the Seminary, shall report to the President, and shall be supervised by the President in the performance of all duties. The Dean shall serve as staff person for the Board’s Academic Affairs Committee.

(c) The Dean shall have general oversight of student services and general student welfare; of Faculty Members’ performance, development, and general welfare; and of curricular matters, including Field Education, Lay Education, Continuing Education and Library Services curricula.

(d) The Dean, by virtue of the Office, shall be a member of the Faculty and all Faculty committees and shall be entitled to attend and to have voice and vote at any meeting of the Faculty or component of the Faculty constituted to conduct the business of the Seminary. In the absence of the President, the Dean shall preside at Faculty meetings and public occasions. The Dean shall have such other authority and responsibilities of the Presiding Officer of the Faculty as are delegated by the President.

SECTION 4. The Vice President for Finance and Administration:

(a) The Vice President for Finance and Administration shall be the chief fiscal officer of the Seminary, shall report to the President, and shall be supervised by the President in the performance of all duties. The Vice President for Finance and Administration shall serve as staff person for the Finance Committee of the Board.

(b) The Vice President for Finance and Administration shall prepare current operating and capital budgets, financial reports, and long-range financial plans; shall advise the President and the Board regarding the implementation of investment guidelines; shall supervise managers of support operations; and shall manage human resource administration, property, fiscal, and liability risk and insurance. Subject to Board policy and authority, the Vice President for Finance and Administration shall have general control of all invested funds and properties. The Vice President for Finance and Administration shall perform such other duties as are assigned by the President.

SECTION 5. The Vice President for Seminary Relations:

(a) The Vice President for Seminary Relations shall report to the President, shall be the chief development officer of the Seminary, and shall be supervised by the President in the performance of all duties.
(b) The Vice President for Seminary Relations shall serve as staff person for the Seminary Relations Committee of the Board and shall perform such other duties as the President may assign.

SECTION 6. Other Administrators:

(a) Other administrative positions necessary for the efficient operation of the Seminary may be authorized by the Board. Persons filling those positions shall be appointed by the President and shall hold their offices at the pleasure of the President. The Board shall approve their salaries.

(b) Such administrators shall ordinarily report either to the Dean, the Vice President for Finance and Administration, or the Vice President for Seminary Relations.

(c) Duties of such administrative positions shall be set forth in job descriptions prepared by the President and provided to the Board for its information.

ARTICLE VI
Officers of Instruction

Officers of Instruction in this Seminary (sometimes referred to herein individually as “Faculty Members” or collectively as the “Faculty”) shall perform their duties in a climate of academic freedom and moral responsibility. Such freedom is required for the fulfillment of the Seminary’s obligation as a community of scholars to which the Church has reason to look for thoughtful leadership in bringing the minds of people into harmony with the will of God in intellectual integrity. As members of a community of Christian scholars, Faculty Members and students exercise their freedom within the restraints of the Seminary which is the servant of God and which is related to the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). Faculty Members and students have special responsibilities in view of the mission of the Seminary.

SECTION 1. General

(a) Unless otherwise provided in these Bylaws or in a Board policy, the Board shall have the power, by affirmative vote of two-thirds of all members present at a regular or special meeting called for the purpose, to take the following actions with reference to Faculty Members:

(i) To elect and to induct or to inaugurate them into office, chair, or position to serve at the pleasure of the Board, for a term, or for indeterminate tenure;

(ii) To transfer them from one office, chair, or position to another;

(iii) To suspend them preliminary to and pending investigation of charges against conduct or competent performance of duties;

(iv) To remove them from office within the limitations and subject to the procedures stated in Board Bylaws or policy; and

(v) To fix their duties, compensation, remuneration, and emoluments of office and position and, within the limitations, if any, provided by express written agreement or contract, change such duties, compensation, remuneration, or emoluments at any time and from time to time.

(b) All Officers of Instruction shall be elected by the Board upon the recommendation of the President made pursuant to Board policy and procedures in which the Faculty has a principal role.

(c) Officers of Instruction shall be classified and shall rank according to the following titles:

(i) Professors.

(ii) Associate Professors.

(iii) Assistant Professors.

(iv) Instructors.

(d) Part-time Faculty Members, Lecturers and other adjunct Faculty Members are designated as special Officers of Instruction and shall be appointed and removed by the President. In appointing such Faculty Members, the President shall follow Board policy and procedures in which the Faculty has a principal role. The honor of “emeritus” or “emerita” may be bestowed upon a Faculty Member by the Board of Trustees upon his or her retirement.

(e) In addition, upon recommendation by the President made after the President consults with the Faculty, the Board of Trustees may elect to enter into term contracts with Officers of Instruction who are called to administrative positions with Faculty rank. Officers of Instruction who serve under such term contracts shall have all the responsibilities and rights accorded to other Officers of Instruction, except that they shall not be eligible for indeterminate tenure in the posts to which they are appointed. The renewal of their term contracts and promotion shall be recommended by the President, after consultation with the Faculty, to the Board of Trustees for its approval. Officers of Instruction who serve under term contracts shall be reviewed regularly as required by and in accordance with Board policy and procedures.
SECTION 2. A majority of the tenured and tenure-track Faculty Members, in the aggregate, shall be members of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) or another church with which the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) is in full communion.

SECTION 3. Every Officer of Instruction, before entering upon the execution of his or her office, shall respond affirmatively to such declaration of purpose as is required by Board policy.

SECTION 4. Any Officer of Instruction proposing to resign his or her office shall give at least three (3) months’ notice to the President, unless relieved by the President from giving such notice. The President is authorized to accept resignations and shall report resignations to the Board. No Officer of Instruction shall be deprived of his or her office without at least three (3) months’ notice. The three (3) month notice period shall be extended as necessary for the completion of pre-termination procedures required by Board policy. The President is authorized to suspend an Officer of Instruction from the active duties of office as provided in Section 1(a)(iii) above. In the event that the President suspends an Officer of Instruction, the President shall notify the Board or the Executive Committee.

SECTION 5. A Faculty Member shall ordinarily remain in the rank of Assistant Professor for four years and an Associate Professor shall ordinarily remain in the rank for four years. Ordinarily the appointment of Instructors shall be for one year only, but may be made for longer periods of time at the discretion of the Board.

SECTION 6. The review for tenure shall take place in the eighth year of a Faculty Member’s service to the Seminary. Upon approval by the President and agreement of the Faculty Member, a Faculty Member may receive up to four years’ credit towards this requisite period of service prior to tenure review as a result of service in another academic or ecclesiastical appointment. The tenure review will be preceded by one comprehensive review. For Faculty Members appointed initially to the rank of Assistant Professor, that review will occur prior to consideration for promotion to Associate Professor, using the criteria and procedures referred to in Article VI, Section 7 of these Bylaws. Exceptions to these tenure review requirements must be made by the Board upon recommendation of the President.

SECTION 7. Recommendations for the promotion and tenure of Officers of Instruction shall be made to the Board of Trustees by the President pursuant to a Board policy that shall describe criteria and procedures for promotion and tenure and shall provide for a principal role by the Faculty.

SECTION 8. Indeterminate tenure implies permanent status as an Officer of Instruction. Tenure is to be rescinded only under the following circumstances: 1) just cause for reasons of incompetence, failure to perform the duties of the office, moral turpitude (including, but not limited to, dishonesty, plagiarism, unethical conduct, and sexual abuse or harassment), and lack of faithfulness to the Seminary’s basic purpose; 2) program reduction or elimination; 3) financial exigency or a merger of the Seminary with another institution; and 4) mental or physical incapacity. A term appointment is to be rescinded during its term only under the circumstances described in this Section 8. A decision to rescind indeterminate tenure or a term appointment must be made in accordance with Board policies and procedures. The procedures must include Faculty review. The policy and procedures for disciplinary rescission must include a system of progressive discipline. The termination of an Officer of Instruction as a result of the nonrenewal of a term appointment or a decision not to award tenure is not a rescission and does not result in the application of the requirements of this Section 8.

SECTION 9. Should a tenured Faculty Member be terminated from service on the Faculty, the Faculty Member shall ordinarily be given a year of terminal leave at full salary and benefits, unless other full-time employment is received prior to the end of the year of terminal leave, except when the Faculty Member is dismissed on grounds of moral turpitude. A Faculty Member dismissed on the grounds of moral turpitude may be dismissed immediately at the end of the three (3) month notice period described in Section 4 or the time required for the completion of the requisite dismissal proceedings, if longer than three (3) months.

SECTION 10. All Faculty Members shall be reviewed and evaluated regularly as required by and in accordance with these Bylaws and Board policy and procedures. In the event that, as a result of a review and evaluation process, it is determined that a Faculty Member has failed to meet requisite performance standards and the Faculty Member fails to correct the deficiencies within a reasonable period thereafter, the Faculty Member’s tenure or term appointment may be rescinded for incompetence or failure to perform the duties of office as described in Section 8 above.

SECTION 11. As a deliberative body, the Faculty shall consist of all Faculty members and such administrators, who are not Faculty members, as the Faculty may elect to serve with voice and vote.

SECTION 12. To the Faculty is committed the instruction of the students, the immediate government of the students and all student organizations, the pastoral oversight of the students, the selection, supervision, and control of the various courses of study, and the adoption and administration, subject to the review and ultimate control of the Board of Trustees, of such rules and regulations as may be found necessary for the performance of these duties and obligations.

SECTION 13. The Faculty may choose to discharge the responsibilities described in Section 12 by delegating them to a deliberative council. The composition and authority of such a council shall be set forth in a Faculty policy approved by the Board of Trustees.

ARTICLE VII

Curriculum

SECTION 1. Such courses of study shall be offered by the Faculty as it shall deem best suited to preparing students for the most effective ministry in the church and for such other Christian work as may be deemed to be within the scope of the purposes of the Seminary and in accord with the standards of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) and any other communions with which the Seminary is in covenant relationship. Minor changes in the curriculum may be made by Faculty action, but major changes shall be made only after approval by the Board upon recommendation of the President.
SECTION 2. The length of the academic year and the division of it into semesters, quarters, or terms shall be determined by the Board of Trustees.

ARTICLE VIII

Degrees

SECTION 1. In accordance with the provisions of these Bylaws, the Board of Trustees, prior to the day of graduation and on recommendation of the Faculty, will grant degrees to students of the Seminary who have met the requirements set forth by the Faculty and approved by the Board.

SECTION 2. The President is authorized, with the approval of the Board, to confer degrees annually at Commencement on all candidates who shall be certified by the Dean and the Faculty as having completed the published requirements for the respective degrees.

ARTICLE IX

Management of Funds and Other Assets

SECTION 1. All the funds invested for the Seminary shall be invested in the name of “LOUISVILLE PRESBYTERIAN THEOLOGICAL SEMINARY,” or in any other name by which the Seminary legally is doing business, except that the agents authorized by the Board to serve as managers and/or custodians of all securities and/or property held by the Seminary may hold title to securities when authorized by the Finance Committee of the Board in order to facilitate transfer of such securities.

SECTION 2. Money or property donated to the Seminary, without special designation or condition, shall be added to institutional funds and managed as provided in Board policy.

SECTION 3. When authorized by action of the Board or the Finance Committee, two persons in any of the three following positions, President, Vice President for Finance and Administration, and Controller, shall have the power to sell, convey, transfer, or otherwise dispose of any real estate, stocks, bonds, mortgages, or other real or personal property of the Seminary. Notwithstanding the foregoing, two persons in any of the three following positions, President, Vice President for Finance and Administration, and Controller, shall have authority to sell, convey, transfer or otherwise dispose of, in their discretion, any real estate, stocks, bonds, mortgages, or other real or personal property acquired by gift as provided in Board policy.

ARTICLE X

General

SECTION 1. The official colors of the Seminary shall be National Blue and White.

SECTION 2. The fiscal year of the Seminary shall close on the thirty-first (31st) day of May.

ARTICLE XI

Bill of Rights and Responsibilities

SECTION 1. The Board of Trustees, upon the recommendation of the President and after consultation with the Seminary’s constituent groups through the governance process, shall define the rights and responsibilities of members of the Seminary’s constituent groups, including the Seminary’s rights and responsibilities and including the procedural matters and causes for student separation. All new members of such constituent groups, upon their entrance to the Seminary, shall be informed of their rights and responsibilities as set out in such document.

SECTION 2. All constituent groups of the Seminary shall have well defined channels of communication and accountability to the Board of Trustees as described in Board policy.

ARTICLE XII

Indemnification and Insurance

SECTION 1. The Seminary shall indemnify any person who is a party or is threatened to be made a party to any threatened, pending or completed action suit or proceeding, whether civil, criminal, administrative or investigative (including an action by or in the right of the Seminary), by reason of the fact that such person is or was a Trustee or officer of the Board of Trustees or is or was serving at the request of the Seminary as a voting member of a Board committee or as a board member or officer of the board of another corporation or other enterprise, against expenses (including attorneys’ fees), judgments, fines and amounts paid in settlement, actually and reasonably incurred by such person in connection with the defense of such action, suit or proceeding. However, the Seminary shall not indemnify any such Trustee or officer of the Board of Trustees or individual serving at the request of the Seminary as a voting member of a Board committee or as a board member or officer of the board of another corporation or other enterprise: (i) for any transaction in which such Trustee or officer of the Board of Trustees or individual serving at the request of the Seminary as a voting member of a Board committee or as a board member or officer of the board of another corporation or other enterprise: (i) for any transaction in which such Trustee or officer of the Board of Trustees or individual serving at the request of the Seminary as a voting member of a Board committee or as a board member or officer of the board of another corporation or other enterprise: (i) for any transaction in which such Trustee or officer of the Board of Trustees or individual serving at the request of the Seminary as a voting member of a Board committee or as a board member or officer of the board of another corporation or other enterprise: (i) for any transaction in which such Trustee or officer of the Board of Trustees or individual serving at the request of the Seminary as a voting member of a Board committee or as a board member or officer of the board of another corporation or other enterprise: (i) for any transaction in which such Trustee or officer of the Board of Trustees or individual serving at the request of the Seminary as a voting member of a Board committee or as a board member or officer of the board of another corporation or other enterprise to be a violation of law; or (iii) for any transaction which such Trustee or officer of the Board of Trustees or individual serving at the request of the Seminary as a voting member of a Board committee or as a board member or officer of the board of another corporation or other enterprise derived an improper personal benefit.
SECTION 2. Unless ordered by a court, an indemnification shall be made in a specific case upon a determination that indemnification, whether full or partial, of the Trustee, voting member of a Board committee, board member, or board officer is proper in the circumstances because he or she has met the applicable standards of conduct set forth in Section 1. Such determination shall be made by the Board of Trustees by a majority vote of a quorum consisting of Trustees who were not parties to such action, suit, or proceeding, or, if such a quorum is not obtainable, or even if obtainable, a majority vote of a quorum of disinterested Trustees so directs, by independent counsel in a written opinion. Indemnification shall be determined whenever the Trustee, voting member of a Board committee, board member, or board officer has been successful on the merits or otherwise in defense of any action, suit, or proceeding referred to in Section 1, or in defense of any claim, issue, or matter therein.

SECTION 3. Expenses incurred in defending a civil or criminal action, suit or proceeding may be paid in advance of the final disposition of such action, suit or proceeding as authorized by the Board of Trustees in a specific case upon receipt of a commitment by or on behalf of the Trustee, voting member of a Board committee, board member or board officer to repay such advanced amounts unless it shall be determined that such trustee or officer is entitled to indemnification.

SECTION 4. The Seminary may purchase and maintain insurance on behalf of any person who was or is a Trustee, voting member of a Board committee, board member or board officer, or is or was serving at its request as a trustee or board officer of another corporation or other enterprise, against any liability asserted against such person and incurred by him or her in any such capacity, or arising out of his or her status as such, whether or not the Seminary is empowered to indemnify such person against liability under the laws of Kentucky.

SECTION 5. This entitlement to indemnification and advancement of expenses provided for in this Article shall continue as to a person who has ceased to be a Trustee, voting member of a Board committee, board member, or board officer and shall inure to the benefit of the heirs and legal representatives of any person entitled to indemnification or advancement of expenses under this Article.

SECTION 6. If any provision of this Article shall be held to be invalid, illegal or unenforceable for any reason (1) such provision shall be invalid, illegal or unenforceable only to the extent of such prohibition and the validity, legality and enforceability of the remaining provisions of this Article shall not be affected thereby; and (2) to the fullest extent possible, the remaining provisions of this Article shall be construed so as to give effect to the intent of the prohibited provision(s).

SECTION 7. This Article shall apply to every proceeding filed after April 17, 2010, the date of the Board’s adoption of Amended and Restated Articles of Incorporation.

ARTICLE XIII

Bylaws and Amendments

SECTION 1. The Board of Trustees may adopt Bylaws not in conflict with the Articles of Incorporation to provide for the regulation of any aspect of the work of the Seminary not clearly or explicitly provided in the Articles of Incorporation.

SECTION 2. Amendments to these Bylaws, not in conflict with the Articles of Incorporation, shall be adopted in one of the following three ways: (a) by unanimous written consent of the Trustees; (b) after Trustees have been given at least two weeks’ written notice of the proposed amendment, upon receiving the affirmative votes of at least two-thirds (2/3) of the Trustees present at a duly constituted meeting of the Board of Trustees; or (c) without prior written notice, upon receiving the affirmative votes of at least three-fourths (3/4) of the Trustees present at a duly constituted meeting of the Board of Trustees.

ADDENDA AND EFFECTIVE DATES

These Amended and Restated Bylaws are effective upon adoption. Except as specifically preserved below, all provisions of previously adopted Bylaws are revoked. The following provisions of previously adopted Bylaws shall remain in effect until May 31, 2012 (unless revoked earlier by the Board) to provide process guidance until requisite policies and procedures can be developed and adopted by the Board. The following shall be considered as Addenda to these Amended and Restated Bylaws. If still in effect, these Addenda shall be rescinded on May 31, 2012 without further action by the Board of Trustees.

1. Addendum to Article II, Section 5:
   (a) Charges made for board, room, and fees shall be made on a semester basis and shall be payable in advance, except as arrangements may be made with the President for the payment of board and room rent in smaller installments.
   (b) A student withdrawing from Seminary shall be eligible for a refund of charges on a policy and schedule approved by the President and published in the catalog.
   (c) No student shall be advanced in class standing or transferred to another institution or be eligible for a degree until the student shall have made satisfactory arrangements regarding debts owed to the Seminary.
   (d) Financial aid may be extended to students according to procedures approved by the President.
   (e) Students shall be required to exhaust other possibilities of financial aid, such as loans made by the Boards of the church, before being granted financial aid from funds of the Seminary.

2. Addenda to Article VI, Section 1(b):

   Searches for new Faculty Members shall be done through committees comprised of Faculty Members.

   All Officers of Instruction shall be elected by the Board with the recommendation of the President subsequent to the following procedure:

   (a) The Faculty shall prepare a profile of the major qualifications desirable in the office under consideration, and may submit to the Committee on Nominations names of prospective candidates.

   (b) The ad hoc Committee on Nominations shall be appointed by the President in consultation with the Faculty as provided in Article V, Section 2(d).

   (c) After the Committee has duly explored and appraised the qualifications of prospective candidates, its proposed nomination shall be submitted to the Full Professors, Associates Professors, and Assistant Professors for consideration. All members of the Committee on Nominations are to meet with the Full Professors, Associate Professors, and Assistant Professors, as the recommendation is submitted and share in the discussion until the Professors vote to go into Executive Session. If the Assistant, Associate, and Full Professors approve the Call of the proposed nominee by a two-thirds majority voting by secret ballot, tenured Full Professors shall then vote to determine rank and tenure of the nominee. The nomination shall be presented to the Board of Trustees through the Academic Affairs Committee of the Board with recommendation of the President. Through the President, the Committee on Nominations shall keep the Academic Affairs Committee informed of its work during the course of the search. The President shall seek the candidate’s permission to be nominated only after the Academic Affairs Committee has considered the recommendation of the Faculty.

3. Addendum to Article VI, Section 3:

   Every Officer of Instruction, before entering upon the execution of his or her office, shall respond affirmatively to the following declaration of purpose:

   (1) Is it your purpose to work with your colleagues to achieve the basic objectives of Louisville Presbyterian Theological Seminary?

   (2) Is it your purpose to exercise the freedom accorded to you by this institution with an accompanying sense of responsibility for the Seminary’s total mission in the church and the world?

   (3) Is it your purpose to perform the duties of a theological teacher in obedience to Jesus Christ, under the authority of the Scriptures and under the continuing instruction and guidance of the confessions of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.)?

   (4) Is it your purpose to subject the faith and practice of the church to loyal but critical scrutiny in the light of Scripture and of your particular field of specialization?

   (5) Is it your purpose to give to research and teaching in your chosen field your best energies and devotion and to work continuously for the increase of knowledge and the improvement of your teaching skills?

   (6) Is it your purpose to give to your students that measure of respect, candor, and loving concern which will enable them to grow toward Christian maturity?

   (7) Is it your purpose to join responsibly with your colleagues in establishing policies for the Seminary and to work cooperatively in the implementation of the policies of the Seminary?

4. Addendum to Article VI, Section 5:

   Faculty members who are appointed to the faculty without the Ph.D. or other terminal degree approved by the Faculty and the Board may be appointed at the rank of Assistant Professor; eligibility for promotion to the rank of Associate Professor depends upon receipt of a Ph.D. or other terminal degree, which is expected within four years of appointment, excluding leaves of absence.

5. Addendum to Article VI, Section 6:

   If the Faculty Member has been four years in rank as an Associate Professor, then promotion to Full Professor shall accompany the granting of tenure.

   (Source: Article VII, Section 7 of the previous Bylaws)
6. Addendum to Article VI, Section 7:

The recommendation of the President shall include the recommendation of the Faculty. The recommendation of the Faculty shall be by two-thirds vote of the tenured members of the Faculty, acting as a committee, the President serving as Chair.

The recommendations regarding promotion and tenure shall be brought to the tenured members of the Faculty by a Review Committee appointed by the Academic Dean consisting of two tenured professors and the Dean, the Dean serving as Chair. The tenured professors selected by the Dean shall be agreeable to the candidate’s being considered for promotion and/or tenure.

Criteria to be used in decisions concerning promotion and tenure are:

1. Institutional commitment as demonstrated by participation in the various activities constituting the life of the Seminary as it seeks its stated purpose;

2. Teaching performance as measured by student course evaluation, peer observation, and self-evaluation;

3. Increasing competence in one’s academic field as measured by participation in scholarly meetings, recognition by others in the field, and the capacity to interpret one’s field of study to students and others;

4. Contribution to one’s academic field as measured by publications, membership on editorial Boards of academic journals/book series, invitations to deliver lectures in colleges/universities/seminaries, conduct workshops, participate on panels at academic conferences, etc.

5. Service to the church and world as measured by commitment to the life and worship of the church and involvement in local, national, and international communities.

In making decisions on the basis of these criteria, the Review Committee shall consider the following:

(a) Data in a file developed by the Dean in cooperation with the candidate, including a resume of the candidate’s professional career, memoranda from periodic consultations, annual reports submitted to the Dean for report to the Board’s Academic Affairs Committee, along with any other material that the candidate may wish to supply.

(b) Data prepared by a student committee following a form provided by the Dean, such data to include a review of the candidate’s effectiveness in instruction, quality of advising, and contribution to the life of the Seminary.

This committee shall be elected by the students serving on the Seminary Council from a list of ten (10) students nominated by the candidate. The Student Committee shall consist of five (5) students including within their number at least one (1) who has been an advisee and two (2) who have been in classes with the candidate.

(c) Data provided by the Dean and the Faculty Members on the Review Committee based on class evaluations provided by students and comments derived from classroom observation by peers. Particular attention will be given to course development, appropriateness of readings, constructive use made of previous criticism, and assessment of the effectiveness of instruction.

(d) Data provided from other Faculty Members and staff at the Seminary not on the Review Committee as solicited by the Dean inviting specific comment concerning the criteria noted above.

(e) Data derived from persons outside the Seminary community solicited by the Dean inviting comment particularly on categories 3, 4, and 5 of the above criteria. The candidate will supply three names of persons to be contact by the Dean for comment. The Review Committee will choose at least three additional persons for the Dean to contact for comment, the names of these persons to be shared with the candidate.

7. Addendum to Article VI, Section 8:

Where the performance of a particular Faculty Member appears to warrant rescission of indeterminate tenure or a term appointment, the President shall report to the Executive Committee of the Board, and with its approval, the President and the Dean shall appoint a Faculty Review Committee of three tenured professors. If the Faculty Review Committee decides by a majority vote that rescission is warranted, the President shall convene the Committee of Full Professors to hear the report of the Faculty Review Committee and by secret ballot take appropriate action. By a majority vote, the Committee of Full Professors may recommend rescission to the Board of Trustees, and its action shall be reported to the Board after an adequate hearing and appropriate action.

8. Addendum to Article VI, Section 10:

The Review Committee shall consist of the President, the Dean, and one or more other Faculty Members. The President and the Dean shall select the third and/or fourth member of the Review Committee in consultation with the Faculty Member under review. The Faculty Member(s) on the Review Committee shall consult with at least five former students of the Faculty Member under review and/or others in the Faculty Member’s field of specialization or in the church. The agenda for review may include the following:

(a) The amount and quality of teaching in which one is engaged;
(b) One’s scholarly research and engagement in one’s field of specialization;
(c) One’s participation in the life of this Seminary community;
(d) One’s availability to our students for conversations with them;
(e) One’s active contribution to the mission and ministry of the church and to the world; and
(f) One’s extracurricular activities.

(Source: Article VI, Section 12 of the previous Bylaws)

9. Addendum to Article VI:

SECTION 14. The Faculty shall meet regularly at least once a month during the academic year. The President shall call all regular and special meetings. A majority of the members shall constitute a quorum, and all questions at issue shall be decided by at least a majority of the votes cast. It shall be the duty of every Faculty Member to attend the stated meetings, unless formally excused from attendance.

SECTION 15. The Faculty shall elect a Clerk, who shall keep a permanent record of its proceedings, and all Faculty minutes shall be subject to review by the Board of Trustees. Except as otherwise provided in these Bylaws, the Faculty shall designate those Committees to be elected or appointed by the President, which are needed for the efficient and proper discharge of its duties.

SECTION 16. Each full-time Officer of Instruction shall be provided with a “Call to Instructional Office” in standard form as approved by the Board. Part-time Officers of Instruction shall be provided letters of appointment signed by the President and containing the terms of service which are relevant to such appointment. Such letters constitute in effect contracts with the Seminary.

SECTION 17. Any changes of title, status, duties, or compensation of Instructional Officers, which have been authorized by the Board, shall be communicated to them in writing by the President, either in the form of a new call or contract or in the form of a letter having the effect of amending a former contract in a manner clearly set forth as such an amendment.

10. Addendum to Article VIII:

SECTION 3. The Seminary may admit to candidacy for its degrees applicants who have met requirements established by agencies that accredit the academic programs offered by the Seminary and who are recommended by the Faculty. Other applicants who shall satisfy the Faculty as to their abilities and attainments may be admitted to particular courses as special students.

11. Addendum to Article XI, Section 2:

If any group feels that its desires have not been properly handled, it has the right of petition. The Board of Trustees, however, will act on a complaint only when the matter has been thoroughly investigated and written responses have been obtained from the responsible Seminary personnel. This means that under ordinary circumstances the Board of Trustees will acknowledge a petition when it is properly presented but will not act on it until the Board’s next stated meeting after the prescribed steps have been completed.

When looking at the social pathologies of many of our youth, we often look at empirical data like grade point averages, high school dropout rates, anti-social behavior, police incident reports, gang activity, teenage pregnancy, and others. Our practice has been to then initiate programs and activities that will hopefully address these concerns...i.e. after school tutoring and manhood training programs, sex education and mentoring initiatives, intense counseling and more. Many, if not most, of these practices fail because they do not begin to touch on the primary cause of the problem. A week as 168 hours in it and most of these traditional programs have access to these children only 10-12 hours per week. A young child spends far more time at home with their parents than at any other place. Many families are dysfunctional. In far too many instances, active, effective, and consistent parental leadership is absent.

Parents should and must be the mentors, coaches, police, and leaders of their child’s self esteem. By themselves, teachers, churches and the judicial system can’t do it.

Virtually, all parents would say that they love their children while at the same time stand idle when their children fail to make decisions or behave in ways that would lead to positive and productive lifestyles. Or, they watch as though helpless when their children don’t execute plans leading to fruitful results. The consequences of this dysfunction lead to isolation, frustration, social and emotional pain, economic hardship and desperation, and a perpetuation of the same for succeeding generations.

How the Institute for Parental Leadership works

The institute would be a learning environment where parents of young children (children 7 and under) would come and learn skills in the following areas (this is not a complete course list):

- Parental engagement in the total life of a child...sharing techniques and paradigms of effective engagement skills so that parents see successful models from many parts of society, e.g. corporate leaders, professionals, artists, etc. Parents will interview successful African American people and hear their stories. They will learn what it takes to be successful and hence help prepare their own children for success.
- Cultural Life would address basics in cultural events across a wide range of activities, plays, concerts, lectures on topics of interests, etc.
- The excitement of knowing would focus on why knowledge is essential as one matures through the stages of development towards success. It would focus on the consequences of not knowing certain bits of information and how that reality alone could potentially place social, economic and political barriers in the path of a child.

- The joy of watching children grow would focus on the importance of parents keeping an eye (i.e. paying close attention) on their children from birth through high school and beyond. The course would focus on topics of how best to be engaged in a child’s life when teaching values, morality, life choices, and direction in life for both child and parent.

- How to fight for your child would focus on the need to be vigilant in effectively protecting the child from harmful external social and political forces.

- How to love yourself (the idea here is that if you don’t love yourself, you can’t love other well, including children). The course would include discussions on the value of maintaining a consistent exercise and nutrition regimen, hygiene, appropriate dress, rest habits, lifestyle choices that promote joy and happiness verses choices that will cause harm and distress.

- Measuring a child’s success would teach parents how to instill in their children a strong sense of self-esteem, self-confidence, and a strong spiritual presence, the core of one’s being.

- Helping a child develop dreams and the reason why it’s important to work hard to make them a reality would focus on the idea that nothing worthwhile comes easy. One has to work hard for success and to remember that when obstacles/challenges come into one’s live, one has to find a way around them, over them, or under them, but permit them to stop the pursuit of dreams and aspirations.

The Institute for Parental Leadership would create opportunity for bringing together critical institutions to address, what is arguably the most important issue of this generation, namely, the saving of the African American family and those children born into poverty. It would match local church missional purpose with a workable plan to effectively address the threats to the survival of African American youth. The Institute of for Parental Leadership would train local clergy and their designees on techniques of effective parenting. The plan would finally address in a deliberate way the often omitted part of the equation, the parent. If we don’t have parents equipped with the necessary skill sets to raise, protect, train, and promote their own children, then all efforts mounted to save our youth will fall woefully short.

Frederick Douglas noted: “It is easier to build strong children than to repair broken men.”
Item 18-01

[The assembly approved Item 18-01 with amendment. See p. 11.]

On Amending The Book of Confessions to Include the Confession of Belhar—From the Presbytery of National Capital.

The Presbytery of National Capital overtures the 220th General Assembly (2012) to begin the process of amending The Book of Confessions to include the Confession of Belhar, as provided in G-6.03.

[That the special committee formed to study the Confession of Belhar be granted a budget for education across the church about the confession, in addition to its committee budget for direct expenses.]

Rationale

The recommendation to include the Confession of Belhar in the PC(USA) constitution, The Book of Confessions, was approved by the 219th General Assembly (2010) and was sent to the presbyteries for approval and fell only eight votes short of the two-thirds necessary for ratification.

The Reformed Church in America, which is in full communion and fellowship with the PC(USA), adopted the Confession of Belhar as its fourth doctrinal standard at its 2010 General Synod. The Christian Reformed Church of North America proposed at its 2009 General Synod, for vote in 2012, the adoption of the Confession of Belhar as its fourth confession of faith, the first since its founding in 1857.

The Presbytery of National Capital, a multiracial inclusive presbytery with a history of activism in civil rights, voted on June 28, 2010, in favor of inclusion of the Confession of Belhar, in spite of knowledge that the denominational vote had already failed. The action taken now represents the presbytery claiming its prophetic voice.

ACSWP ADVICE AND COUNSEL ON ITEM 18-01

Advice and Counsel on Item 18-01—From the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP).

The original purpose, biblical substance, and ecumenical importance of Belhar deserve serious consideration and we concur with the Advocacy Committee on Racial Ethnic Concerns. Nothing among the church’s criteria for considering confessions, however, should rule out re-consideration of a confession, particularly one that has received majority support among the presbyteries.

We trust the committee will examine carefully the procedures for admitting confessions into The Book of Confessions, yet in the broadest sense, the committee is called upon to assess the needs of both the church and society at this time, as well as the theological “fit” of Belhar within that written embodiment of the Reformed tradition.

A framework for considering a re-circulation of the Belhar Confession to the church contains at least these several factors:

1. What kind of confession is Belhar, in its initial context, and what purposes would it serve in the current U.S. context, given that it assumes a national responsibility for the church?

The purposes of Belhar in 1980s South Africa and today, in the United States:

a. Presbyterian theological historian Eugene TeSelle identified several main purposes of confessional statements: “controversial” confessions, which challenge and are primarily prophetic in nature; teaching documents such as catechisms; “reforming” confessions addressed most to the church itself; “church-founding” confessions that justify a new formation; “irenic” (peace-making, or union-celebrating) confessions; and “apologetic” confessions (defending faith and practice to outsiders). (See Eugene TeSelle, “C-67 and the Book of Confessions,” in Church & Society, 92:5, 2002, pp. 44–45.)

b. Simply put, Belhar served a prophetic and reforming task during the theological struggle against apartheid in South Africa, a task somewhat paralleled by the Kairos Document (South Africa), and a task modeled on the Barmen Declaration of 1930s Germany.

c. In the PC(USA), the initial concern for a confession that would address continuing racial ethnic challenges—including perhaps immigration concerns today—was seen as addressed from the South African context. Although Belhar has not been accepted by all churches within South Africa, it is a clear affirmation of the unity of the church against the church-dividing threat of racism. Race clearly remains a, if not the, primary dividing line in the culture of the United States, and is a salient factor in social divisions around the globe.

2. What are the primary challenges to the faith and witness of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) today that a church, “reforming, and always to be reformed,” should address? Our confessions, for example, are to give content to the common phrase, “missional.” What are the dimensions of mission that Belhar, or any new confession, should help us address?

Current Challenges to Faith other than Race:

a. Economic divisions structure all aspects of life in the U.S. as inequality grows and political capacity for change is weakened by the dominance of personal and corporate wealth in campaigns. A “no-tax” pledge functions as a confession of faith for many; the concept of a common good to be served by a democratic government is examined in Item 11-09: “World of Hurt, Word of Life: Renewing God’s Communion in the Work of Economic Reconstruction.”

b. Divisions over the status of sexual orientation and sexual practice: clearly these matters are a driving force in the PC(USA) and several other denominations today. Do they have effective confessional status as church-dividing issues, given that The Book of Confessions may be accepted by Presbyterians on both of the primary “sides” of the sexuality debate? The corporate nature of the PC(USA) is clearly at stake in these debates, but structure alone may not be a confessional issue.

c. Gender inequality and a deeper analysis of patriarchy: few confessional statements address the profound, even primal, influence of gender differentiation and how it has functioned within church and society.

d. Ecological destruction: this is the primary physical threat to creaturely existence on the planet and is intensifying due to the spread of consumer aspirations around the globe. A “next” church, at most basic level, needs to be a “green church.”

3. What are the ecumenical considerations that accompany the placement of Belhar, or any other confession, in The Book of Confessions? (We do not address interfaith dimensions that would necessarily, in our view, require an ecumenical body to consider.)

Ecumenical Considerations:

a. Adopting the Belhar Confession would be an act of solidarity with churches in South Africa and elsewhere in the World Communion of Reformed Churches, and could contribute to the theological unity within this family.

b. Adopting Belhar could contribute to ecumenical deliberations over the theological significance of racism in the U.S. context, such as have been debated within the Churches Uniting in Christ ecumenical project.

c. The United Church of Christ and the Christian Church (Disciples of Christ), non-confessional Reformed bodies, unlike the Reformed Church in America and the Christian Reformed Church in North America, have not considered Belhar.

4. What other confessions would be considered if we understand that the broader Reformed and Christian family has lessons to teach the church in North America?

Other Confessions or Declarations of Faith:

a. The Accra Statement of the then-World Alliance of Reformed Churches in 2004, received for guidance but not approved by the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) in 2006, bears a clear “family resemblance” to Belhar. Both show the influence of Barmen, and both address church-dividing issues. In Accra’s case, this is the economic threat of global inequality, intensified by anti-regulatory forms of globalization. Its warnings about a financial system dominating and unbalancing social considerations were reinforced by the credit collapse of 2008. Yet it has not been given confessional status by many European and North American members of the World Communion of Reformed Churches, and was not termed a confession at its adoption by the WCRC. At the same time, it was the outcome of a “processus confessionis,” and involved a wide process of debate within the Reformed family. A “Covenanting for Justice” process continues the work of Accra and cooperates with study teams of the World Council of Churches and Lutheran World Federation (http://www.pcusa.org/resource/message-colloquium-accra-and-belhar-confessions/ and http://www.pcusa.org/media/uploads/hunger/pdf/accra-confession.pdf).

b. The Kairos Palestine document adopted by a notably ecumenical body of Christian leaders on December 11, 2009, represents a carefully wrought declaration of theological resistance to the occupation and de-humanization of Arab Christians and Muslims. It is steadfastly non-violent and based in a “logic of love;” it addresses issues of power, justice, and the mission of the church in some unprecedented ways. Though calling for liberation, it is not only liberation theology, and while calling for actions of economic solidarity strongly opposed by the Israeli government, it is not only a document of courage and resistance. Its understandings of faith and hope speak to ways that all churches must combine tradition and renewal with an integrity that stands against cultures and politics of domination (http://www.pcusa.org/resource/kairos-palestine-document-and-study-guide/).

c. A Social Creed for the 21st Century, adopted by both the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) in 2008 and the National Council of Churches of Christ in the U.S.A., distilled the social teachings of the church in a Trinitarian theological framework of one page. This document built on the 100 year tradition of social creeds going back to the first adopted in 1908 in response to industrialization and urbanization in the U.S., and identifies a range of current challenges and core resources of Christian faith (http://www.pcusa.org/resource/connecting-creed/).

Conclusion

The confessions in The Book of Confessions set a high standard for all subsequent confessions, though comprehensiveness is not a requirement. New confessions can depend upon the older confessions’ more comprehensive treatment of the faith when they sharpen our focus, as The Confession of 1967 did on “the mission of reconciliation,” or A Brief Statement of Faith did on liturgical and narrative summary. Thus the relatively sharp issue foci of Belhar (or the broader Accra) would not disqualify it from adoption.

The confessions tune and train the church’s theological voice; they are the basis for its social witness policies; and they are intended to be reflected in the mission programs and structures of the church, locally, nationally and internationally. Above all, confessions help the church understand the purposes of its unity for witness in, but not of, and sometimes against the world: they identify the primary antagonists to faithful discipleship. If the Belhar Confession is not the best way to address these concerns at this time for the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), we would encourage this committee to write a brief report summarizing its own reading of the “signs of the times” today for an occasion when the church can again take up a confessional task, perhaps in another time of ecumenical engagement or a new form of church union in the face of new world challenges.

ACREC ADVICE AND COUNSEL ON ITEM 18-01

Advice and Counsel on Overture 18-01—From the Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns (ACREC).

The Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns advises that the 220th General Assembly (2012) approve Item 18-01 as amended, to include the following recommendation:

“[That the special committee formed to study the Confession of Belhar in preparation for bringing recommendations to the 221st General Assembly (2014) regarding its possible inclusion in The Book of Confessions be granted a budget for education across the church about the confession, in addition to its committee budget for direct expenses.]”

Rationale

The original overture passed by the 219th General Assembly (2010) was defeated by a slim margin of the two/thirds vote of the presbyteries needed to pass, and we believe including its witness in our confessional standards is too important and powerful to founder on such a small margin.

In addition, we believe that a more robust educational program is necessary for the church to responsibly engage the question of Belhar’s suitability for The Book of Confessions. We believe the lack of an educational mandate (with accompanying resources) for the previous special committee on Belhar, as has been provided in other cases (like the nFOG task force, for example), calls the validity of the church’s discernment against Belhar into question.

GAMC COMMENT ON ITEM 18-01

Comment on Item 18-01—From the General Assembly Mission Council.

Item 18-01 seeks to amend The Book of Confessions by adding to it the Confession of Belhar.

In its confessions, the church, “… declares to its members and to the world who and what it is, what it believes, and what it resolves to do …” (Book of Order, F-2.01).

The Belhar Confession is a confession of the Uniting Reformed Church of Southern Africa that comes to us from apartheid South Africa in the 1980s. In September 2011 the Uniting Reformed Church celebrated the 25th anniversary of its passage (http://www.vgksa.org.za/documents/BELHAR%20CELEBRATIONS%20PROGRAM.doc). Belhar’s strong witness to the unity of the church as both a gift and obligation (especially in a context where apartheid divided the church) has spoken to Christians around the world, particularly in the World Communion of Reformed Churches (WCRC). Many in the WCRC have adopted Belhar, including the Reformed Church in America and the Christian Reformed Church.
The 216th General Assembly (2004) called upon Presbyterians to confront the sin of racism in our history and in our midst. It urged presbyteries and congregations to study the Belhar confession as a way to deepen commitment to dealing with racism and strengthen our unity. Study materials were developed by the Office of Theology and Worship of the General Assembly Mission Council in printed and electronic formats. The 217th General Assembly (2008) approved the recommendation of the Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns that a special committee be appointed to consider whether the Belhar Confession should be included in The Book of Confessions. The special committee did recommend inclusion of the Belhar Confession to the 219th General Assembly (2010) and the assembly concurred. This amendment to The Book of Confessions to add Belhar was sent to the presbyteries and failed to receive the required 2/3 vote (108 affirmative, 63 negative; passage would have required 116 affirmative votes).

Because of the defeat of the amendment following the 219th General Assembly (2010), the process to amend The Book of Confessions would need to start over, requiring this assembly to affirm the creation of a special committee, that special committee to recommend Belhar’s addition to The Book of Confessions, a subsequent assembly to affirm Belhar’s inclusion, an affirmative vote from 2/3 of the presbyteries, and then a final confirmation vote from a third General Assembly (See “Amending The Book of Confessions,” G-6.03).

The question before this assembly is whether or not to begin again the process to discern whether the Confession of Belhar helps the PC(USA) declare “… to its members and to the world who and what it is, what it believes, and what it resolves to do …” (Book of Order, F-2.01).

Item 18-02

[The assembly approved Item 18-02 with amendment. See pp. 10, 11.]

On Setting Aside Time to Study The Book of Confessions in Preparation for a Celebration in 2016—From the Presbytery of the Cascades.

The Presbytery of the Cascades overtures the 220th General Assembly (2012) to encourage every presbytery [and congregation] to set aside time to study The Book of Confessions in preparation for the grand celebration in 2016.

Rationale

The 222nd General Assembly (2016) of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) will be meeting in Portland, Oregon. Portland was the site of the 1967 General Assembly at which the Confession of 1967 and the concept of The Book of Confessions were approved. The Presbytery of the Cascades is preparing for this 2016 meeting of General Assembly by setting aside the next three years to study each of the confessions found in The Book of Confessions.

Item 18-03

[The assembly approved Item 18-03 with amendment. See pp. 10, 11.]

The General Assembly Special Committee on the Heidelberg Catechism recommends that the 220th General Assembly (2012) do the following:

1. Approve the proposed new translation of the Heidelberg Catechism, with accompanying Scriptural references [immediately following each question and answer], as amendments to The Book of Confessions, and direct the Stated Clerk to send the proposed amended Heidelberg Catechism to the presbyteries for their affirmative or negative votes by July 2013.

2. Dismiss the Special Committee on the Heidelberg Catechism [with thanks].

Rationale

The 219th General Assembly (2010) took the following actions:

1. Appoint the presently constituted Special Committee on the Heidelberg Catechism to recommend to the 220th General Assembly (2012) a new translation of the present Heidelberg Catechism in The Book of Confessions in cooperation with the Christian Reformed Church in North America (CRCNA) and the Reformed Church of America (RCA).

2. Instruct the Special Committee on the Heidelberg Catechism to consider inclusion of appropriate Scriptural citations. … (Minutes, 2010, Part I, p. 1209 of the electronic version; p. 387 of the printed version)

The composition of the special committee is as follows:

The Reverend Heidi Husted Armstrong of Tacoma, Washington; the Reverend Warner M. Bailey of Fort Worth, Texas; Elder Dawn DeVries of Richmond, Virginia; Elder Sylvia Dooling of Loveland, Colorado; the Reverend James Edwards of Spokane, Washington; the Reverend Christopher Elwood of Louisville, Kentucky; the Reverend Gary Neal Hansen of Dubuque, Iowa; Elder Susan Haskell of Birmingham, Alabama; Elder Patrick Hunt of San Francisco, California; Elder David Todd Mulford of Baton Rouge, Louisiana; the Reverend Shelly Barrick Parsons of Morgantown, West Virginia; the Reverend Neal D. Presa of Middlesex, New Jersey; the Reverend Lorna Shoemaker of Indianapolis, Indiana; the Reverend David Stubbs of Holland, Michigan; the Reverend Floretta Watkins of Charlotte, North Carolina.

The Reverend Neal D. Presa served as chair.

The special committee was staffed by the Reverend Thomas Hay of the Office of the General Assembly and the Reverend Charles Wiley of the Office of Theology Worship and Education (General Assembly Mission Council).

A. Work of the Special Committee

Regarding Recommendation 1 of our mandate, the special committee continued work with representatives of the Christian Reformed Church in North America (CRCNA) and the Reformed Church of America (RCA) in finalizing a common new translation of the Heidelberg Catechism that was in keeping with the original 16th century versions of the catechism.

Consequently, the special committee unanimously approved the common new translation and recommends this new translation to the 220th General Assembly (2012). The CRCNA and the RCA, in their respective national synods, have approved the new translation.

Regarding Recommendation 2 of our mandate, the committee decided to restore the Scripture citations that were originally published with the catechism in 1563. Other current translations either have no Scripture citations (as is the case in the present version in The Book of Confessions) or include sets of citations developed by modern interpreters. Our hope has been to give the catechism back to the church in full as it was first presented, with the Scripture citations that allow the readers to explore the text in conversation with the texts of the Bible that informed the people who wrote it.

The special committee was divided into three subgroups, with each subgroup carefully and meticulously analyzing the scriptural references in the 1563 German and Latin editions of the Catechism. Because the Latin edition provided versification to scriptural references whereas the German edition used only book and chapter reference, the special committee decided to use the Latin edition as the “base” text. In some instances, the Latin edition corrected citations in the German edition, omitted some of the citations that were in the German, added citations not found in the German, or shifted citations in the German edition to another part of the given section of the catechism. From the beginning, the special committee sought to retain the historical accuracy of the scriptural reference as found in both the German and Latin editions, and used the following textual notation markers:

- Citations in ordinary type reflect the citations of the Latin where the Latin simply adds verse numbers to a citation found in the German.
- Citations in italics indicate texts present in the German original but omitted from the Latin edition.
- Citations in bold indicate texts not found in the German original but added in the Latin edition.
- Square brackets [ ] indicate the present editors’ corrections of apparent typographical errors in the 1563 texts as well as necessary clarifications.

As noted above, the special committee did make editorial corrections where there was an apparent typographical error in the 1563 texts; such practice was done very sparingly and after extensive and intensive committee deliberations, careful verification of the 1563 texts, and reviewing cited Scripture texts with their scriptural context.

Subgroups met via teleconference and corresponded electronically, then exchanged their work with the other subgroups as the whole special committee held a face-to-face meeting, March 7–9, 2011, in Louisville, Kentucky. The special committee unanimously approved the scriptural references, pending further double checking by the subgroup leaders and committee chair.
A subsequent round of review and editing by the subgroup leaders and committee chair further refined the scriptural references.

The whole committee reviewed the re-edited scriptural references, submitted further suggestions, and the whole committee approved the scriptural references as is being presented to the assembly.

The special committee conferred with representatives of the Office of the General Assembly to ensure that the scriptural references could be printed underneath each corresponding Question-and-Answer, with the citations pegged to the pertinent line of the catechism, all to make them more usable by readers. Also, the special committee has proposed updated language for a revised historical-theological introduction for this new translation that would be included in a reprinted version of The Book of Confessions, if the way be clear with the approval of this catechism by the assembly and ratification by presbyteries.

B. Closing Words

What began in 2008 by action of the 218th General Assembly to review proposed corrections to five sections of the catechism has resulted in a monumental and historic project involving three Reformed churches in North America, an ecumenical partnership that bears witness to our common commitment to seek the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace, and which appropriately recognizes the Heidelberg Catechism on the eve of its 450th anniversary in 2013 as a chief standard of Reformed confessional documents because of its widespread liturgical, catechetical, and devotional usage in North America and throughout the world.

It is our hope that this new translation and the accompanying Scriptural references, coupled with the worldwide celebration of the 450th anniversary of the catechism in 2013, will spark renewed interest in studying the Reformed tradition and appreciation of its evangelical message of God’s deliverance through our Mediator Jesus Christ.

Attachment—Proposed New Translation of Heidelberg Catechism with Scripture References and Editorial Notation in Preface

[Below is the editorial notation that would be printed as a preface on its own page following a revised historical-theological introduction.]

The biblical citations in this text are those found in the German 3rd edition of 1563 and the Latin translation of 1563. The citations in the German 3rd edition include book and chapter without verse numbers, inviting the reader to use the Catechism as an aid to the study of larger passages of Scripture. The citations in the Latin edition are often a place to begin reading on a topic, or the conclusion of a relevant passage, rather than simple proof-texts. Placement of the notes varies slightly in the German, the Latin, and here in English according to the nature of the language.

Here, citations in ordinary type reflect the citations of the Latin where the Latin simply adds verse numbers.

Citations in italics indicate texts present in the German original but omitted from the Latin edition.

Citations in bold indicate texts not found in the German original but added in the Latin edition.

Square brackets [ ] indicate the present editors’ corrections of apparent typographical errors in the 1563 texts as well as necessary clarifications.

LORD’S DAY 1

1 Q. What is your only comfort in life and in death?

A. That I am not my own, 1 but belong—body and soul, in life and in death— 2 to my faithful Savior, Jesus Christ. 3 He has fully paid for all my sins with his precious blood, 4 and has set me free from the tyranny of the devil. 5 He also watches over me in such a way 6 that not a hair can fall from my head without the will of my Father in heaven; 7 in fact, all things must work together for my salvation. 8 Because I belong to him, Christ, by his Holy Spirit, assures me of eternal life 9 and makes me wholeheartedly willing and ready from now on to live for him. 10

Q. How do you come to know your misery?

A. The law of God tells me.

1 Rom. 3:20

Q. What does God’s law require of us?

A. Christ teaches us this in summary in Matthew 22:37-40: “You shall love the Lord your God with all your heart, and with all your soul, and with all your mind.” This is the greatest and first commandment. And a second is like it: ‘You shall love your neighbor as yourself.’ On these two commandments hang all the law and the prophets.”

Q. Can you live up to all this perfectly?

A. No. I have a natural tendency to hate God and my neighbor.

1 Rom. 3:10; 3:23; 1 Jn. 1:8
2 Rom. 8:7; Eph. 2:3

LORD’S DAY 3

Q. Did God create people so wicked and perverse?

A. No. God created them good and in his own image, that is, in true righteousness and holiness, so that they might truly know God their creator, love him with all their heart, and live with God in eternal happiness, to praise and glorify him.

1 Gen. 1:31
2 Gen. 1:26-27
3 2 Cor. 3:18; Col. 3:10; Eph. 4:24

Q. Then where does this corrupt human nature come from?

A. The fall and disobedience of our first parents, Adam and Eve, in Paradise. This fall has so poisoned our nature that we are all conceived and born in a sinful condition.

1 Gen. 3; Rom. 5:12, 18–19
2 Ps. 51:5; Gen. 5:3

Q. But are we so corrupt that we are totally unable to do any good and inclined toward all evil?

A. Yes, unless we are born again by the Spirit of God.

1 Jn. 3:6; Gen. 6:5; Job 14:4; 15:16; [35]; Isa. 53:6
2 Jn. 3:5

LORD’S DAY 4

Q. But doesn’t God do us an injustice by requiring in his law what we are unable to do?

A. No. God created human beings with the ability to keep the law. They, however, provoked by the devil, in willful disobedience, robbed themselves and all their descendants of these gifts.

1 Eph. 4:22–23, 24–25
2 Lk. 10:30–37
10 Q. Does God permit such disobedience and rebellion to go unpunished?

A. Certainly not.1 God is terribly angry with the sin we are born with as well as the sins we personally commit. As a just judge, God will punish them both now and in eternity, having declared: “Cursed is everyone who does not observe and obey all the things written in the book of the law.”2

1 Rom. 5:12; Heb. 9:27
2 Deut. 27:26; Gal. 3:10

11 Q. But isn’t God also merciful?

A. God is certainly merciful,1 but also just.2 God’s justice demands that sin, committed against his supreme majesty, be punished with the supreme penalty—eternal punishment of body and soul.

1 Ex. 34:6
2 Ex. 20:5; Ps. 5:5; 2 Cor. 6:14

Part II: Deliverance

LORD’S DAY 5

12 Q. According to God’s righteous judgment we deserve punishment both now and in eternity: how then can we escape this punishment and return to God’s favor?

A. God requires that his justice be satisfied.1 Therefore the claims of this justice must be paid in full, either by ourselves or by another.2

1 Ex. 20:5; 23:7
2 Rom. 8:3–4

13 Q. Can we make this payment ourselves?

A. Certainly not. Actually, we increase our debt every day.1

1 Job 9:3; 15:15; Mt. 6:12

14 Q. Can another creature—any at all—pay this debt for us?

A. No. To begin with, God will not punish any other creature for what a human is guilty of.1 Furthermore, no mere creature can bear the weight of God’s eternal wrath against sin and deliver others from it.2

1 Heb. 2:14
2 Ps. 130:3

15 Q. What kind of mediator and deliverer should we look for then?

A. One who is a true1 and righteous human,2 yet more powerful than all creatures, that is, one who is also true God.3

1 1 Cor. 15:21
2 Jer. 33:15; Isa. 53:9; Ps. 53; 2 Cor. 5:21
3 Heb. 7:15–16; Isa. 7:14; Rom. 8:3; Jer. 23:6

LORD’S DAY 6

16 Q. Why must the mediator be a true and righteous human?

A. God’s justice demands that human nature, which has sinned, must pay for sin;1 but a sinful human could never pay for others.2

1 Rom. 5:12, 15
2 1 Pet. 3:18; Isa. 53:3-5, 10–11

17 Q. Why must the mediator also be true God?

A. So that the mediator, by the power of his divinity, might bear the weight of God’s wrath in his humanity1 and earn for us and restore to us righteousness and life.2

1 Isa. 53:8; Acts 2:24; 1 Pet. 3:18
2 Jn. 3:16; 1 Jn. 1:2, 4:12; Acts 20:18 [28]; Jn. 1:14, 12

18 Q. Then who is this mediator—true God and at the same time a true and righteous human?
A. Our Lord Jesus Christ, who was given to us to completely deliver us and make us right with God.

1 Mt. 1:23; 1 Tim. 3:16; Lk. 2:11
2 1 Cor. 1:30

19 Q. How do you come to know this?
A. The holy gospel tells me. God began to reveal the gospel already in Paradise; later God proclaimed it by the holy patriarchs and prophets and foreshadowed it by the sacrifices and other ceremonies of the law; and finally God fulfilled it through his own beloved Son.

1 Gen. 3:15
3 Jn. 5:46; Heb. 10:7 [1–10]
4 Rom. 10:4; Gal. 4:4

LORD’S DAY 7

20 Q. Are all people then saved through Christ just as they were lost through Adam?
A. No. Only those are saved who through true faith are grafted into Christ and accept all his benefits.

1 Jn. 1:12; 3:36; Isa. 53:11; Ps. 2:11[–12]; Rom. 11:17, 19; Heb. 4:2; 10:39

21 Q. What is true faith?
A. True faith is not only a sure knowledge by which I hold as true all that God has revealed to us in Scripture; it is also a wholehearted trust, which the Holy Spirit creates in me by the gospel, that God has freely granted, not only to others but to me also, forgiveness of sins, eternal righteousness, and salvation. These are gifts of sheer grace, granted solely by Christ’s merit.

1 Heb. 11:1, 3; Jas. 2:19
2 Rom. 4:16[–25]; Jas. 1:6; Rom. 5:1; Rom. 10[:9–10]
3 2 Cor. 4[:6, 13]; Eph. 2[:8, 18]; Mt. 16:17; Jn. 3[:5–13]; Gal. 5:22; Phil. 1:29
4 Rom. 1:16; 10:17
5 Heb. 2[:9–11]; Rom. 1[:16]; Heb. 10:38; Hab. 2:4; Mt. 9:2; Eph. 2:7–9; Rom. 5:1
6 Eph. 2[:8]; Rom. 3:24–25; Gal. 2:16

22 Q. What then must a Christian believe?
A. All that is promised us in the gospel, a summary of which is taught us in the articles of our universal and undisputed Christian faith.

1 Jn. 20:31; Mt. 28:20

23 Q. What are these articles?
A. I believe in God, the Father almighty, creator of heaven and earth. I believe in Jesus Christ, his only begotten Son, our Lord, who was conceived by the Holy Spirit and born of the virgin Mary. He suffered under Pontius Pilate, was crucified, died, and was buried; he descended to hell. The third day he rose again from the dead. He ascended to heaven and is seated at the right hand of God the Father almighty. From there he will come to judge the living and the dead. I believe in the Holy Spirit, the holy catholic church, the communion of saints, the forgiveness of sins, the resurrection of the body, and the life everlasting. Amen.

LORD’S DAY 8

24 Q. How are these articles divided?
A. Into three parts: God the Father and our creation; God the Son and our deliverance; and God the Holy Spirit and our sanctification.

25 Q. Since there is only one divine being, why do you speak of three: Father, Son, and Holy Spirit?
A. Because that is how God has revealed himself in his Word; these three distinct persons are one, true, eternal God.

1 Deut. 6:4
2 Isa. 61:1; Ps. 110:1; Mt. 3:16–17; Mt. 28:19; 1 Jn. 5:7[–8]
God the Father

LORD’S DAY 9

26 Q. What do you believe when you say, “I believe in God, the Father almighty, creator of heaven and earth”?

A. That the eternal Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, who out of nothing created heaven and earth and everything in them,1 who still upholds and rules them by his eternal counsel and providence,2 is my God and Father because of Christ the Son.3 I trust God so much that I do not doubt he will provide whatever I need for body and soul,4 and will turn to my good whatever adversity he sends upon me in this sad world.5 God is able to do this because he is almighty God6 and desires to do this because he is a faithful Father.7

1 Gen. 1; Ps. 33:6
2 Ps. 104; Ps. 115:3; Mt. 10:29; Heb. 1:3
3 Jn. 1:12; Rom. 8:15; Gal. 4:5–7; Eph. 1:5
4 Ps. 55:22; Mt. 6:25–26; Luke 12:22
5 Rom. 8:28
6 Rom. 10:12
7 Mt. 6:32; 7:9

LORD’S DAY 10

27 Q. What do you understand by the providence of God?

A. The almighty and ever present power of God1 by which God upholds, as with his hand, heaven and earth and all creatures, and so rules them2 that leaf and blade, rain and drought, fruitful and lean years, food and drink,3 health and sickness,4 prosperity and poverty—5 all things, in fact, come to us not by chance but by his fatherly hand.

1 Acts 17:25–28
2 Heb. 1:3
3 Jer. 5:24; Acts 14:17
4 Jn. 9:3
5 Prov. 22:2

28 Q. How does the knowledge of God’s creation and providence help us?

A. We can be patient when things go against us,1 thankful when things go well,2 and for the future we can have good confidence in our faithful God and Father3 that nothing in creation will separate us from his love.4 For all creatures are so completely in God’s hand that without his will they can neither move nor be moved.5

1 Rom. 5:3; Jas. 1:3; Job 1:21
2 Deut. 8:10; 1 Thess. 5:18
3 Rom. 5:5–6
4 Rom. 8:38–39
5 Job 1:12; 2:6; Acts 17:28; Prov. 21:1

God the Son

LORD’S DAY 11

29 Q. Why is the Son of God called “Jesus,” meaning “savior”?

A. Because he saves us from our sins,1 and because salvation should not be sought and cannot be found in anyone else.2

1 Mt. 1:21; Heb. 7:25
2 Acts 4:12
30 Q. Do those who look for their salvation in saints, in themselves, or elsewhere really believe in the only savior Jesus?

A. No. Although they boast of being his, by their actions they deny the only savior, Jesus. Either Jesus is not a perfect savior, or those who in true faith accept this savior have in him all they need for their salvation.

1 1 Cor. 1:13, 31; Gal. 3:1–4; Gal. 5:4
2 Heb. 12:2; Isa. 9:6; Col. 1:19–20; 2:10; Jn. 1:16

LORD’S DAY 12

31 Q. Why is he called “Christ,” meaning “anointed”?

A. Because he has been ordained by God the Father and has been anointed with the Holy Spirit to be our chief prophet and teacher who fully reveals to us the secret counsel and will of God concerning our deliverance; our only high priest who has delivered us by the one sacrifice of his body, and who continually pleads our cause with the Father; and our eternal king who governs us by his Word and Spirit, and who guards us and keeps us in the freedom he has won for us.

1 Ps. 45:7; Heb. 1:9
2 Deut. 18:15; Acts 3:22
3 Jn. 1:18; 15:15
4 Ps. 110; Heb. 7:21; 10:12
5 Rom. 8:34; 5:9–10
6 Ps. 2:6; Lk. 1:33; Mt. 28:18; Jn. 10:28

32 Q. But why are you called a Christian?

A. Because by faith I am a member of Christ and so I share in his anointing. I am anointed to confess his name, to present myself to him as a living sacrifice of thanks, to strive with a free conscience against sin and the devil in this life, and afterward to reign with Christ over all creation for eternity.

1 Acts 11:26, 1 Cor. 6:15
2 1 Jn. 2:27; Isa. 59:21; Acts 2:17; Joel 2:28; Mark 8:[34–]38
3 Rom. 12:1; Rev. 5:8[–14]; 1 Pet. 2:9
4 Rom. 6:12; Rev. 1:6
5 1 Tim. 1:19
6 2 Tim. 2:12

LORD’S DAY 13

33 Q. Why is he called God’s “only begotten Son” when we also are God’s children?

A. Because Christ alone is the eternal, natural Son of God. We, however, are adopted children of God—adopted by grace through Christ.

1 Jn. 1:29; Heb. 1:2
2 Rom. 8:15; Eph. 1:[5–]6

34 Q. Why do you call him “our Lord”?

A. Because—not with gold or silver, but with his precious blood—he has set us free from sin and from the tyranny of the devil, and has bought us, body and soul, to be his very own.

1 1 Pet. 1:18–19; 2:9; 1 Cor. 6:20; 7:23

LORD’S DAY 14

35 Q. What does it mean that he “was conceived by the Holy Spirit and born of the virgin Mary”?
A. That the eternal Son of God, who is and remains true and eternal God, took to himself, through the working of the Holy Spirit, from the flesh and blood of the virgin Mary, a truly human nature so that he might also become David’s true descendant, like his brothers and sisters in every way except for sin.

1 Jn. 1:1; 17:5; Rom. 1:4
2 Rom. 9:5; Gal. 4:4
3 Mt. 1:18, 20; Luke 1:27, 35; Eph. 1
4 John 1:14; Gal. 4:4
5 Ps. 132:11; Rom. 1:3
6 Phil. 2:7
7 Heb. 4:15; 7:26

36 Q. How does the holy conception and birth of Christ benefit you?

A. He is our mediator and, in God’s sight, he covers with his innocence and perfect holiness my sinfulness in which I was conceived.

1 Heb. 2:16–17
2 Ps. 32:1; 1 Cor. 1:30

LORD’S DAY 15

37 Q. What do you understand by the word “suffered”?

A. That during his whole life on earth, but especially at the end, Christ sustained in body and soul the wrath of God against the sin of the whole human race. This he did in order that, by his suffering as the only atoning sacrifice, he might deliver us, body and soul, from eternal condemnation, and gain for us God’s grace, righteousness, and eternal life.

1 1 Pet. 2:24; 3:18; Isa. 53:12
2 1 Jn. 2:2; 4:10; Rom. 3:25

38 Q. Why did he suffer “under Pontius Pilate” as judge?

A. So that he, though innocent, might be condemned by an earthly judge, and so free us from the severe judgment of God that was to fall on us.

1 Lk. 23:14; Jn. 19:4
2 Ps. 69:5; Isa. 53; 2 Cor. 5:21; Gal. 3:13

39 Q. Is it significant that he was “crucified” instead of dying some other way?

A. Yes. By this I am convinced that he shouldered the curse which lay on me, since death by crucifixion was cursed by God.

1 Gal. 3:10
2 Deut. 21:23; Gal. 3:13

LORD’S DAY 16

40 Q. Why did Christ have to suffer death?

A. Because God’s justice and truth require it: nothing else could pay for our sins except the death of the Son of God.

1 Gen. 2:17
2 Heb. 2:9, 15; Phil. 2:8

41 Q. Why was he “buried”?

A. His burial testifies that he really died.

1 Acts 13:29; Mt. 27:60; Lk. 23:50–53; Jn. 19:38–42
42 Q. Since Christ has died for us, why do we still have to die?
A. Our death does not pay the debt of our sins. Rather, it puts an end to our sinning and is our entrance into eternal life.¹

43 Q. What further benefit do we receive from Christ’s sacrifice and death on the cross?
A. By Christ’s power our old selves are crucified, put to death, and buried with him,¹ so that the evil desires of the flesh may no longer rule us,² but that instead we may offer ourselves as a sacrifice of gratitude to him.³

¹ Rom. 6:6–8, 11–12; Col. 2:11–12
² Rom. 6:12
³ Rom. 12:1

44 Q. Why does the creed add, “He descended to hell”?
A. To assure me during attacks of deepest dread and temptation that Christ my Lord, by suffering unspeakable anguish, pain, and terror of soul, on the cross but also earlier, has delivered me from hellish anguish and torment.¹

LORD’S DAY 17

45 Q. How does Christ’s resurrection benefit us?
A. First, by his resurrection he has overcome death, so that he might make us share in the righteousness he obtained for us by his death.¹ Second, by his power we too are already raised to a new life.² Third, Christ’s resurrection is a sure pledge to us of our blessed resurrection.³

² Rom. 6:4; Col. 3:1–5; Eph. 2:5
³ 1 Cor. 15:12; Rom. 8:11

LORD’S DAY 18

46 Q. What do you mean by saying, “He ascended to heaven”?
A. That Christ, while his disciples watched, was taken up from the earth into heaven¹ and remains there on our behalf² until he comes again to judge the living and the dead.³

² Heb. 4:14; 7:15–25; 9:11; Rom. 8:34; Eph. 4:10; Col. 3:1
³ Acts 1:11; Mt. 24:30

47 Q. But isn’t Christ with us until the end of the world as he promised us?¹
A. Christ is true human and true God. In his human nature Christ is not now on earth;² but in his divinity, majesty, grace, and Spirit he is never absent from us.³

² Mt. 26:11; Jn. 16:28; 17:11; Acts 3:21
³ Jn. 14:17–19; 16:13; Mt. 28:20; Eph. 4:8, 12; also cited: Augustine, Tractates on the Gospel of John 50

48 Q. If his humanity is not present wherever his divinity is, then aren’t the two natures of Christ separated from each other?
A. Certainly not. Since divinity is not limited and is present everywhere,¹ it is evident that Christ’s divinity is surely beyond the bounds of the humanity that has been taken on, but at the same time his divinity is in and remains personally united to his humanity.²

² Col. 2:9; Jn. 3:13; 11:15; Mt. 28:6
49 Q. How does Christ’s ascension to heaven benefit us?

A. First, he is our advocate in heaven in the presence of his Father. 1 Second, we have our own flesh in heaven as a sure pledge that Christ our head will also take us, his members, up to himself. 2 Third, he sends his Spirit to us on earth as a corresponding pledge. 3 By the Spirit’s power we seek not earthly things but the things above, where Christ is, sitting at God’s right hand. 4

2 Jn. 14:2; 20:17; Eph. 2:6
3 Jn. 14:16; 16:7; Acts 2; 2 Cor. 1:22; 5:5
4 Col. 3:1; Phil. 3:14

LORD’S DAY 19

50 Q. Why the next words: “and is seated at the right hand of God”?

A. Because Christ ascended to heaven to show there that he is head of his church, 1 the one through whom the Father rules all things. 2

1 Eph. 1:20–23; 5:23; Col. 1:18
2 Mt. 28:18; Jn. 5:22

51 Q. How does this glory of Christ our head benefit us?

A. First, through his Holy Spirit he pours out gifts from heaven upon us his members. 1 Second, by his power he defends us and keeps us safe from all enemies. 2

1 Eph. 4:10
2 Ps. 2:9; 110:1-2; John 10:28; Eph. 4:8

52 Q. How does Christ’s return “to judge the living and the dead” comfort you?

A. In all distress and persecution, with uplifted head, I confidently await the very judge who has already offered himself to the judgment of God in my place and removed the whole curse from me. 1 Christ will cast all his enemies and mine into everlasting condemnation, 2 but will take me and all his chosen ones to himself into the joy and glory of heaven. 3

God the Holy Spirit

LORD’S DAY 20

53 Q. What do you believe concerning “the Holy Spirit”?

A. First, that the Spirit, with the Father and the Son, is eternal God. 1 Second, that the Spirit is given also to me, 2 so that, through true faith, he makes me share in Christ and all his benefits, 3 comforts me, 4 and will remain with me forever. 5

4 Acts 9:31
5 Jn. 14:16; 1 Pet. 4:14

LORD’S DAY 21

54 Q. What do you believe concerning “the holy catholic church”?

A. I believe that the Son of God 1 through his Spirit and Word, 2 out of the entire human race, 3 from the beginning of the world to its end, 4 gathers, protects, and preserves for himself, 5 a community chosen for eternal life 6 and united in true faith. 7 And of this community I am 8 and always will be 9 a living member.

7 Acts 2:46; Eph. 4:3–5
8 1 Jn. 3:21; 2 Cor. 13:5
9 1 Jn. 2:19

55 Q. What do you understand by “the communion of saints”?
A. First, that believers one and all, as members of this community, share in Christ and in all his treasures and gifts.1 Second, that each member should consider it a duty to use these gifts readily and joyfully for the service and enrichment of the other members.2

1 Jn. 1:3; 1 Cor. 1:9; Rom. 8:32
2 1 Cor. 6:17; 12:12–21; 13:5; Phil. 2:4–6

56 Q. What do you believe concerning “the forgiveness of sins”?
A. I believe that God, because of Christ’s satisfaction,1 will no longer remember any of my sins or my sinful nature which I need to struggle against all my life.2 Rather, by grace God grants me the righteousness of Christ to free me forever from judgment.3

1 1 Jn. 2:2; 2 Cor. 5:19, 21
2 Jer. 31:34; Ps. 103:3, 10–12; Rom. 7:24–25; 8:1–3
3 Jn. 3:18

57 Q. How does “the resurrection of the body” comfort you?
A. Not only will my soul be taken immediately after this life to Christ its head,1 but also my very flesh will be raised by the power of Christ, reunited with my soul, and made like Christ’s glorious body.2

1 Lk. 23:43; Phil. 1:23
2 1 Cor. 15:53–54; Job 19:25–26; 1 Jn. 3:2; Phil. 3:21

58 Q. How does the article concerning “life everlasting” comfort you?
A. Even as I already now experience in my heart the beginning of eternal joy,1 so after this life I will have perfect blessedness such as no eye has seen, no ear has heard, no human heart has ever imagined:2 a blessedness in which to praise God forever.3

1 2 Cor. 5:2–3
2 1 Cor. 2:9
3 John 17

59 Q. What good does it do you, however, to believe all this?
A. In Christ I am righteous before God and heir to life everlasting.1

1 Hab. 2:4; Rom. 1:17; Jn. 3:36

60 Q. How are you righteous before God?
A. Only by true faith in Jesus Christ.1 Even though my conscience accuses me of having grievously sinned against all God’s commandments, of never having kept any of them,2 and of still being inclined toward all evil,3 nevertheless, without any merit of my own, out of sheer grace, God grants and credits to me the perfect satisfaction, righteousness, and holiness of Christ, as if I had never sinned nor been a sinner, and as if I had been as perfectly obedient as Christ was obedient for me. All I need to do is accept this gift with a believing heart.

8 1 Jn. 2:1
9 2 Cor. 5:21
10 Rom. 3:22; Jn. 3:18

61 Q. Why do you say that through faith alone you are righteous?
A. Not because I please God by the worthiness of my faith. It is because only Christ’s satisfaction, righteousness, and holiness make me righteous before God, and because I can accept this righteousness and make it mine in no other way than through faith.

1 1 Cor. 1:30; 2:2
2 1 Jn. 5:10

LORD’S DAY 24

62 Q. Why can’t our good works be our righteousness before God, or at least a part of our righteousness?
A. Because the righteousness which can pass God’s judgment must be entirely perfect and must in every way measure up to the divine law. But even our best works in this life are imperfect and stained with sin.

1 Gal. 3:10; Deut. 27:26
2 Isa. 64:6

63 Q. How can our good works be said to merit nothing when God promises to reward them in this life and the next?
A. This reward is not earned; it is a gift of grace.

1 Luke 17:10

64 Q. But doesn’t this teaching make people indifferent and wicked?
A. No. It is impossible for those grafted into Christ through true faith not to produce fruits of gratitude.

1 Matt. [7]:18

The Holy Sacraments

LORD’S DAY 25

65 Q. It is through faith alone that we share in Christ and all his benefits: where then does that faith come from?
A. The Holy Spirit produces it in our hearts by the preaching of the holy gospel, and confirms it by the use of the holy sacraments.

1 Eph. 2:8; Jn. 3:5
2 Mt. 28:19–20; 1 Pet. 1:22–23

66 Q. What are sacraments?
A. Sacraments are visible, holy signs and seals. They were instituted by God so that by our use of them he might make us understand more clearly the promise of the gospel, and seal that promise. And this is God’s gospel promise: to grant us forgiveness of sins and eternal life by grace because of Christ’s one sacrifice accomplished on the cross.1

1 Gen. 17:11; Rom. 4:11; Deut. 30:6; Lev. 6:25; Heb. 9:8–9, [11–]24; Ezek. 20:12; 1 Sam. 17:36[–37]; Isa. 6:6–7

67 Q. Are both the word and the sacraments then intended to focus our faith on the sacrifice of Jesus Christ on the cross as the only ground of our salvation?

A. Yes! In the gospel the Holy Spirit teaches us and by the holy sacraments confirms that our entire salvation rests on Christ’s one sacrifice for us on the cross.1

1 Rom. 6:3; Gal. 3:27

68 Q. How many sacraments did Christ institute in the New Testament?

A. Two: holy baptism and the holy supper.

Holy Baptism

LORD’S DAY 26

69 Q. How does baptism remind and assure you that Christ’s one sacrifice on the cross benefits you personally?

A. In this way: Christ instituted this outward washing and with it promised that, as surely as water washes away the dirt from the body, so certainly his blood and his Spirit wash away my soul’s impurity, that is, all my sins.1

1 Mk. 1:4; Lk. 3:3

70 Q. What does it mean to be washed with Christ’s blood and Spirit?

A. To be washed with Christ’s blood means that God, by grace, has forgiven our sins because of Christ’s blood poured out for us in his sacrifice on the cross.1 To be washed with Christ’s Spirit means that the Holy Spirit has renewed and sanctified us to be members of Christ, so that more and more we become dead to sin and live holy and blameless lives.2

1 Heb. 12:24; 1 Pet. 1:2; Rev. 1:5; 22:14; Zech. 13:1; Ezek. 36:25
2 Jn. 1:33; 3:5; 1 Cor. 6:11; 12:13; Rom. 6:4; Col. 2:12

71 Q. Where does Christ promise that we are washed with his blood and Spirit as surely as we are washed with the water of baptism?

A. In the institution of baptism, where he says: “Go therefore and make disciples of all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Spirit.”1 “The one who believes and is baptized will be saved; but the one who does not believe will be condemned.”2 This promise is repeated when Scripture calls baptism “the water of rebirth”3 and the washing away of sins.4

2 Mark 16:16
3 Titus 3:5
4 Acts 22:16

LORD’S DAY 27

72 Q. Does this outward washing with water itself wash away sins?

A. No,1 only Jesus Christ’s blood and the Holy Spirit cleanse us from all sins.2

1 Mt. 3:11; 1 Pet. 3:21; Eph. 5:26
2 1 Jn. 1:7; 1 Cor. 6:11

73 Q. Why then does the Holy Spirit call baptism the water of rebirth and the washing away of sins?

A. God has good reason for these words. To begin with, God wants to teach us that the blood and Spirit of Christ take away our sins just as water removes dirt from the body.1 But more important, God wants to assure us, by this divine pledge and sign, that we are as truly washed of our sins spiritually as our bodies are washed with water physically.2
Q. Should infants also be baptized?

A. Yes. Infants as well as adults are included in God’s covenant and people, and they, no less than adults, are promised deliverance from sin through Christ’s blood and the Holy Spirit who produces faith. Therefore, by baptism, the sign of the covenant, they too should be incorporated into the Christian church and distinguished from the children of unbelievers. This was done in the Old Testament by circumcision, which was replaced in the New Testament by baptism.

1 Gen. 17:7
2 Matt. 19:14
4 Acts 10:47
5 Gen. 17:9-14
6 Col. 2:11-13

Q. How does the holy supper remind and assure you that you share in Christ’s one sacrifice on the cross and in all his benefits?

A. In this way: Christ has commanded me and all believers to eat this broken bread and to drink this cup in remembrance of him. With this command come these promises: First, as surely as I see with my eyes the bread of the Lord broken for me and the cup shared with me, so surely his body was offered and broken for me and his blood poured out for me on the cross. Second, as surely as I receive from the hand of the one who serves, and taste with my mouth the bread and cup of the Lord, given me as sure signs of Christ’s body and blood, so surely he nourishes and refreshes my soul for eternal life with his crucified body and poured-out blood.

Q. What does it mean to eat the crucified body of Christ and to drink his poured-out blood?

A. It means to accept with a believing heart the entire suffering and death of Christ and thereby to receive forgiveness of sins and eternal life. But it means more. Through the Holy Spirit, who lives both in Christ and in us, we are united more and more to Christ’s blessed body. And so, although he is in heaven and we are on earth, we are flesh of his flesh and bone of his bone. And we forever live on and are governed by one Spirit, as the members of our body are by one soul.

Q. Where does Christ promise to nourish and refresh believers with his body and blood as surely as they eat this broken bread and drink this cup?

A. In the institution of the Lord’s Supper: “The Lord Jesus, on the night when he was betrayed, took a loaf of bread, and when he had given thanks, he broke it and said, ‘This is my body that is [broken]* for you.’ In the same way he took the cup also, after supper, saying, ‘This cup is the new covenant in my blood; do this, as often as you drink it, in remembrance of me.’ For as often as you eat this bread and drink the cup, you proclaim the Lord’s death until he comes.” This promise is repeated by Paul in these words: “The cup of blessing that we bless, is it not a sharing in the blood of Christ? The bread that we break, is it not a sharing in the body of Christ? Because there is one bread, we who are many are one body, for we all partake of the one bread.”

LORD’S DAY 29

78 Q. Do the bread and wine become the real body and blood of Christ?

A. No. Just as the water of baptism is not changed into Christ’s blood and does not itself wash away sins but is simply a divine sign and assurance of these things,\(^1\) so too the holy bread of the Lord’s Supper does not become the actual body of Christ,\(^2\) even though it is called the body of Christ in keeping with the nature and language of sacraments.\(^3\)

\(^1\) Mt. 26:28–29; Mk. 14:24
\(^2\) 1 Cor. 10:16–17; 11:26–28
\(^3\) Gen. 17:10, 14–19; Ex. 12:27, 43–48; 13:9; 24:8; 29:36; Acts 7:8; 22:16; Lev. 16:10; 17:11; Isa. 6:6–7; Titus 3:5; 1 Pet. 3:21; 1 Cor. 10:1–4

79 Q. Why then does Christ call the bread his body and the cup his blood, or the new covenant in his blood, and Paul use the words, a participation in Christ’s body and blood?

A. Christ has good reason for these words. He wants to teach us that just as bread and wine nourish the temporal life, so too his crucified body and poured-out blood are the true food and drink of our souls for eternal life.\(^1\) But more important, he wants to assure us, by this visible sign and pledge, that we, through the Holy Spirit’s work, share in his true body and blood as surely as our mouths receive these holy signs in his remembrance,\(^2\) and that all of his suffering and obedience are as definitely ours as if we personally had suffered and made satisfaction for our sins.

\(^1\) Jn. 6:51, 55
\(^2\) 1 Cor. 10:16–17

LORD’S DAY 30

80* Q. How does the Lord’s Supper differ from the Roman Catholic Mass?

A. The Lord’s Supper declares to us that all our sins are completely forgiven through the one sacrifice of Jesus Christ, which he himself accomplished on the cross once for all.\(^1\) It also declares to us that the Holy Spirit grafts us into Christ\(^2\) who with his true body is now in heaven at the right hand of the Father\(^3\) where he wants us to worship him.\(^4\) But the Mass teaches that the living and the dead do not have their sins forgiven through the suffering of Christ unless Christ is still offered for them daily by the priests. It also teaches that Christ is bodily present under the form of bread and wine where Christ is therefore to be worshiped. Thus the Mass is basically nothing but a denial of the one sacrifice and suffering of Jesus Christ and a condemnable idolatry.

*Question and Answer 80 reflects the polemical debates of the Reformation and was added in the second German edition of 1563. The second and fourth sentences of the Answer, as well as the concluding phrase, were added in the third German edition of 1563. After the fourth sentence, the third German and Latin texts have a note to the section on consecration in the Canon of the Mass. As detailed in the preface to The Book of Confessions, these condemnations and characterizations of the Catholic Church are not the position of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) and are not applicable to current relationships between the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) and the Catholic Church.

81 Q. Who should come to the Lord’s table?

A. Those who are displeased with themselves because of their sins, but who nevertheless trust that their sins are pardoned and that their remaining weakness is covered by the suffering and death of Christ, and who also desire more and more to strengthen their faith and to lead a better life. Hypocrites and those who are unrepentant, however, eat and drink judgment on themselves.\(^1\)

\(^1\) 1 Cor. 10:21; 11:28–29

82 Q. Should those be admitted to the Lord’s Supper who show by what they profess and how they live that they are unbelieving and ungodly?
A. No, that would dishonor God’s covenant and bring down God’s wrath upon the entire congregation. Therefore, according to the instruction of Christ and his apostles, the Christian church is duty-bound to exclude such people, by the official use of the keys of the kingdom, until they reform their lives.

1 Cor. 11:20, 34; Isa. 1:11; 66:3; Jer. 7:21–26; Ps. 50:16

LORD’S DAY 31

83 Q. What are the keys of the kingdom?

A. The preaching of the holy gospel and Christian discipline toward repentance. Both of them open the kingdom of heaven to believers and close it to unbelievers.

84 Q. How does preaching the holy gospel open and close the kingdom of heaven?

A. According to the command of Christ: The kingdom of heaven is opened by proclaiming and publicly declaring to all believers, each and every one, that, as often as they accept the gospel promise in true faith, God, because of Christ’s merit, truly forgives all their sins. The kingdom of heaven is closed, however, by proclaiming and publicly declaring to unbelievers and hypocrites that, as long as they do not repent, the wrath of God and eternal condemnation rest on them. God’s judgment, both in this life and in the life to come, is based on this gospel testimony.

1 Jn. 20:21–23; Mt. 16:19

85 Q. How is the kingdom of heaven closed and opened by Christian discipline?

A. According to the command of Christ: Those who, though called Christians, profess unchristian teachings or live unchristian lives, and who after repeated personal and loving admonitions, refuse to abandon their errors and evil ways, and who after being reported to the church, that is, to those ordained by the church for that purpose, fail to respond also to the church’s admonitions—such persons the church excludes from the Christian community by withholding the sacraments from them, and God also excludes them from the kingdom of Christ. Such persons, when promising and demonstrating genuine reform, are received again as members of Christ and of his church.

Part III: Gratitude

LORD’S DAY 32

86 Q. Since we have been delivered from our misery by grace through Christ without any merit of our own, why then should we do good works?

A. Because Christ, having redeemed us by his blood, is also restoring us by his Spirit into his image, so that with our whole lives we may show that we are thankful to God for his benefits, so that he may be praised through us, so that we may be assured of our faith by its fruits, and so that by our godly living our neighbors may be won over to Christ.

1 Rom. 6:13; 12:1–2; 1 Pet. 2:5–10; 1 Cor. 6:20
2 Mt. 5:16; 1 Pet. 2:12
3 1 Pet. 1:6–10; Mt. 7:17; Gal. 5:6, 22
4 1 Pet. 3:1–2; Rom. 14:19

87 Q. Can those be saved who do not turn to God from their ungrateful and unrepentant ways?

A. By no means. Scripture tells us that no unchaste person, no idolater, adulterer, thief, no covetous person, no drunkard, slanderer, robber, or the like will inherit the kingdom of God.

1 Cor. 6:9–10; Eph. 5:5–6; 1 Jn. 3:14

LORD’S DAY 33

88 Q. What is involved in genuine repentance or conversion?

A. Two things: the dying-away of the old self, and the rising-to-life of the new.

1 Rom. 6:4–6; Eph. 4:22–24; Col. 3:5–10; 1 Cor. 5:7

89 Q. What is the dying-away of the old self?
A. To be genuinely sorry for sin and more and more to hate and run away from it.¹

¹ Rom. 8:13; Joel 2:13

90 Q. What is the rising-to-life of the new self?
   A. Wholehearted joy in God through Christ¹ and a love and delight to live according to the will of God by doing every kind of good work.²

¹ Rom. 5:1; 14:17; Isa. 57:15
² Rom. 6:10–11; Gal. 2:20

91 Q. What are good works?
   A. Only those which are done out of true faith,¹ conform to God’s law,² and are done for God’s glory;³ and not those based on our own opinion or human tradition.⁴

² 1 Sam. 11; 1 Sam. [15]:22; Eph. 2:10

The Ten Commandments

LORD’S DAY 34

92 Q. What is God’s law?
   A. God spoke all these words:

THE FIRST COMMANDMENT
   “I am the L ORD your God, who brought you out of the land of Egypt, out of the house of slavery; you shall have no other gods before me.”

THE SECOND COMMANDMENT
   “You shall not make for yourself an idol, whether in form of anything that is in heaven above, or that is on the earth beneath, or that is in the water under the earth. You shall not bow down to them or worship them; for I the L ORD your God am a jealous God, punishing children for the iniquity of parents, to the third and fourth generation of those who reject me, but showing love to the thousandth generation of those who love me and keep my commandments.”

THE THIRD COMMANDMENT
   “You shall not make wrongful use of the name of the L ORD your God, for the L ORD will not acquit anyone who misuses his name.”

THE FOURTH COMMANDMENT
   “Remember the Sabbath day and keep it holy. Six days you shall labor and do all your work. But the seventh day is a Sabbath to the L ORD your God; you shall not do any work—you, your son or your daughter, your male or female slave, your livestock, or the alien resident in your towns. For in six days the L ORD made the heaven and earth, the sea, and all that is in them, but rested the seventh day; therefore the L ORD blessed the Sabbath day and consecrated it.”

THE FIFTH COMMANDMENT
   “Honor your father and your mother, so that your days may be long in the land that the L ORD your God is giving to you.”

THE SIXTH COMMANDMENT
   “You shall not murder.”

THE SEVENTH COMMANDMENT
   “You shall not commit adultery.”
THE EIGHTH COMMANDMENT
“You shall not steal.”

THE NINTH COMMANDMENT
“You shall not bear false witness against your neighbor.”

THE TENTH COMMANDMENT
“You shall not covet your neighbor’s house; you shall not covet your neighbor’s wife, or male or female slave, or ox, or donkey, or anything that belongs to your neighbor.”

1 Ex. 20:1–17; Deut. 5:6–21

93 Q. How are these commandments divided?
   A. Into two tables.1 The first has four commandments, teaching us how we ought to live in relation to God. The second has six commandments, teaching us what we owe our neighbor.2

1 Ex. 34:28; Deut. 4:13; 10:3–4
2 Mt. 22:37–39

94 Q. What does the Lord require in the first commandment?
   A. That I, not wanting to endanger my own salvation, avoid and shun all idolatry,1 sorcery, superstitious rites,2 and prayer to saints or to other creatures.3 That I rightly know the only true God,4 trust him alone,5 and look to God for every good thing6 humbly7 and patiently,8 and love,9 fear,10 and honor11 God with all my heart. In short, that I give up anything rather than go against God’s will in any way.12

11 Mt. 4:10; Deut. 10:20
12 Mt. 5:29–30; 10:37; Acts 5:29

95 Q. What is idolatry?
   A. Idolatry is having or inventing something in which one trusts in place of or alongside of the only true God, who has revealed himself in the Word.1

1 Eph. 5:5; 1 Chr. 16:26; Phil. 3:19; Gal. 4:8; Eph. 2:12; 1 Jn. 2:23; 2 Jn. 9; Jn. 5:23

LORD’S DAY 35

96 Q. What is God’s will for us in the second commandment?
   A. That we in no way make any image of God1 nor worship him in any other way than has been commanded in God’s Word.2

1 Deut. 4:15–19; Isa. 40:18; Rom. 1:23; Acts 17:29
2 1 Sam. 15:23; Deut. 12:30; Mt. 15:9

97 Q. May we then not make any image at all?

A. God can not and may not be visibly portrayed in any way. Although creatures may be portrayed, yet God forbids making or having such images if one’s intention is to worship them or to serve God through them.¹

¹ Ex. 23:24; 34:13; Num. 33:52; Deut. 7:5; 12:3; 16:22; 2 Kings 18:4

98 Q. But may not images be permitted in churches in place of books for the unlearned?

A. No, we should not try to be wiser than God. God wants the Christian community instructed by the living preaching of his Word—not by idols that cannot even talk.²

² 2 Tim. 3:16–17; 2 Pet. 1:19
² Jer. 10:8; Hab. 2:18–19

LORD’S DAY 36

99 Q. What is the aim of the third commandment?

A. That we neither blaspheme nor misuse the name of God by cursing, perjury,¹ or unnecessary oaths,² nor share in such horrible sins by being silent bystanders. In summary, we should use the holy name of God only with reverence and awe,³ so that we may properly confess God,⁴ pray to God,⁵ and glorify God in all our words and works.⁶

⁴ Mt. 10:32
⁵ 1 Tim. 2:8
⁶ Rom. 2:24; 1 Tim. 6:1; Col. 3:16

100 Q. Is blasphemy of God’s name by swearing and cursing really such serious sin that God is angry also with those who do not do all they can to help prevent and forbid it?

A. Yes, indeed.¹ No sin is greater or provokes God’s wrath more than blasphemying his name. That is why God commanded it to be punished with death.²

² Lev. 24:15–16

LORD’S DAY 37

101 Q. But may we swear an oath in God’s name if we do it reverently?

A. Yes, when the government demands it, or when necessity requires it, in order to maintain and promote truth and trustworthiness for God’s glory and our neighbor’s good. Such oaths are grounded in God’s Word¹ and were rightly used by the people of God in the Old and New Testaments.²

102 Q. May we also swear by saints or other creatures?

A. No. A legitimate oath means calling upon God as the only one who knows my heart to witness to my truthfulness and to punish me if I swear falsely.¹ No creature is worthy of such honor.²

² Mt. 5:34–36; Jas. 5:12

LORD’S DAY 38

103 Q. What is God’s will for you in the fourth commandment?

A. First, that the gospel ministry and education for it be maintained,¹ and that, especially on the festive day of rest, I diligently attend the assembly of God’s people² to learn what God’s Word teaches,³ to participate in the sacraments,⁴ to pray to God publicly,⁵ and to bring Christian offerings for the poor.⁶ Second, that every day of my life I rest from my evil ways, let the Lord work in me through his Spirit, and so begin in this life the eternal Sabbath.⁷
104 Q. What is God’s will for you in the fifth commandment?

A. That I honor, love, and be loyal to my father and mother and all those in authority over me;¹ that I submit myself with proper obedience to all their good teaching and discipline; and also that I be patient with their failings—² for through them God chooses to rule us.³

¹ Eph. 6:1–9; Col. 3:18, 20–24; Eph. 5:22; Prov. 1:8; 4:1; 15:20; 20:20; Exod. 21:17; Rom. 13:1–5

³ Eph. 6:4, 9; Col. 3:19, 21; Rom. 13:1–5; Mt. 22:21

105 Q. What is God’s will for you in the sixth commandment?

A. I am not to belittle, hate, insult, or kill my neighbor—not by my thoughts, my words, my look or gesture, and certainly not by actual deeds—¹ and I am not to be party to this in others; rather, I am to put away all desire for revenge.² I am not to harm or recklessly endanger myself either.³ Prevention of murder is also why government is armed with the sword.⁴

*Sirach is a deuterocanonical book, treated with respect but not as canonical by the 16th century reformers.

106 Q. Does this commandment refer only to murder?

A. By forbidding murder God teaches us that he hates the root of murder: envy,¹ hatred,² anger,³ vindictiveness. In God’s sight all such are disguised forms of murder.⁴

² 1 Jn. 2:9, 11
³ Jas. 2:¹³; 1:²⁰; Gal. 5:20
⁴ 1 Jn. 3:¹⁵

107 Q. Is it enough then that we do not murder our neighbor in any such way?

A. No. By condemning envy, hatred, and anger God wants us to love our neighbors as ourselves,¹ to be patient, peace-loving, gentle,² merciful,³ and friendly toward them,⁴ to protect them from harm as much as we can,⁵ and to do good even to our enemies.⁶

108 Q. What does the seventh commandment teach us?

A. That God condemns all unchastity,\(^1\) and that therefore we should thoroughly detest it\(^2\) and live decent and chaste lives,\(^3\) within or outside of the holy state of marriage.\(^4\)

\(^1\) Lev. 18:27–28
\(^2\) Jude 23
\(^3\) 1 Thess. 4:3-5
\(^4\) Heb. 13:4; 1 Cor. 7

109 Q. Does God, in this commandment, forbid only such scandalous sins as adultery?

A. We are temples of the Holy Spirit, body and soul, and God wants both to be kept clean and holy. That is why God forbids all unchaste actions, looks, talk, thoughts, or desires,\(^2\) and whatever may incite someone to them.\(^3\)

\(^1\) Eph. 5:3–4; 1 Cor. 6:18–20
\(^2\) Mt. 5:[27–28]
\(^3\) Eph. 5:18; 1 Cor. 15:33

110 Q. What does God forbid in the eighth commandment?

A. God forbids not only outright theft\(^1\) and robbery,\(^2\) punishable by law. But in God’s sight theft also includes all scheming and swindling in order to get our neighbor’s goods for ourselves, whether by force or means that appear legitimate,\(^3\) such as inaccurate measurements of weight,\(^4\) size, or volume;\(^5\) fraudulent merchandising; counterfeit money;\(^6\) excessive interest; or any other means forbidden by God. In addition God forbids all greed\(^7\) and pointless squandering of his gifts.\(^8\)

\(^2\) 1 Cor. 5:10
\(^3\) Lk. 3:14; 1 Thess. 4:6
\(^4\) Prov. 11:1; 16:11

\(^6\) Ps. 15:5; Lk. 6:35
\(^7\) 1 Cor. 6:10
\(^8\) Prov. 5:16

111 Q. What does God require of you in this commandment?

A. That I never give false testimony against anyone,\(^1\) twist no one’s words,\(^2\) not gossip or slander,\(^3\) nor join in condemning anyone rashly or without a hearing.\(^4\) Rather, in court and everywhere else, I should avoid lying and deceit of every kind;\(^5\) these are the very devices the devil uses,\(^6\) and they would call down on me God’s intense wrath. I should love the truth, speak it candidly, and openly acknowledge it.\(^7\) And I should do what I can to guard and advance my neighbor’s good name.\(^8\)

\(^1\) Mt. 7:12
\(^2\) Eph. 4:28

112 Q. What is the aim of the ninth commandment?

A. That I do whatever I can for my neighbor’s good, that I treat others as I would like them to treat me,\(^1\) and that I work faithfully so that I may share with those in need.\(^2\)

\(^1\) Mt. 7:12
\(^2\) Eph. 4:28
113 Q. What is the aim of the tenth commandment?

A. That not even the slightest desire or thought contrary to any one of God’s commandments should ever arise in our hearts. Rather, with all our hearts we should always hate sin and take pleasure in whatever is right. ¹

¹ Prov. 19:5, 9; 21:28

114 Q. But can those converted to God obey these commandments perfectly?

A. No. In this life even the holiest have only a small beginning of this obedience. ¹ Nevertheless, with all seriousness of purpose, they do begin to live according to all, not only some, of God’s commandments. ²

115 Q. Since no one in this life can obey the Ten Commandments perfectly, why does God want them preached so pointedly?

A. First, so that the longer we live the more we may come to know our sinfulness ¹ and the more eagerly look to Christ for forgiveness of sins and righteousness. ² Second, so that, we may never stop striving, and never stop praying to God for the grace of the Holy Spirit, to be renewed more and more after God’s image, until after this life we reach our goal: perfection. ³

³ Rom. 1:29–30

116 Q. Why do Christians need to pray?

A. Because prayer is the most important part of the thankfulness God requires of us. ¹ And also because God gives his grace and Holy Spirit only to those who pray continually and groan inwardly, asking God for these gifts and thanking God for them. ²

² Mt. 7:7–8; Lk. 11:9–13; Mt. 13:12; Ps. 50:15

117 Q. What is the kind of prayer that pleases God and that he listens to?

A. First, we must pray from the heart to no other than the one true God, revealed to us in his Word, ¹ asking for everything God has commanded us to ask for. ² Second, we must fully recognize our need and misery, ³ so that we humble ourselves in God’s majestic presence. ⁴ Third, we must rest on this unshakable foundation: ⁵ even though we do not deserve it, God will surely listen to our prayer because of Christ our Lord. ⁶ That is what God promised us in his Word. ⁷

118 Q. What did God command us to pray for?

A. Everything we need, spiritually and physically,\(^1\) as embraced in the prayer Christ our Lord himself taught us.

\(^1\)Jas. 1:17; Mt. 6:33

119 Q. What is this prayer?

A. Our Father in heaven, hallowed be your name. Your kingdom come. Your will be done, on earth as it is in heaven. Give us this day our daily bread. And forgive us our debts, as we also have forgiven our debtors. And do not bring us to the time of trial, but rescue us from the evil one. For the kingdom and the power and the glory are yours forever. Amen.\(^1\)

\(^1\)Mt. 6:9–13; Lk. 11:2–4

LORD’S DAY 46

120 Q. Why did Christ command us to call God “our Father”?

A. To awaken in us at the very beginning of our prayer what should be basic to our prayer—a childlike reverence and trust that through Christ God has become our Father, and that just as our parents do not refuse us the things of this life, even less will God our Father refuse to give us what we ask in faith.\(^1\)

\(^1\)Mt. 7:9–11; Lk. 11:11–13

121 Q. Why the words “in heaven”?

A. These words teach us not to think of God’s heavenly majesty as something earthly,\(^1\) and to expect everything needed for body and soul from God’s almighty power.\(^2\)

\(^1\)Jer. 23:23–24; Acts 17:24–25, 27
\(^2\)Rom. 10:12

LORD’S DAY 47

122 Q. What does the first petition mean?

A. “Hallowed be your name” means: Help us to truly know you,\(^1\) to honor, glorify, and praise you for all your works and for all that shines forth from them: your almighty power, wisdom, kindness, justice, mercy, and truth.\(^2\) And it means, Help us to direct all our living—what we think, say, and do—so that your name will never be blasphemed because of us but always honored and praised.\(^3\)

\(^3\)Ps. 115:1; 71:8

LORD’S DAY 48

123 Q. What does the second petition mean?

A. “Your kingdom come” means: Rule us by your Word and Spirit in such a way that more and more we submit to you.\(^1\) Preserve your church and make it grow.\(^2\) Destroy the devil’s work; destroy every force which revolts against you and every conspiracy against your holy Word.\(^3\) Do this until your kingdom fully comes,\(^4\) when you will be all in all.\(^5\)

\(^2\)Ps. 51:18; 122:6
\(^3\)1 Jn. 3:8; Rom. 16:20
124 Q. What does the third petition mean?
   A. “Your will be done, on earth as it is in heaven” means: Help us and all people to reject our own wills⁴ and to obey your will without any back talk.² Your will alone is good. Help us one and all to carry out the work we are called to,⁵ as willingly and faithfully as the angels in heaven.⁴
   ³ 1 Cor. 7:24
   ⁴ Ps. 103:20–21

125 Q. What does the fourth petition mean?
   A. “Give us this day our daily bread” means: Do take care of all our physical needs¹ so that we come to know that you are the only source of everything good,² and that neither our work and worry nor your gifts can do us any good without your blessing.³ And so help us to give up our trust in creatures and trust in you alone.⁴

   ² Acts 17:27; 14:17
   ³ 1 Cor. 15:58; Deut. 8:3; Ps. 37:16–17
   ⁴ Ps. 62:11; 55:23

126 Q. What does the fifth petition mean?
   A. “Forgive us our debts, as we also have forgiven our debtors” means: Because of Christ’s blood, do not hold against us, poor sinners that we are, any of the sins we do or the evil that constantly clings to us.¹ Forgive us just as we are fully determined, as evidence of your grace in us, to forgive our neighbors.²
   ¹ Ps. 51:1[–7]; 143:2; 1 Jn. 2:1–2

127 Q. What does the sixth petition mean?
   A. “And do not bring us to the time of trial, but rescue us from the evil one” means: By ourselves we are too weak to hold our own even for a moment.¹ And our sworn enemies—the devil,² the world,³ and our own flesh—⁴ never stop attacking us. And so, Lord, uphold us and make us strong with the strength of your Holy Spirit, so that we may not go down to defeat in this spiritual struggle,⁵ but may firmly resist our enemies until we finally win the complete victory.⁶

   ³ Jn. 15:19
   ⁴ Rom. 7:23; Gal. 5:17
   ⁵ Mt. 26:41; Mk. 13:33
   ⁶ 1 Thess. 3:13; 5:23

128 Q. What does your conclusion to this prayer mean?
A. “For the kingdom and the power and the glory are yours forever” means: We have made all these petitions of you because, as our all-powerful king, you are both willing and able to give us all that is good;¹ and because your holy name, and not we ourselves, should receive all the praise, forever.²

¹ Rom. 10:11–12; 2 Pet. 2:9
² Jn. 14:13; Ps. 115:1; Jer. 33:8–9

129 Q. What does that little word “Amen” express?

A. “Amen” means: This shall truly and surely be! It is even more sure that God listens to my prayer than that I really desire what I pray for.¹

Item 19-Info

A. General Assembly Committee on Representation (GACOR) Agency Summary

“Now there are varieties of gifts, but the same Spirit; and there are varieties of services, but the same Lord; and there are varieties of activities, but it is the same God who activates all of them in everyone” (1 Cor. 12:4–6, NRSV)

“… let us love, not in word or speech, but in truth and action” (1 Jn. 3:18, NRSV)

1. Introduction

By action of the 219th General Assembly (2010) and ratified by a majority of presbyteries, the Book of Order (2009–2011) was amended and the new language went into effect on July 10, 2011. Therefore the General Assembly Committee on Representation has the challenge of reporting to the 220th General Assembly (2012) on two articulations of their work as it appears in the Book of Order. The most relevant sections of the Book of Order (2009–2011) are G-4.0403 and G-9.0105. The most recent sections of the Book of Order (2011–2013) are F-1.0403 and G-3.0103. The following report takes both articulations of the mandate into account.

2. Assigned Responsibilities

While the language of call for the General Assembly Committee on Representation (GACOR) has changed in the last two years, its commitment to seeking representation for the full diversity within God’s Church remains strong. In its constitutional mandate through July of 2011, the Book of Order (2009–2011) stated that the GACOR shall advise, advocate, resource, review, recommend, and consult with the General Assembly and its committees, councils, and entities to ensure that the principles of inclusiveness and diversity are implemented. The GACOR advocates for full participation in decision-making and representation. At the General Assembly level, its main function shall be to advise the assembly with respect to its membership and to that of the committees, boards, agencies, and other units (of the assembly and its entities) in implementing the principles of participation and inclusiveness to ensure fair and effective decision making of the church. The committee reviews the work of committees on representation at the synod level and provides resources when appropriate for committees on representation in mid councils (presbyteries and synods). The committee advises the General Assembly and its various entities on the employment of personnel, receives and reviews implementation plans submitted to it in conformity with “The Churchwide Plan for Affirmative Action and Equal Employment Opportunity,” consults, and when necessary, suggests corrective action in order to fulfill the PC(USA) commitments to inclusiveness and full participation articulated most directly in G-4.0403 and G-9.0105. The GACOR regularly consults with the General Assembly Nominating Committee (GANC) and a member observes meetings of the General Assembly Mission Council to build relationships with leaders, monitor the body’s actions, observe their processes, and advise the body.

With the renewal of the work and purpose of the GACOR outlined in the Form of Government (G-3.0103) implemented in July of 2011, GACOR continues to promote and review the PC(USA)’s commitment to inclusiveness and advocate for full representation. While the work has not changed, the approaches are being reviewed for adjustments. Under The Foundations of Presbyterian Polity and the Form of Government, the GACOR strives to make sure the PC(USA) lives fully into its guarantee of full participation and representation in its worship, governance, and emerging life to all persons or groups within its membership, as outlined in F-1.0403. The GACOR continues to assist the church, with particular concern at the national level to seek new openness, to unity in diversity, through the guidance of the Holy Spirit, striving as A Brief Statement of Faith asserts, “the Spirit gives us courage, … to unmask idolatries in Church and culture, to hear the voices of peoples long silenced, and to work with others for justice, freedom, and peace.” The committee is eager to explore ways in which it can be a catalyst for transformation in the church, building it up to be the beloved community, demonstrating God’s Reign, responding to and including the full abundance of God’s gifts for God’s church. The committee has expanded its efforts to connect with underrepresented groups and connect leaders to opportunities to serve. Rather than wait for reports of discriminatory practice and harm, the committee is initiating consultations with national bodies to prevent errors, to examine procedures for impact on nondominant groups, and to encourage openness and equal access.

3. Accomplishments

The General Assembly Committee on Representation (GACOR) helps the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) to become the church that God calls us to be, a church that includes diverse persons from the abundance God provides, an inclusiveness that represents the fullness God has created. The GACOR serves as a sort of conscience within the denomination, keeping our attention on the quality of its community and always pointing us toward a new openness to voices we might not always hear, to the leaders we routinely overlook, and giving deliberate attention to observing who is involved and how inclusively decisions are made. As God calls the body of Christ, the church “to be a community of faith, … hope, … love, … [and] witness.” How we are the body of Christ is important both internally (structures, procedures, ways of interacting) and externally (social witness, mission, ministry). We seek to live into the abundance of the gifts given to the church for its mission by helping the church involve that diversity to realize our ministries together more fully—to do that most faithfully, we need to have the widest participation. At the national level the church (the body of Christ) is equipped with the widest possible diversity of its life and it is called to select broadly from those leaders for its bodies.

The GACOR is committed to orienting and training new members to service in the committee; the executive committee and staff lead this work. Members’ leadership development is a focus for ongoing training and development. We have to be fed in order to feed others—sharing our evolving understandings of the needs of the church (in this moment) demand engaging in deep conversation, spiritual discernment, and experimentation and exploration. Highlights of this work were presentations on topics such as cultural proficiency, diversity and leadership in employment, the intersections of race and gender, and “Responding to the God Who Calls from Tomorrow.” In 2010, a guest led committee members through a simulation of “being an inclusive church;” this exercise demonstrated to committee members how easily we, who are attentive to diversity, become immersed in a task and may disregard the new people and the skills they bring. Insights abounded as the simulation was debriefed and it became clear how those on the outside of the group are not properly related to nor were fully invited to participate. Committee members valued the session and have referred back to it in subsequent meetings.

The GACOR is also committed to providing a high level of training and awareness to synod COR leaders. Biennially (in non-General Assembly years) a training event is held for synod leaders. In October 2011, the training event, titled: “Reconstruction the Table: Seeing Anew the Height and Depth and Breadth of the Love of Christ,” focused on where we as a church gather, the power of the table to call us to one another as one yet also to divide communities when we come to negotiate from unequal places. In light of the constitutional changes, the urge to start fresh, how would reconstructing our tables with an eye to making it accessible for all in our communities, making space for the rich diversity of God’s people? This is the central question the conference turned over and over. Conference evaluations were glowing and most in attendance considered the event “too short.”

Analysis of synod COR reports and representation data is a regular feature of GACOR work in order to understand the context of the church’s life. Synods receive annual feedback from the committee on their COR reports where information is assessed. Areas of difficulty noted in the period since we last reported: synod relationships with presbyteries, incomplete sharing of representational data especially in categories like age and disability (reasons cited included incomplete information from synod councils on persons serving), and some synod councils do not have effective presbytery committees on representation due to geographical challenges. Overall, many synod CORs are willing to ask presbyteries for time on the floor to promote the importance of the work of CORs in the life of the church. The GACOR encourages the creative thinking of some of the synods in encouraging awareness of leadership qualities in underrepresented groups and in advocating for time to bring that advice to the gathered council. The subcommittee that handles these concerns also seeks to work diligently with the GANC to advise its sister body on the diversity of each pool for vacancies on General Assembly bodies as well as the slates of leaders for those bodies. The GACOR actively encourages intentional recruiting from underrepresented groups for qualified leaders when they find a disparity. This is a regular action of the committee.

As part of its efforts to promote equal employment opportunity and affirmative action, GACOR continues to raise awareness of job postings, and circulates them to underrepresented constituencies in order to reach out to a more inclusive pool. Stimulating discussion of these topics and examining what challenges there are to living more fully into the Kingdom vision of who the Church is to be is part of the common work GACOR has. The GACOR continues to assign its members to serve as liaisons to, and attend meetings and conferences of, particular constituencies including the racial ethnic caucuses and councils and Presbyterians for Disability Concerns (PDC).

The GACOR organizes the bulk of its work into three subcommittees: Program, Planning & Strategy, and Training.

Review of Synod COR Reports: The Program Subcommittee reported that for 2009, fifteen of the sixteen synod committees on representation submitted written reports. The only council not reporting in 2009 was Southern California and Hawaii, for a 94 percent participation rate. In 2010, the noncompliant synod was Pacific for a 94 percent participation rate in that year as well. There is still work that needs to be done by CORs to assure that the church practices its mandate to provide for inclusiveness and diversity on all levels above the local council. Mid councils continue to request information and resources to improve their representation work as well as training.

Technology: The GACOR continues to work to make the synod annual report form more user-friendly on the PC(USA) website, hoping to add interactive report submission and interpretive documents available for downloading. The website redesign for the Office of the General Assembly has delayed efforts to roll out online synod report submission. The form is available in PDF (in English and Spanish) for download and by Word format (that can be sent electronically to synods, upon request, in Spanish and English). Once online reporting is available, the synod CORs will also be able to access a summary of their report from the website, receive quicker feedback from the GACOR, present issues needing action, and recommend specific communication and action to the synod councils. Data will also be more readily available to be studied. The committee regularly uses web resources to find meeting times and dates that work for members spread from Seattle to Atlanta, and frequently uses conference calls as a way of meeting. Members are exploring options to expand the technologies (Skype, webinar, GoToMeeting, etc.) it uses to meet between face-to-face meetings. Accessibility of these technologies for persons with disabilities impacts our ability to use them. With technology, the committee continues to find both new opportunities and obstacles to full participation.
Best practices: For synod CORs, these include increasing connections with their respective presbyteries by sponsoring training opportunities and demonstrating increased representation. In the last two years, there have been modest increases of synod COR representation on synod nominating committees. We have seen increased requests for instructional materials supporting presbyteries to enhance their revitalization of the work of their own committees on representation. The GACOR produced a resource for mid councils on what the new constitutional language would mean for their committees on representation. It was distributed in three languages: Korean, Spanish, and English.

The Planning & Strategy Committee looks at the larger picture of GACOR work and charts strategies for improving inclusiveness at the national level and looks for ways to support committees on representation at the synod and presbytery levels. In anticipation of work coming out of the 220th General Assembly (2012), Planning & Strategy has been working with “Power, Privilege and Policy: The Church as Employer,” the final report from the Climate for Change Task Force. The recommendations they are sending to the General Assembly for its action would clarify work assigned to the GACOR: The work to become culturally proficient is both a response to the church’s historical call to be a prophetic witness to justice and an opportunity to develop the expertise necessary to equip leadership across the church, to transform the organizational culture of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) in ways that will support the denomination's goal of becoming a more diverse community of faith. The GACOR asked the task force to clarify its role regarding the “Churchwide Plan” and reviews of affirmative action and equal employment opportunity, related goal setting and supplier diversity in line with their directive from the 218th General Assembly (2008). The task force has made recommendations that directly impact the work of GACOR.

The GACOR consulted on the recommendations with the task force and the advocacy committees. We appreciated the careful work the task force did, they way it listened to the wide church, and the time we had to help define GACOR work responsibilities, the assessment and reporting structure affecting GACOR and other entities. This clarification will enable us to consult, assess, and monitor the churchwide progress of the PC(USA) in meeting its stated goal of transforming the organizational culture of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). The recommendations of this task force are in line with the Planning and Strategy’s Committee recommendations for GACOR’s future actions and work within the General Assembly structure.

The Training Subcommittee guides both training and continuing development opportunities for GACOR members and biennially plans a training conference for synod COR members and staff. In October 2011, GACOR sponsored the biennial training event for synod COR staff and chairpersons in Louisville, Kentucky. Sixteen synods were represented at this training event, composed of thirty leaders from around the country. The theme of the training was “Reconstructing the Table: Seeing Anew the Height and Depth and Breadth of the Love of Christ.” Plenary and workshops were designed to equip and challenge synod COR leaders to more effectively work for diversity and inclusiveness in their synods and encourage them to share those methods with their constituent presbyteries.

Leadership and programming included:

- The Reverend Dr. Ronald E. Peters, president of the Interdenominational Theological Center in Atlanta, California, was the worship leader.
- The Reverend Carol Howard Merritt, associate pastor at Westminster Presbyterian Church in Washington, D.C., and chair of the Special Committee on the Nature of the Church in the 21st Century, was the keynote speaker.
- Workshops included the following topics: “Indigenous Presbyterian Spirituality,” “New Constitutional Language and How CORs Are Affected,” “Process Observation Simulation, a new way to measure how decision-making processes effect participation,” exploring “Reframing Hope” with Carol Howard Merritt, deepening participant understanding of specific COR issues and tasks at mid councils.
- A simulation exercise of “Building an Inclusive Church” created lots of engaging conversations.
- Worship, prayer, and fellowship was a huge component of the training and woven throughout, especially appreciated was the music leadership by Debbie Diersks and Lewis Washington, of Louisville’s Crescent Hill Presbyterian Church.

Analysis of the evaluation forms from the training revealed that a significant majority of those attending valued their participation and content of the training. Three-quarters or more of those who attended the synod COR training described fourteen out of its fifteen activities as “very helpful” or “helpful.” In the overall evaluation question, 88 percent rated the training excellent or good. One participant added: “The best part of the GACOR training was gaining a better understanding of what COR is and the responsibilities. There is a lot of work involved with doing a good job for the synod, presbytery, and local church. I feel much more confident and look forward to applying what I’ve learned and helping others understand the work of COR.” Many commented that networking with other COR members was very important, and enhanced their experience. Another attendee appreciated the insight that the simulation of building an inclusive church provided. Through this activity, even people with the explicit goal of building an inclusive church realized “how we do not notice new people who want to be a part of us.” The need for this very kind of self-awareness of the ways that we are all capable of exclusionivity affirms and propels the work and training of the GACOR.
The committee, in compliance with actions of the 218th and 219th General Assemblies (2008 and 2010), has requested, where possible, that data sets they receive and evaluate be disaggregated. They are reviewing the first batch of data on ministers (teaching elders) from 2008, 2009, and 2010. With disaggregated data, what is recorded is not just in singular categories of age, race, or gender, but in ways that record each variable so that we can see a pool that has age, race, and gender. The snapshot provided as a result of this multiple variable reporting, gives a more accurate picture, and one that is helpful to GACOR and the wider church. For example, by looking at data this way for teaching elders (ministers) we learned that the PC(USA) only has four teaching elders who are Hispanic females between the ages 26–35. This kind of insight was rendered invisible in the ways the PC(USA) used to report this data. Simply tracking how many clergywomen the PC(USA) has between 26–35 years of age (346) would disguise the racial ethnic categories of those clergywomen. Additional statistics are available in Figures 1 and 2, which can be found at gacor-agency-summary-charts.pdf or see page 1622. The first considers two variables. The second considers three variables.

While men still considerably outnumber women in those who serve as teaching elders, the disparities are different as you look at younger age categories. The significant number of persons who do not record an age category does impact these results. The value of looking at two categories at once does provide some insights. The revelations made possible by considering three variables at the same time are dramatic.

The insights have been invaluable to GACOR and we encourage the wider church to collect and report more data in this format, as it (1) allows the church to analyze representation and participation in multiple categories at once (more realistic to the ways we live), (2) gives nominating committees a clearer picture of the categorical pools of available leaders from which they are drawing their nominations, and (3) the information creates awareness of disparities in our leadership development and evangelism and insight into missing persons and groups, with the hope of recruiting and training more leaders in these areas. If we adopt these ways of looking at the data, we will be better equipped as a church to understand who we are as a gathered community of leaders and better able to create relevant resources for mission and ministry.

By request and as resources allow, GACOR staff and members provide training content in presbyteries and synods throughout the year. Among those in 2010 were events in Denver Presbytery and the Synods of Rocky Mountains, Trinity, and Southwest. In 2011, trainings were provided in the Synod of Alaska-Northwest, Sun, and Covenant.

Committee members serve as liaisons to a variety of groups in order to facilitate relationships with constituencies, to maintain open communication with partner bodies, and to stay informed with regard to the perspectives of underrepresented constituencies. Among the bodies GACOR sends liaisons to we highlight:

- Presbyterians for Disability Concerns (PDC), a network of PHEWA: a GACOR member annually attends one face-to-face meeting of this group, and is included in conference calls. As a liaison, she provides advice and counsel on their own organizational structures and leadership diversity as well as encouraging them to reach out to leaders who seek opportunities to serve at the national level. Connecting to this group of leaders is valuable to GACOR as well. The PDC is a busy group doing much to further the visibility of persons with disabilities and they are making a difference. Annually, they produce a wonderful packet with worship materials and teaching material to celebrate the designated Sunday in the church year dedicated to raising awareness of and including persons with disabilities. In preparation for General Assemblies, PDC is a valued partner.

- Mid Council Commission: GACOR advised the 219th General Assembly (2010) and the Moderator about the selection of persons to serve on the Middle Governing Body Commission. In light of the anticipated actions of the commission regarding the councils of the church, GACOR determined that they would send a member to observe their meetings. Having a member in the room observing has proved important. There was a history and context presentation that omitted the history of nongeographic presbyteries and synods organized by and for African Americans. In response, the GACOR arranged for the immediate electronic publication of All-Black Governing Bodies: The History and Contributions of All-Black Governing Bodies, a report of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) approved by the 205th General Assembly (1993) [OGA 96-002]. The GACOR paid for enough printed copies to be produced so that members of the MGB commission had one—it was referenced in their subsequent discussions. This action also allowed wider access for the larger church to this important history.

- General Assembly Committee on Bills and Overtures: With the 219th General Assembly (2010), the GACOR requested the assistance of Assembly Committee on Bills and Overtures to gather data in order to observe the processes used in committees and assess the impact they had on participation in committee meetings during the assembly. The analysis was shared with the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly (COGA) and recommendations were acted on to encourage continued process observation at future assemblies.

The GACOR held consultations with the Climate for Change Task Force, the Special Committee on the Nature of the Church in the 21st Century, the Biennial GA Review Committee, the Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns (ACREC), and the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly (COGA). Advice was shared with the Moderator, GAMC chair, General Assembly Nominating Committee (GANC), Stated Clerk, COGA chair, and mid council clerks and executives. In response to a referral of the 219th General Assembly (2010), the committee studied the intersection of race and gender and presented a workshop during the Big Tent 2 Conference in the summer of 2011.
Business before this assembly: The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly (COGA) is bringing two recommendations for action of the 220th General Assembly (2012) with regard to the General Assembly Committee on Representation—one Standing Rule change and one amendment of the Organization for Mission. Both are changes necessitated by the adjustments in Book of Order language to support the committee’s work. This report includes two final responses to referrals of the 219th General Assembly (2010).

Through training, worship, study, consultation, developing strategies, and sharing, the GACOR equips and challenges the General Assembly, its entities, commissions, committees, and synod CORs to achieve, accomplish, realize, endorse, and preserve the commitment of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) to inclusiveness and diversity.

4. Membership

The GACOR’s commitment to inclusiveness is reflected in the diversity of its membership from the sixteen synods. The following persons were serving on GACOR at the time this report:*

Elder Alma-Jean Marion, Alaska-Northwest, African American (SA), moderator; Elder Deborah Fair, Covenant, African American (SA), vice moderator; Elder Cindy Ray, Lakes and Prairies, White (A) (D);
The Reverend Martha Ross-Mockaitis, Lincoln Trails, White (A) (D);
The Reverend Heather Walchar, Mid-America, White (YA), chair—Training; Elder Angela Battle, Mid-Atlantic, African American (A);
Elder Patrick Nelson, Northeast, White (Y);
Elder Kenneth Bartlett-Preston, Pacific, African American (Y);
The Reverend Amy Mendez, Rocky Mountains, Hispanic (A), chair—Program;
Elder Issa Sayar, South Atlantic, Middle Eastern (SA);
Elder Cliff Yang, Southern California and Hawaii, Asian (A);
Elder Dora Martinez, Southwest, Hispanic (SA);
The Reverend Hector Rivera-Velez, Sun, Hispanic (A);
The Reverend Stanley Bhasker, Trinity, Asian (A), chair—Planning & Strategy.

These persons have served on the committee since the last assembly and we thank them for their service: The Reverend John A.T. Gulden, Living Waters, White (YA); Elder Eliud Serrano Arroyo, Puerto Rico (Boriquen), Hispanic (YA).

*Legend: age groupings: (Y) = Youth (25 and under); (YA) = Young Adults (26–35); (A) = Adults (36–55); (SA) = Senior Adults (56+); (D) = Person with a Disability

B. Advisory Committee on Litigation (ACL) Agency Summary

I. Narrative

Assigned Responsibilities

The Advisory Committee on Litigation (ACL) is composed of six Presbyterian attorneys. Each year the General Assembly elects one member to a six-year term. Each member is eligible for reelection to an additional term, but in no case may a member serve for a period exceeding twelve consecutive years of service. The General Assembly Nominating Committee nominates persons for the ACL who fit the criteria for eligibility. The Advisory Committee on Litigation was established by the 200th General Assembly (1988) to advise the Stated Clerk on matters relating to litigation.

The consultations typically take place via telephone conference calls after committee members have been provided copies of all pertinent pleadings, orders, and information. The committee ordinarily meets face-to-face at least once each year. It is normally consulted whenever the Stated Clerk is asked to participate in litigation involving matters of civil and religious liberty, church and state relations, and other matters related to the mission and interests of the church.

The Advisory Committee on Litigation reviews each of the cases, amicus briefs and General Assembly policy and constitution based on seventeen criteria and advises the Stated Clerk whether or not to file an amicus brief in the particular case.

II. Disposition of Cases Reported in 2008–2010

A. Episcopal Church Cases

California Supreme Court

On May 4, 2008, the Stated Clerk joined in an amicus brief with other denominational partners to the California Supreme Court regarding a schism and property dispute with several cases involving the Episcopal Church. These cases were combined and appealed to the California Supreme Court to clarify the standards for determining which faction in a church property dispute had legal property interest.

The Appellants appealed to the California Supreme Court arguing that California should follow “neutral principals of law” and only look at secular documents to determine which faction has the legal property interest. The amicus brief filed by the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) argued that Federal constitutional jurisprudence allowing states to apply “neutral principles of law” does not abrogate the right of states to apply a “principle of [church] government” approach to resolve disputes over church property. The brief argued that the California courts may, under the U.S. Constitution, apply its traditional “principle of government” approach to resolving disputes over church property or it may apply a “neutral principles of law” approach. If the California Supreme Court applied the “neutral principles of law” approach, it is not limited to an analysis of only secular legal documents such as deeds or corporate charters alone but has been explicitly instructed by the U.S. Supreme Court in Jones v. Wolf (1979) 443 U.S. 595, 602, to take into account an express trust within the denomination’s own constitution.

On January 5, 2009, the California Supreme Court issued an opinion that stated that when the court applies neutral principles of law to resolve a property dispute without reference to church doctrine, the court should consider sources such as the deeds to the property in dispute, the local church’s articles of incorporation, the general church’s constitution, canons, and rules, and relevant statutes, including statutes specifically concerning religious property, such as California Corporations Code [which provides that the governing instruments of a general church may impress a trust on property of a local church].

B. Navaho Nation v. United States Forest Service

On February 6, 2009, Stated Clerk Gradye Parsons joined in an amicus brief with a number of religious entities as partners to Petition for Certiori to Ninth Circuit requesting that the U.S. Supreme Court resolve a split in the U.S. Courts of Appeals regarding the interpretation of federal and state statutory balance of free exercise of religion with state interests.

The amici, both as religious organizations and as organizations concerned with the free exercise of religion, argued that the right of individuals to exercise a wide variety of religious belief is a central aspect of our nation’s protection of fundamental rights. Federal and state laws that protect the free exercise of religion are therefore of great and immediate significance to them.

The Religious Freedom Restoration Act, 42 U.S.C. § 2000bb et seq., and the Religious Land Use and Institutionalized Persons Act, 42 U.S.C. § 2000cc et seq., both provide a well-established mechanism to balance the important interests of religious exercise with the interests of the state. However, that balancing takes place only after the religious practitioner establishes that the governmental action in question will “substantially burden” its religious practice. The Ninth Circuit panel held that a substantial burden is one that “prevent[s] the plaintiff from engaging in [religious] conduct or having a religious experience, … Under RFRA, a ‘substantial burden’ is imposed only when individuals are forced to choose between following the tenets of their religion and receiving a governmental benefit (Sherbert) or coerced to act contrary to their religious beliefs by the threat of criminal or civil sanctions (Yoder).” As such, the Ninth Circuit panel shifted the issue of what constitutes a substantial burden under RFRA from a case-by-case inquiry into the impact on the religious practice at issue to the very different question of the nature of the governmental action that creates the burden, limiting it to the deprivation of governmental benefits or criminal or civil coercion. The amici argued that such an interpretation of the term prevented consideration of the competing interests and thereby inappropriately limited the application of the statutes to a narrower scope than mandated by their text and by Congress’ purpose in enacting them. This narrower scope had the effect of finding that the Navaho Tribe in this case was not substantially burdened by the desecration of a holy site by the creation of artificial snow. The Stated Clerk reiterated in his statement of interest that an area of abiding concern for Presbyterians is that Native Americans have full freedom to practice their religion.

The U.S. Supreme Court denied the petition on June 8, 2009.

C. People of the State of Michigan v. Edward Pinkney

On March 18, 2009, Stated Clerk Gradye Parsons entered into an amicus brief with several partners on behalf of defendant Rev. Pinkney in People of the State of Michigan v. Edward Pinkney. According to the Court of Appeals: “following a jury trial, Rev. Pinkney was convicted of giving valuable consideration to influence the manner of voting by a person, MCL 168.931(1)(a), influencing a person voting an absent voter ballot, MCL 168.932(h), and three counts of possessing, returning, or soliciting to return an absent voter ballot, MCL 168.932(f). The trial court sentenced defendant to five years’ probation with a delayed jail sentence of 365 days. Subsequently, after finding that defendant violated the terms of his probation, the trial court revoked defendant’s probation and sentenced him to 3 to 10 years’ imprisonment. In Docket No. 282144, defendant appeals as of right his convictions. In Docket No. 286992, defendant appeals the trial court’s order revoking his probation.”

One of the reasons Rev. Pinkney’s probation was revoked according to the trial court was that the trial court found that Rev. Pinkney “threatened” the trial court judge in a paragraph published in an opinion column in a newspaper. The amici argued that this paragraph was political and religious speech at the very core of the First Amendment, and not within any exception to constitutional protection. Political speech is central to the First Amendment because of its importance to self-governance. Religious speech is protected by both the Free Speech Clause and the Free Exercise Clause of the First Amendment.

On July 16, 2009, the Court of Appeals of Michigan affirmed defendant’s convictions, but reverse the order revoking his probation on the grounds that the prohibition to not engage in defaming or demeaning behavior as a condition of parole was not directly related to defendant’s rehabilitation or to the protection of the public and thus an improper condition of parole.

D. Episcopal Church Cases

Virginia Supreme Court

On December 21, 2009, Stated Clerk Gradye Parsons entered into an amicus brief with a variety of denominational religious partners to the Virginia Supreme Court challenging an old Virginia statute on U.S. Constitution 1st Amendment issues. The 1867 Virginia statute that was challenged delineates a process by which a congregation may determine which branch of a denomination to which it will belong or how an independent congregation will organize itself to own and hold property.

The amici argued that the Virginia state statute violated the First Amendment of the U.S. Constitution in that it displaced a church’s own rules of self-governance in determining property ownership and voting rights, it required civil courts to conduct an extensive inquiry into fundamentally religious questions, and it was neither “generally applicable,” “neutral,” nor was it the least restrictive means to serve a compelling state interest.

On June 10, 2010, the Virginia Supreme Court issued a decision that found that the state statute did not apply to the facts in the case and thus the court did not need to rule on the constitutionality of the state statute. The Virginia Supreme Court remanded the case to determine whether declaratory judgment in favor of the Diocese was final. On January 10, 2010, the Circuit Court of Fairfax County found for the Episcopal Church and Diocese in their Declaratory Judgment actions and, among other relief, ordered that all real property conveyed by forty-one deeds, as well as all personal property acquired by nine congregations up to the filing date of the Declaratory Judgment be promptly conveyed to the Diocese. The congregations have appealed the order and the execution of the order during appeal.

A. Presbytery of Greater Atlanta v. Timberridge Presbyterian Church, Inc.

On April 11, 2011, Stated Clerk Gradye Parsons entered into an amicus brief to the Supreme Court of Georgia in support of the Presbytery of Greater Atlanta in Presbytery of Greater Atlanta v. Timberridge Presbyterian Church, Inc. The amicus brief stated that the Georgia court of appeals had misapplied federal first amendment constitutional law when determining whether a congregation of PC(USA) holds property in trust for the denomination. The amicus brief described the trust inherent within the PC(USA) denomination as well as the express trust found within the constitution of the PC(USA).
On November 21, 2011, the Georgia Supreme Court issued a decision that found that there was an implication that local church property was held in trust for the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) when the court applied “neutral principles of law” and when the court looked to documents ordering the relationship between the congregation and the denomination.

On March 6, 2012, Timberridge Presbyterian Church of Atlanta filed a petition for certiorari (review) in the United States Supreme Court.

B. Hosanna-Tabor Evangelical Lutheran Church and School v. EEOC, et al

On June 20, 2011, Stated Clerk Gradye Parsons entered into an amicus brief with several faith partners to the U.S. Supreme Court on behalf of Hosanna-Tabor Evangelical Lutheran Church and School in Hosanna-Tabor Evangelical Lutheran Church and School v. EEOC, et al. The amicus brief stated that the First Amendment of the U.S. Constitution precludes governmental intervention into the selection by religious entities of clergy and other religiously significant employees. The amicus brief further affirmed the Courts of Appeals that had interpreted anti-discrimination laws and other laws to include a “ministerial exception” to preserve the intent of the First Amendment.

On January 11, 2012, the U.S. Supreme Court issued a decision that found the Establishment and Free Exercise Clauses of the First Amendment bar suits brought on behalf of ministers against their churches, claiming termination in violation of employment discrimination laws.

C. Health Care: Dept. of H&Hs, et al v. Florida, et al

On February 13, 2012, Stated Clerk Gradye Parsons entered into a faith amicus brief to the U.S. Supreme Court in support of Medicaid expansions in the Affordable Care Act with many faith partners about the moral perspectives that have led the faith communities to support the Medicaid expansions and improvements in the Affordable Care Act. The brief reiterated that all of the faith partners agree that it is the calling of government to bring justice and protection to the poor and the sick and thus have been supportive of Medicaid and its expansions.

The U.S. Supreme court held oral arguments on the case on March 28, 2012.

D. Masterson et al v. Diocese of Northwest Texas et al.

On February 21, 2012, Stated Clerk Gradye Parsons entered into an amicus brief with several faith partners to the Supreme Court of Texas in support of the Episcopal Church of America Diocese of Northwest Texas in Masterson et al v. Diocese of Northwest Texas et al. The brief stated that there are two federal constitutionally valid methods for resolving intrachurch property disputes. The brief described the two approaches that can be used by state court: the neutral principles analysis to determine whether there is a trust inherent within hierarchical denominations or applying deference to any express trust found with a denominational constitution.

The Supreme Court of Texas has not yet set oral arguments (May 4, 2012).

E. Arizona v. U.S.A.

On March 26, 2012, Stated Clerk Gradye Parsons entered into an amicus brief with several partners including the United Catholic Conference of Bishops, the Evangelical Lutheran Church in America, and the Lutheran Immigration and Refugee Service on behalf of the United States in Arizona v. U.S.A. to the U.S. Supreme Court. The amicus brief argued that the comprehensive Federal Immigration law preempts Arizona statute 1070. The brief argued that federal immigration law creates a comprehensive balance of competing interests including the interests of the churches in family unity and human dignity. The brief also argued that the state statute provided a serious threat to religious liberty in that it impedes and criminalizes the church’s moral imperative to provide help, including food and shelter, to all who persons who have need. The federal government is prohibited from enforcing immigration laws in a manner that imposes substantial burdens on religious exercise, however state and local governments are not.

The U.S. Supreme court held oral arguments on the case on April 25, 2012.

C. Advisory Committee on the Constitution (ACC) Agency Summary

1. Assigned Responsibilities

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution (ACC) is composed of nine voting members as established by the Book of Order, G-3.0501c and G-6.02. The nine voting members are required by the current Manual of the General Assembly to be stated clerks or former stated clerks of synods or presbyteries, former members of the Permanent Judicial Commission of the General Assembly, polity professors, or other qualified persons with knowledge of and experience with the Constitution and polity of the church. The Stated Clerk of the General Assembly is a member ex officio without vote.
With regard to questions requiring an interpretation of the Book of Order, the ACC’s responsibilities are set out in G-6.02 as follows:

All questions requiring an interpretation by the General Assembly of the Book of Order arising from councils of the church shall be communicated in writing to the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly no later than 120 days prior to the convening of the next session of the General Assembly. The Stated Clerk shall refer all such questions of interpretation to the Advisory Committee on the Constitution, except those pertaining to matters pending before a judicial commission. The Advisory Committee on the Constitution shall communicate its report and recommendations to the next session of the General Assembly, no less than sixty days prior to the General Assembly.

With regard to proposed amendments to the Constitution of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), the ACC’s mandated responsibilities are set out in G-6.04b, as follows:

b. The Stated Clerk shall refer all such proposals to amend the Book of Order to the Advisory Committee on the Constitution (G-6.02), which shall examine the proposed amendment for clarity and consistency of language and for compatibility with other provisions of the Constitution of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). At least sixty days prior to the meeting of the General Assembly, the advisory committee shall report its findings to the General Assembly along with its recommendations, which may include an amended version of any proposed constitutional changes as well as advice to accept or decline the proposals referred to the committee. The General Assembly shall not consider any amendment until it has considered the report and any recommendations from the Advisory Committee on the Constitution.

2. Process and Procedures, Responsibilities and Relationships

The ACC does not interpret the Constitution. The role of the Advisory Committee on the Constitution, as its title suggests and as its constitutional mandate clearly establishes, is to advise the General Assembly. The ACC’s advice has no authority until and unless it is approved by the General Assembly. With respect to proposed amendments to the Constitution, the ACC focuses on clarity of proposed language, and consistency of the proposed amendment with the remainder of the Constitution. The ACC occasionally finds that the intent of the proposal is already inherent in other provisions of the Constitution or that it could be achieved by slight changes in language, by placing the amendment in a different section, or by different language entirely. On occasion, the ACC has suggested such changes in order to avoid inconsistencies within the Book of Order, and also to make as few changes as possible in existing paragraphs and in section numbering. At least sixty days prior to each General Assembly, the ACC is required to report its findings to the assembly, which findings may include advice for amended versions of any proposed changes as well as advice to accept or decline the proposals referred to the ACC.

With respect to requests for interpretation, as well as advice on overtures, the ACC seeks to provide advice that is based on constitutional issues, not on the substance of the issues at hand. In many circumstances, the question has been answered by earlier interpretations and does not require action by the General Assembly. In these cases, the inquirer is notified of the standing interpretation. In order to make clear the questions raised, the ACC has modified its past practice of reprinting the entire request received (which in some instances contained material not germane to the question itself), and has focused the presentation of the request on the question presented, together with the ACC’s findings and advice. If the question was not clear from the request received, the ACC has sought clarification from the individual transmitting the request.

All overtures and reports containing proposed amendments and all requests for interpretation of the Book of Order by the General Assembly must be communicated in writing to the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly no later than 120 days prior to the convening of the next session of the General Assembly (Book of Order, G-6.02, G-6.04a). This 120-day time period allows the ACC time to consider and research carefully each proposed amendment and request. Those requests that the ACC brings to the General Assembly are those that it believes meet this constitutional criterion.

The ACC completed its preparatory work for the 220th General Assembly (2012) in two meetings. At a two-day fall meeting, held in conjunction with the OGA Fall Polity Conference, the ACC began work on the task of preparing for the 220th General Assembly (2012). At its spring five-day meeting, the ACC concluded its work of preparing responses to constitutional issues to be considered by the 220th General Assembly (2012). In addition, the ACC made use of several conference calls and electronic meetings in November 2011, and January and March 2012 to address business pending before the committee.

After it has received and considered the advice of the ACC, the General Assembly is free to take whatever action it deems wise on proposed amendments, requests for interpretations, and referrals.

The primary focus for the ACC is to fulfill its constitutional function to provide advice to the General Assembly concerning overtures that seek to amend the Constitution, and concerning requests for interpretation of the Constitution.

3. Consultations

Since the 219th General Assembly (2010), the ACC has consulted with two significant General Assembly groups as those groups worked on their assigned responsibilities. The ACC provided feedback to the Special Committee on Existing Authoritative Interpretations of the Book of Order on their proposed review and recommendations to the 220th General Assembly (2012) regarding authoritative interpretations attached to previous editions of the Book of Order.
The ACC also provided constitutional advice to the General Assembly Mid-Council Commission created by the 219th General Assembly (2010) to examine and make recommendations concerning various aspects of the work of synods and presbyteries.

4. Editorial Corrections

The Organization for Mission provides, at Section IV.B.2.c., that the Stated Clerk shall prepare editorial changes in the Book of Order, which should be reviewed by the Advisory Committee on the Constitution, provided the changes do not alter the substance of the text approved by the presbyteries. The following changes have been made by the Stated Clerk and approved by the Advisory Committee on the Constitution:

Amendment 10-1, the revised Form of Government [of the Book of Order], uses new terminology that would replace the terminology in the (2009–2011) Form of Government (i.e., governing body to council, minister of the Word and Sacrament to teaching elder, etc.). However, these new terminologies were not adopted in the Amendment 10-A (amending G-6.0106b in the 2009–2011 Book of Order) nor were they used in the Directory for Worship and the Rules of Discipline [of the 2009–2011 Book of Order].

With anticipation of both Amendments 10-1 and 10-A being ratified by presbyteries, the Stated Clerk asked that the following terminologies in Amendment 10-A (G-6.0106b) and in the Directory for Worship and the Rules of Discipline be considered for the same replacements as they are used in the Revised Form of Government in order to have consistency of the language used throughout the Book of Order. They are:

- “Minister” or “Minister of the Word and Sacrament”
- “Governing body”
- “Elder”
- “Commissioned Lay Pastor”
- “Office” or “Ordained Office”
- “Officer” or Church Officer” or “Ordained Officer”

The Stated Clerk asked that the Advisory Committee on the Constitution consider such places where such terms appear in Amendment 10-A and the Directory for Worship and the Rules of Discipline, and edit the texts with appropriate replacements, including any new cross-references as the Advisory Committee on the Constitution sees as editorial change.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution’s careful review and edit for these editorial changes would allow the Office of the General Assembly to publish a new Book of Order that uses consistent language throughout the Book of Order with the new terminology adopted in the Foundations of Presbyterian Polity and the revised Form of Government.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution approved the list [see (1) below] of locations in the Directory for Worship and Rules of Discipline in which terms used in these documents should be replaced with equivalent terminology used in the Foundations of Presbyterian Polity and the revised Form of Government. The ACC found that these changes were editorial in nature and appropriate for inclusion into the next edition of the Book of Order.

As part of our review of the suggested editorial changes in the Directory for Worship, the ACC discovered several places in which the present text of the Directory for Worship is inconsistent with provisions of the Foundations of Presbyterian Polity and the revised Form of Government. A list of these places is below [see (2) below]. In the main, these inconsistencies occur in places where the Directory for Worship appears to limit a function (e.g. administration of the Sacraments) to the “minister,” while the Form of Government permits ruling elders or others to perform this function. In these places, a simple one-for-one replacement of the terms “minister” or “minister of the Word and Sacrament” with “teaching elder” continues the inconsistency rather than resolving it.

In responding to the Stated Clerk, it is the judgment of the Advisory Committee on the Constitution that remedying these inconsistencies goes beyond the editorial privilege strictly defined, and may cause some in the church to be concerned that the ACC is exceeding its authority and depriving the church of an opportunity for due consideration.
It is our hope that a revision of the text of the Directory for Worship may be soon forthcoming, and that this revision will consider making the appropriate changes to bring the Directory for Worship into conformity. In the meantime, we suggest that the next edition of the Book of Order contain the following footnotes:

(1) (To be placed as Footnote 2 at the title of the Preface): “In light of the addition of the Foundations of Presbyterian Polity and the revision of the Form of Government (2011), the following terms in use in the Directory for Worship have been replaced with terms employed in the new and revised documents:

• ‘minister’ or ‘minister of the Word and Sacrament’ = ‘teaching elder’
• ‘elder’ = ‘ruling elder’
• ‘governing body’ = ‘council’
• ‘commissioned lay pastor’ = ‘ruling elder commissioned to particular pastoral service’ or ‘ruling elder commissioned to pastoral service’
• ‘office’ or ‘ordained office’ = ‘ordered ministry’
• ‘officer/s,’ ‘church officer/s,’ or ‘ordained officer/s’ = ‘[person/those in] ordered ministry’”

(2) (To be placed as Footnote 3 at the title of the Preface, and a “†” at each of the locations on the list below in italics): “In the Form of Government, the functions described in the following provisions may be performed by ruling elders in certain circumstances as well as by teaching elders: List of passages in the Directory for Worship to which explanatory Footnote 2 should be attached (See below for list of passages):

b. Editorial Change 002—The Stated Clerk of the General Assembly, Gradye Parsons, alerted the Advisory Committee on the Constitution to a scribal error in G-3.0109. Currently the second paragraph of G-3.0109 reads: “A committee shall study and recommend action or carry out decisions already made by a council. It shall make a full report to the council that created it, and its recommendations shall require action by that body. Committees of councils higher than the session shall consist of both teaching elders and members of congregations, with at least one half being members of the congregation.”

The clause “with at least one half being members of the congregation” is incongruous with the beginning of the sentence, “Committees of councils higher than the session …”

The Stated Clerk asked the Advisory Committee on the Constitution to consider this matter as an editorial correction so that the last sentence of the second paragraph of G-3.0109 reads “Committees of councils higher than the session shall consist of both teaching elders and members of congregations, with at least one half being members of the congregations.” [Text to be deleted is shown with strike-through; text to be added is shown in italics.]

In response to Editorial Change 002, the Advisory Committee on the Constitution approves the correction suggested by the Stated Clerk regarding an editorial correction so that the last sentence of the second paragraph of G-3.0109 reads: “Committees of councils higher than the session shall consist of both teaching elders and members of congregations, with at least one half being members of the congregations.” [Text to be deleted is shown with strike-through; text to be added is shown in italics.]

c. Editorial Change 003—Manager of Judicial Process and Social Witness, Laurie Griffith, noted typographical errors in D-10.0202i(5) and D-10.0401b:

At D-10.0202i(5) In the citation D-10.0202j the j should be stricken and replaced by the letter k. so the sentence reads: “If a settlement satisfactory to both the investigating committee and the accused in the alternative form of resolution is not reached, the investigating committee shall designate a prosecuting committee per D-10.0202jk, and the case shall proceed on the charges filed.” [Text to be deleted is shown with strike-through; text to be added is shown in italics.]

At D-10.0401b: In the citation D-10.0401b the word “three” should be stricken and replaced by the word “five” so the sentence reads: For instances of sexual abuse of another person, the three-five year time limit shall not apply. Charges may be brought regardless of the date on which an offense is alleged to have occurred. [Text to be deleted is shown with strike-through; text to be added is shown in italics.]

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution approves the corrections suggested by the manager of Judicial Process and Social Witness.
d. Editorial Change 004—Manager of Polity Guidance and Training, Joyce Lieberman, noted editorial corrections at G-2.0902 and G-2.0904.

In the second sentence of G-2.0902 the term minister should be stricken and replaced with the term “teaching elder” so that it reads as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with strike through; text to be added is shown in italics.]

“A pastor, co-pastor, or associate pastor may request the presbytery to dissolve the pastoral relationship. The minister teaching elder must also state her or his intention to the session. The session shall call a congregational meeting to act upon the request and to make recommendations to the presbytery.” [The rest of the paragraph remains unchanged.]

In G-2.0904 the term “minister” should be stricken and replaced with the term “teaching elder” so that it reads as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with strike through; text to be added is shown in italics.]

“The presbytery may inquire into reported difficulties in a congregation and may dissolve the pastoral relationship if, after consultation with the minister teaching elder, the session, and the congregation, it finds the church’s mission under the Word imperatively demands it.”

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution approves the corrections suggested by the manager of Polity Guidance and Training.

e. Editorial Change 005—Manager of Polity Guidance and Training, Joyce Lieberman, noted editorial corrections in Chapter 3 of the Book of Order.

In order to be consistent in all the council responsibility and power sections of Form of Government, Chapter 3:

At G-3.0201b remove the semicolon between the phrases “pastoral care among the congregations” and “in order that the Sacraments” and in G-3.0401b remove the semicolon between the phrases “pastoral care among its presbyteries” and “in order that the Sacraments.”

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution approves the corrections suggested by the manager of Polity Guidance and Training.

5. Special Thanks

On behalf of the 220th General Assembly (2012), the Advisory Committee on the Constitution expresses its thanks and appreciation to Teaching Elders Paul Hooker, Catherine McDonald, and Daniel Saperstein for their dedicated service to the church through membership on the ACC. Each of them has brought profound gifts and deep dedication to the work of the ACC. In addition, the ACC wishes to thank Ruling Elder Linda Therien, who found it necessary to resign her position in early 2012 due to personal reasons. Linda’s contribution was important and valued and she is missed.

The ACC is grateful for the staff assistance of the Reverend Mark Tammen, until May 2011 the Associate Stated Clerk and director for the Department of Constitutional Services; the Reverend Andrew Black, director for the Department of Constitutional Services since September 2011; and Joanne Green, administrative assistant for the Department of Constitutional Services.

Finally, the ACC is deeply grateful for the insightful leadership Stated Clerk Gradye Parsons, who serves as an ex officio member of the ACC. We are grateful for the opportunity to serve with him.

General Assembly Committee on Representation Self-Study Report 2012

Introduction

In the last six months of the review period, the constitutional language that detailed committees on representation changed. This self-study seeks to show the transition that is still being worked out as well as the committee’s faithfulness to the former mandate. In this transition time, a verse that has spoken to us comes from 1 John, “let us love … in truth and action” (1 Jn. 3:18). We joyfully submit this truth-telling self-study as witness to how we have answered God’s call from January 1, 2006, to December 31, 2011. The General Assembly Committee on Representation serves at the national level of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). It is not to be confused with committees on representation that exist at other council levels. The committee found the review process in 2006 helpful and has implemented insights from the review into its common practices. As the church structures at the General Assembly level make the transition to the new Constitution, the committee looks for adaptable ways to assist in the transition while keeping the church mindful of its commitments to maintaining the diversity of the body, access and full participation in decision-making as well as communal life.

I. WHO WE ARE

Now there are varieties of gifts, but the same Spirit; and there are varieties of services, but the same Lord; and there are varieties of activities, but it is the same God who activates all of them in everyone. (1 Cor. 12:4–6, NRSV)

… let us love, not in word or speech, but in truth and action. (1 Jn. 3:18, NRSV)

We trust in God the Holy Spirit, everywhere the giver and renewer of life.

The Spirit justifies us by grace through faith, sets us free to accept ourselves and to love God and neighbor, and binds us together with all believers in the one body of Christ, the Church. …

In a broken and fearful world the Spirit gives us courage to pray without ceasing, to witness among all peoples to Christ as Lord and Savior, to unmask idolatries in Church and culture, to hear the voices of peoples long silenced, and to work with others for justice, freedom, and peace. (The Book of Confessions, A Brief Statement of Faith, 10.4, Lines 52–57, 65–71)

The apostle Paul, in 1 Corinthians 12, reminded the worshipping community that he was writing that it, the church, is the Body of Christ: hands and feet, eyes and ears, intestines and skin, hair and all. Each part essential to the wholeness and functioning of the body: each part gifted by the Spirit to fulfill its appointed role, with Christ serving as the Head to love and lead us as we work together, responding to God’s call.

To this end, the General Assembly is the widest council of Presbyterians who gather for worship and witness, mission and ministry, coming from across the various spectrums of geography, race, ethnicity, sex, culture, theological conviction, marital status, ability, age, and socioeconomic condition to discuss issues and make decisions that affect Presbyterians across the country.\(^1\) Each council has its own committee on representation that must provide for the functions described in G-3.0103 (and previously in G-9.0105 in the former Form of Government, revised in July 2011). The General Assembly Committee on Representation (GACOR) serves the council of the General Assembly level and has an important role as the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) lives into what it means to be the Body of Christ in the 21st century. Committees on representation (CORs) came into being through the contractual commitments of the Presbyterian Church in the United States (PCUS) and the United Presbyterian Church in the United States of America (UPCUSA) recorded in the “Articles of Agreement” (Attachment A—Articles 8 and 9) adopted at reunion\(^2\) in 1983 to address the concerns of racial ethnic groups and women that voices too long excluded from leadership would continue to not be heard, included, and honored. The founding purpose of committees on representation is to help us as a denomination be intentional at every council level about its commitment to diversity and inclusiveness, bringing attention to the behaviors and biases, the policies and procedures, the operating systems that continue to resist the full participation of underrepresented groups in power-sharing and leadership roles. For example, rigid compliance with inflexible models and patterns of how leaders participate in elected service that resist adapting to the needs of elected persons, their conditions of life, and the church. Three examples of barriers to national service are for those who (1) work for an hourly wage, (2) persons in school, and (3) persons who are employed but who do not receive generous vacation and/or other leave. The committee examines and attempts to make visible the patterns of leadership selection that continue to privilege persons from some groups over others. The committee examines the system for signals of resistance to particular groups of persons (from communities acknowledged to suffer systemic discriminatory practices) and works to keep the denominational councils informed of their progress with both volunteer leadership and employed personnel. The church proclaims in The Confession of 1967:

God’s redeeming work in Jesus Christ embraces the whole of man’s life: social and cultural, economic and political, scientific and technological, individual and corporate.

9.55
With an urgency born of this hope, the church applies itself to present tasks and strives for a better world. It does not identify limited progress with the kingdom of God on earth, nor does it despair in the face of disappointment and defeat. In steadfast hope, the church looks beyond all partial achievement to the final triumph of God. (The Book of Confessions, 9.53, 9.55)

For most of the period of this review, GACOR operated under G-9.0105 (see Attachment B, Former Book of Order References Regarding GACOR) of the Book of Order, which described the make-up of committees on representation and described some of its functions as: “advis[ing] the governing bodies with respect to membership and to that of their committees, boards, agencies and other units in implementing principles of participation and inclusiveness to ensure fair and effective representation in the decision making of the church.” The CORs also were responsible for advocacy for diversity within the leadership of the denomination, review and consultation, and providing resources related to ensuring that the diversity of the PC(USA)’s membership and the denomination’s commitment to inclusiveness and diversity were reflected in all that the council and the church does.

The 219th General Assembly (2010) approved Book of Order language that set in place significant revisions and replaced the former language with two sections: “The Foundations of Presbyterian Polity” and the “Form of Government.” The assembly acted to retain the denomination’s historic commitment to diversity and inclusiveness and retention of committees on representation. These recommendations were ratified by a majority of presbyteries, becoming effective on July 10, 2011, (see Attachment C—Current Book of Order Reference Regarding GACOR). This was the culmination of years of careful work. The GACOR had provided feedback on drafts of the report and had engaged in consultation with members of the new Form of Government Task Force who brought their report to the assemblies in 2008 and 2010. The assembly asserted that now is still the time for committees on representation and that the commitment we make as a church must be shared in our structures in order for us to transcend our human weaknesses that default to division and disturbance in the unity of Christ’s body. The GACOR took up the task of helping interpret what passage of the revision would mean for committees on representation at other council levels of the church and distributed a frequently asked questions resource to all councils (in English, Spanish, and Korean) in 2011.

So, who are we? We are Presbyterians committed to Christ, grace-filled receivers of God’s abundant life, called to serve Christ in assisting the church to care for and affirm the blessed variety within our unity. We are women and men; teaching and ruling elders, baptized members; people from north, south, east, and west; persons who are racially and ethnically diverse speaking in voices informed by different languages, different cultures, different experiences; persons who worship in small, medium, and large congregations and communities; varying in age; demonstrating a wide spectrum of theological convictions within the Reformed tradition; with abilities and disabilities, each of us a child of God, each a cherished part of the Body of Christ, contributing to its wholeness, and each seeking to help the PC(USA) exhibit the Kingdom of God to the world in all its glorious differences, even as we “be[come] one, as we [Jesus and the Father] are one” (Jn. 17:11, NRSV).

II. WHY WE ARE IMPORTANT

Once you were not a people, but now you are God’s people; once you had not received mercy, but now you have received mercy. (1 Pet. 2: 10)
A profound demographic shift is happening throughout the United States of America made noticeable by the increase in the numbers and proportion of many ethnic peoples and groups from places around the world including our overseas mission fields, creating a more multiethnic, multiracial, and multicultural society. By 2042, there is projected to be no majority racial group in the United States. The population is also seeing more people with disabilities. One in six Americans is a person with disability. According to the 2000 Census, that group has nearly 54 million people. As veterans return from Iraq and Afghanistan and survivor rates from substantial war injuries increase, war casualties are adding many more people with disability into our communities. The church must respond with open arms, hearts and when necessary work to provide access to these children of God.

By rooting the commitment to diversity and unity in the Foundations and under the exposition of what God’s mission is through this church, the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) demonstrates that it is an essential function and fundamental commitment in all its expressions (congregations and councils). Following the great commission of Jesus Christ: “… All authority in heaven and on earth has been given to me. Go therefore and make disciples of all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father and of the Son, and of the Holy Spirit, and teaching them to obey everything that I have commanded you. And remember, I am with you always, to the end of the age” (Mt. 28:18–20), the church has committed to grow the church “deep and wide.” That commitment is described by the 219th General Assembly (2010) as to be achieved by efforts to grow: in evangelism, in discipleship, in servanthood, and in diversity.

As we seek to be an effective witness, our denomination is building into its basic structures, policies, practices, and developing appropriate tools to create faithful organizational life where everyone is treated with dignity, is respected, and is provided an equal opportunity for serving in leadership and employment, regardless of race, ethnicity, age, sex, disability, geography, or theological conviction.

Setting high goals does not mean achievement follows. The PC(USA) failed to attain the goal of 20 percent racial ethnic (other than white) membership by 2010. The denomination fell short of this target by more than half, which indicates there are more challenges a predominantly white denomination has in diversifying its membership and leadership. At the same time there is tremendous activity and vitality in ministries of racial ethnic Presbyterians and multicultural communities. The following table describes a positive outlook of the increasing multiethnic, multiracial, and multicultural worshipping communities (including congregations). For a signal of the emerging communities already being nurtured in our midst, one only has to look at the new church developments (NCDs) and Fellowships (or Bible Studies) recognized by the denomination. Figure 1 shows the distribution of these worshipping communities by primary racial ethnic constituencies.

These figures show that there are considerable resources for connecting leaders to successful racial ethnic ministries. The GACOR wants to help the council consider reformations in structural confines so that the church may adapt to welcome leaders from these ministries into the shared-power relations within councils and the responsibilities for the wider community that it carries. Questions the data raises for GACOR are: (1) how do leaders (in communities not yet defined as congregations) participate in the life of the council?; (2) where can nominating committees be encouraged to consider leaders from these communities for service in the council? on committees?; and (3) how might GACOR support committees on representation to be a structure that may assist their councils to make the adaptive changes necessary to involve these leaders in its decision-making and life? As each council may design the structures of CORs “by their own rule,”” the opportunity GACOR has is as catalyst not enforcer. If the 220th General Assembly (2012) approves the action regarding the “1,001 new worshipping communities,”7 these questions will become more important in shaping the life of the PC(USA). How new worshipping communities become participants who have impact on the communal life of the councils is an important nexus for the church at this time in its life and ministry. If these worshipping communities (often vibrant and vital in communities of color) remain outside, and therefore merely decorative, to the larger normative body, then continuing PC(USA) retreat/decline seems assured.

A. The General Assembly Committee on Representation (GACOR):

With the church, the committee proclaims:

...God has created the peoples of the earth to be one universal family. In his reconciling love, he overcomes the barriers between brothers and breaks down every form of discrimination based on racial or ethnic difference, real or imaginary. The church is called to bring all men to receive and uphold one another as persons in all relationships of life: in employment, housing, education, leisure, marriage, family, church, and the exercise of political rights. Therefore, the church labors for the abolition of all racial discrimination and ministers to those injured by it. Congregations, individuals, or groups of Christians who exclude, dominate, or patronize their fellowmen, however subtly, resist the Spirit of God and bring contempt on the faith which they profess. (The Book of Confessions, The Confession of 1967, 9.44)

With a strong history of combating racism, the Presbyterian church has been equally committed to include all persons regardless of race, ethnicity, age, sex, disability, geography, theological conviction, or worldly condition. The commitment is enshrined in statements but it must also be followed up with renewed efforts in an ongoing process to achieve equity. Differences (that are a matter of essence or condition not elective and) on which disparities prevail, one being preferred and favored with insider status while “others” designated outsiders and disadvantaged. The advantage is procured by group identification (systematically), not based on individual traits or behaviors.

The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.’s) witness against racism and other –isms8 is long standing and is evidenced in several policies and papers, such as: “On Affirming Civil Rights and Nondiscrimination for All Person, Regardless of Sexual Orientation” (2004); “Facing Racism: A Vision of the Beloved Community” (1999); participation in partnership with Project Equality (1998); revision of Affirmative Action (1995); “On Developing and Strengthening Churchwide Affirmative Action (1991); A Churchwide Plan for Equal Employment Opportunity and Affirmative Action, (1985 and 1994); A Joint Report of the Councils on Church and Race; and “A Statement on Racial Ethnic” (1987), set the table for the denomination’s commitment to full representation and equal employment opportunity.

Regardless of the PC(USA)’s claims about fostering equity and equality in elected leadership and employment, at times, we find our human selves ill-at-ease with people who are different from us. Ultimately, our devotion to the gospel compels us to see everyone created in the image of God (including ourselves). The public witness, made visible, of sharing power across differences and choosing diverse leaders to participate in the decision making bodies to discern the Spirit’s will for the body hasn’t completely been realized.

Understanding the church’s humanness and thus limitedness in living out the principles of participation and inclusiveness in its decision-making bodies, the 219th General Assembly (2010) chose to require committees on representation (including the GACOR) as an important structure for the witness of the church. This action amended the action to replace the former Form of Government with a new Foundations of Presbyterian Polity and a new Form of Government. The assembly acted to recognize and strengthen accountability of the councils to the mission of Christ and to maintain a structure and foundational principle that would support and perhaps assist the body in attaining greater diversity. The GACOR, with resolute commitment, will challenge with inconvenient truth about equality in leadership and employment. The GACOR is committed to continue to serve the denomination to be an effective witness in diversity.

1. Membership

Until July 10, 2011, GACOR membership was determined by the number of synods and was determined by the formula contained in G-9.0105. In the transition, GACOR suggests maintaining membership tied to the number of synods as it guarantees geographic diversity in its membership and allows for enough persons to accomplish the tasks of the committee and to reach out to the whole church when each member’s networks may be called upon to find new leaders for the church.

Membership of the GACOR must comply with the principles of unity in diversity in F-1.0403 and G-3.0103. The commitment to inclusiveness is reflected in the diversity of the GACOR’s membership. At this time the persons serving are described as:

- 5 Senior Adults (over 56)
- 6 Adults (36–55)
- 1 Young Adult (26–35) and
- 2 Youth (25 and under) with 2 vacancies on December 31, 2011

Current members are from these racial ethnic categories:
There have been thirty-five persons who have served on the GACOR since January 2006. Most have fulfilled their elected terms. Due to life transitions, some members have had to resign their positions.

2. Staff Transition:

   Elder Joan Richardson was staff for the GACOR for seventeen years. She retired in spring 2009. The committee expresses thanksgiving for her faithful leadership and support. The Reverend Molly Casteel came in July 2009, just as the committee turned its attention to preparations for the 219th General Assembly (2010) and the next round of work with the Form of Government Task Force. There were a few months (in 2009) where there was not dedicated staff support for GACOR. The adjustment did cause a slow down for the committee (March to July 2009) that was quickly overcome in the latter part of the year. After the 2010 assembly, support staff support was strengthened and continues to the writing of this report.

B. Responsibilities of General Assembly Committee on Representation

With a great prophetic vision and commitment, the leaders of the reunion in 1983 established Committee on Representation for a strong commitment to diversity and full participation and inclusiveness thereof in its decision making bodies. Constitutionally mandated to advise, advocate, resource, review, recommend, and consult with the General Assembly, and with its committees, councils, and ministries divisions, the General Assembly Committee on Representation (as other committees on representation do at their councils) works to ensure that the principles of diversity in unity and the commitments regarding decision-making bodies and employment are implemented. The committee shall advise the General Assembly on the employment of personnel in conformity with the Churchwide Plan for Affirmative Action and Equal Employment Opportunity.

The current Book of Order mandates,

   G-3.0103 Participation and Representation

   The councils of the church shall give full expression to the rich diversity of the church’s membership and shall provide for full participation and access to representation in decision-making and employment practices (F-1.0403). In fulfilling this commitment, councils shall give due consideration to both the gifts and requirements for ministry (G-2.0104) and the right of people in congregations and councils to elect their officers (F-3.0106).

   Each council shall develop procedures and mechanisms for promoting and reviewing that body’s implementation of the church’s commitment to inclusiveness and representation. Councils above the session shall establish by their own rule committees on representation to fulfill the following functions: to advise the council regarding the implementation of principles of unity and diversity, to advocate for diversity in leadership, and to consult with the council on the employment of personnel, in accordance with the principles of unity and diversity in F-1.0403. A committee on representation should not be merged with another committee or made a subcommittee of another committee. (Book of Order, G-3.0103)

   Any part of the Book of Order must be read through The Foundations of Presbyterian Polity but also in light of the whole. References to other places within the Constitution (such as appear in the first paragraph of G-3.0103) are meant to point to the larger expression and connect them. The commitment to having diversity in leadership does not come at the expense of finding appropriate leaders or to bind the body. They do provide impulse to look for leaders outside the usual suspects. The importance of capable and qualified leaders being selected is the starting point. Within that caveat, GACOR advocates for leaders from underrepresented groups within the assembly level (council) who are appropriate to the body for which leadership is sought. There is a common (discriminatory and often unconscious) bias in any body that leaders who are not from the dominant (“normative”—always white males and often white females) cultures and constituencies are not as qualified. In reality persons from nondominant (often marginalized) cultures and locations are fluent in the ways of the dominant culture yet have a different perspective since they are “in but not of” that dominant culture. They have gifts for ministry that are missing if they are not included. The GACOR is an active search partner to the General Assembly Nominating Committee as it recruits pools of candidates for its leadership consideration and on its slates once they are selected.

   In a denomination that is 91 percent Caucasian (white), the privilege of persons from one race above others is always an advantage for persons from that dominant group. Despite there being more than seventy-five years of history within the PC(USA) of ordaining women to be ruling elders and fifty years of ordaining women as teaching elders, the default leader model in the PC(USA) (and the larger social context) is still the white male. While traditionally, the PC(USA) considers and presents these aspects of identity separately, in recent years the GACOR has considered the intersections of these advantaged and disadvantaged identities and tried to report to the church from the complexity of its lived realities. The term for this data is disaggregated (combined variables) so that data is reported out showing the intersections. So far, this is only possible with data tied to individuals so GACOR has experimented with the data on teaching elders. Looking at intersecting data points toward communities that are absent, where there is need for leadership development, as well as where groups are healthy. Knowing before you go recruiting that there are no “under thirty Asian female teaching elders” available (no matter what the entity’s wish list has on it) prevents wasted efforts and highlights needed leadership development and support areas. This insight was hidden when data was reported by race, or gender, or age separately. If councils embrace these kinds of methods, it will equip them to find the diverse leaders available but also witness to the needed intentional effort to encourage, disciple, mentor, and support leaders from groups that are missing. The health of the body is at stake.

C. Social Justice and Equality within the Leadership of the Church:

Paul, in his letter to the church in Galatia, writes, “There is no longer Jew or Greek, there is no longer slave or free, there is no longer male and female; for all of you are one in Christ Jesus.” (Gal. 3: 28). Several biblical passages affirm equality for every person in diverse communities, but this principle given to us as a value of Christ and essential to his body (the Church) has been challenging to put into daily practice. This Galatians text is quoted in G-3.0103 before committees on representation are described. The mission of committees on representation (including GACOR), in this biblical context, is set as an instrument that assists the Great Physician regarding the body to move it toward social justice and toward equity and equality within the leadership of the council (and the denomination). It may be an unrelenting mission, but as partners with God and the councils, committee actions make possible necessary changes to (to habits and hearts) have the Body of Christ reflect its full diversity and its unity in Christ.

D. Representation...

• Brings Fruitfulness

Jesus Christ commands those who believe to love one another and all others. In a multicultural society and church, we are called to serve faithfully with open minds and hearts and work for the Kingdom of God. As we profess in The Confession of 1967, we provide faithful witness to Jesus Christ when we participate in God’s reconciling work in church, in society and in the wider world. The differences bridged at the Pentecost, in the church’s birthing moments, in Acts are emblematic of the communities we are called to create. United by God’s Spirit, speaking in multiple languages but not divided in understanding, the church is most faithful when it is most broadly constituted. As the Book of Order states, “…the congregation is the basic form of the church, but it is not of itself a sufficient form of the church. These congregations are bound together in communion with one another, united in relationships of accountability and responsibility, contributing their strengths to the benefit of the whole, and are called, collectively, the church” (G-1.0101). The Constitution further declares, “[t]he mutual interconnection of the church through its councils is a sign of the unity of the church. … This call to bear witness is the work of all believers. The particular responsibility of the councils of the church is to nurture, guide, and govern those [whose] witness … strengthens the whole church and gives glory to God” (G-3.0101).

The witness of Christ’s church through councils must “nurture a covenant community of disciples of Christ” (Book of Order, G-3.0101). The covenant testified to in Scripture and made flesh with the birth, life, and death of Jesus, expanded the promises to all of God’s family. The councils “nurture [sic] covenant community” when they pay particular attention to encourage and support diverse constituencies who are united for ministry and mission reflecting the unity of God (who also lives in the mysterious community of the Trinity). Assisting the church to make efforts to include all the heirs of the promise united in baptism, the GACOR helps the council of the assembly be faithful in this work, points to areas needing nurture, and assists the council to lean into wholeness by drawing from all parts of the Body of Christ.

• Brings New Relationships/Connections:

In our faith journeys we believers meet people from different walks of life, we connect (as we are claimed), we belong to one another, and develop deep friendships and relationships that do not erase our differences but create unity and connection through Christ. Committees on representation seek to provide opportunities for relationships by bringing people at council levels together across differences (that divide and feed discrimination and oppression) from multicultural communities. Consciously working, worshipping, and praying together, sharing from unique cultures and wisdom of experiences, councils also create relationships and build bridges to connect, encouraging greater understanding of one another while also encouraging diversity and inclusiveness (instead of diminishing difference in ways that erase/silence some). New connections create more faithful witness and wider expression of God’s amazing action in the world: they expand God’s reign and bring reconciliation. Healing the family and the body God has claimed in the birth, death, and resurrection of Jesus.

• Respects Individuals and Communities:

Paraphrasing Scripture, we are individually different (as are communities of similarity and difference within the body), but it is the same Spirit which works in all and unites all. We are all called into the Church of Jesus Christ, marked through baptism, as Christ’s own children by the Holy Spirit. Some are called to ordained leadership but all are called to Christ’s ministry. Faith teaches humility and service. Jesus Christ’s life and ministry have set an example for us to follow. When the church looks for leaders, it is called to remember the One it follows who went to the outcast and the outsider and who chided the haughty. Representation work emulates the Christ who went to where the outsiders were and brought them into community with believers.

With mutual respect for one another and in seeking wholeness for the council, the GACOR advocates for and invites “others” (those who are different including differently abled) with respect, love, and justice to build our church and thereby challenge its members and others to enter into the Kingdom of God. With great admiration of our calling, we meet God’s children as they are in their struggle, identification, hope, ideas, joys, and traditions, and invite them to participate and share the vision of the Church as one body of Jesus Christ. This journey involves risk, but our willingness to serve will bear fruits and in so doing illustrate unity in diversity in the Kingdom of God.

- Serves Jesus Christ and His Church:

  Jesus Christ came into this world, not to be served, but to serve. As believers in Christ, we are called to serve one another. In doing so, we bring people together to serve one another. So too the GACOR serves. Our love and teaching help others to gain momentum for understanding and create an environment to serve in the church. Through the serving model, the church truly represents Christ and demonstrates Christ’s love in service to the world.

  Inclusive practices and wider participation benefits the whole church that functions best when all parts are working together. The General Assembly Committee on Representation is called to seek and assist the council in supporting the widest representation of persons for participation and leadership at the assembly level of the PC(USA), living into the church’s call to affirm the equality of all God’s children, created in God’s image, and to affirm those who are chosen for particular service.

III. ACCOMPLISHMENTS 2006–2011

Abbreviated lists of accomplishments for the review period include:

A. At the 217th General Assembly (2006)

- Submitted a self-study report, resourced and presented it to the review committee during the assembly.
- Resource persons were made available to three committees: Mission Coordination, Health Issues, and Review of General Assembly Permanent Committees.
- Advised the General Assembly as it reviewed changes to the structure of the GAMC in regards to their membership so that they might better implement the principles of participation and allow for greater representation within their committee.
- Gathered data on the various ways presbyteries selected their General Assembly commissioners and collected five years of data on assembly commissioners to study the representational characteristics per presbytery and synod.

B. At the 218th General Assembly (2008)

- Commented on an item of business sent to the Assembly Committee on Mission Coordination and Budgets impacting the make-up of the GAMC.
- Participated in the orientation of commissioners on the opening day of the assembly.
- Studied the Articles of Agreement and their impact on actions being considered by the assembly as well as providing educational content to the wider church about its commitment to representation and full participation.
- Commented on two items of business recommended by the Form of Government Task Force.

C. At the 219th General Assembly (2010)

- Assisted in commissioner orientation. Provided support for the Assembly Committee on Bills and Overtures committee members doing process observation and trained other process observers.
- Counseled the nFOG task force (from 2007 to 2010), advised and consulted with the director for Constitutional Services (Associate Stated Clerk, the Reverend Mark Tammen) to discuss nFOG task force’s recommendations, and commented on items before the assembly regarding necessary language concerning representation, diversity, and inclusiveness.
- Asked a question of the Advisory Committee on the Constitution that was referred as an item of business to the assembly (regarding authoritative interpretations).
- Provided resource persons to the assembly committee (regarding their comment) and, in so doing, participated in shaping the assembly’s recommendation to presbyteries regarding the new Form of Government as it passed at the 219th General Assembly (2010). There was a recommendation that committees on representation (and GACOR) would be elim-nated with the nFOG revision. Committee members serving as resource persons worked to interpret the importance of committees on representation in the proposed more flexible polity, and the continuing relevancy of the commitments made in the Articles of Agreement, at Reunion. Committee members participated in several conference call consultations with nFOG task force members, observed an nFOG task force meeting, and in all ways supported the assembly’s consideration of the role of the committee and its usefulness serving the church going forward. These efforts were rewarded by the assembly committee’s action to require committees on representation at councils above the session.

- Commented and served as resource persons on sixteen items of business considered by the assembly in six assembly committees: Church Growth, Christian Education and Presbyterian Loan and Development Program, Social Justice and Promotion of Social Righteousness, Form of Government, Polity, Middle Governing Bodies, and General Assembly Procedures.

- Recommended, with the GANC, a change to the Book of Order adjusting the one-third (male elders), one-third (female elders), one-third (ministers) formula for the elected leadership of certain bodies (GACOR, GANC, and GAMC) to one-half elders, one half ministers with near as equal gender representation in both groups. The change was approved and sent to presbyteries for their vote where it was ratified, but since the new Form of Government was also ratified it became void since the related section of the Book of Order was removed in the new language.

D. Review of Annual Synod COR Reports

Each year, the GACOR receives written forms from synod committees on representation. The analysis of these synod forms and the interpretation of their representation data is a regular feature of GACOR work. These forms serve the purpose of allowing the GACOR to review the synod CORs, to receive limited information on the presence and health of the committees on representation at other council levels, and to assess the representational context of each geographic region’s leadership. Synods receive feedback from the committee with attention given to the quality and content of their relationships with their constituent presbyteries (lower councils) and to the goals the synod sets for itself affecting full participation. Synods find it a challenge to complete the representational data grids in some categories, especially age and disability because incomplete information is shared from synod councils and their nominating committees on persons serving. Other challenges show that not all presbyteries have effective committees on representation and that may affect the synod’s ability to assess participation, support their CORs, and/or effectively reach their full geographical diversity (which would impact other categories). Many synod COR leaders are willing to ask presbyteries for time on the floor to promote the importance of the work of CORs in the life of the church, diversity concerns, and related issues. These leaders request training and resources from GACOR.

Each synod is responsible to reflect the diversity in its context. The GACOR considers feedback from synods in these forms when it designs new resources. The GACOR continues to be an advocate for underrepresented communities and advises the synods of their responsibilities to make a conscious effort to ensure that their staff, committees, boards, and councils implement the principles of participation and inclusiveness to ensure fair and effective representation in the decision making of the church in their council.

As of the writing of this report, all sixteen synods have submitted reports from their committees on representation. From the synod forms, out of 173 presbyteries 6 percent do not have CORs. Synod leadership, in all committees and bodies, is about 29 percent racial ethnic (other than white), 5 percent persons with disabilities, and 7 percent youth. By contrast, the membership of synod committees on representation was described as about 58 percent racial ethnic, 10 percent persons with disabilities, and 8 percent youth. Clearly, diversity and inclusiveness is intentionally sought out in the membership of synod CORs while the other leadership of the synod is less diverse. There is work to do. Councils do not always have leadership in the pool, or look for diverse leadership, to meet their needs.

The information gathered and interpreted from these reports assists GACOR when it provides counsel to the GANC. The subcommittee of GACOR that receives and reviews the synod COR reports also provides the connection between GACOR and the GANC. The committee works diligently and requests data annually from the General Assembly Nominating Committee (GANC) in order to advise them on the pools available for each body it nominates for, as well as meeting biennially to advise and consult on the slate of nominees presented to the assembly for action.

E. Resources and Activities

- Distributed the DVD, Motivated by Gospel, Not by Law (in English, Spanish, and Korean) to synod and presbytery CORs.

- Distributed brochures and other resources (in English, Korean, and Spanish) including the title, “How to Revive or Start a Presbytery COR.”

- When finances and conditions allow, GACOR planned its meetings throughout the regions of the denomination in order to engage more mid council CORs in dialogue about the work and its contexts.
• Created new resources to explore what inclusiveness and diversity mean at all levels of the denomination, including a FAQ sheet on the impact of new constitutional language on committees on representation and councils (distributed in Spanish, English, and Korean).

• Distributed the “Fixings” newsletter through 2007, when it was decided that fiscal resources were better allocated to electronically distributed resources (the website and email became the means to distribute rather than bulk mailing).

• Provided dynamic and relevant content in the biennial training event for synod COR members, reflective of the context of CORs at the time. An example would be allowing formative questions to guide training planning like, “How do we come to the table as a diverse group, in light of the changes to the BOO language?” This question eventually resulted in a workshop provided during the training.

• Studied and developed a workshop on the intersections of race and gender that was presented for mid council leaders at the Big Tent 2 conference in June/July 2011 by committee members and staff, as well as another workshop on the effects of the new Book of Order language on CORs, and provided an exhibit booth for GACOR where we promoted the new resources and hosted book signings by authors speaking at the Fall 2011 Training Event.

• Committee members serve as resource persons to assembly committees and distribute resources during assemblies about GACOR, by request, or available in the exhibit hall.

The GACOR holds a training event every two years and invites synod leaders. Two members from each synod are invited to receive this training. Resources, including worship resources, were posted online to allow COR members to use these resources in training within their synods.

• 2007 Training, Florida. Event hosted forty-three people from fourteen synods with workshops covering topics like: Disability Concerns; Youth/Young Adult Issues; Exploring 10 Commandments of Communicating with Persons with Disabilities; the GA Nominations Process; Strengthening COR; and doing representation work in new ways. Participants were given an opportunity to meet within their synod group to brainstorm ways to incorporate training experience into their own synods. Evaluation summaries from this training included these comments: “Broadened my vision of inclusivity” and “Increased awareness of exclusiveness.”

• 2009 Training, Louisville. Topics: “Bridging the Gap Between Diversity and Future,” “Joining Hands,” “Children’s Ministry and Youth and Young Adult Education,” “Understanding Our Differences,” “Different ‘Languages’ of Diversity,” and cultural proficiency. The GACOR contracted Research Services to analyze the evaluation data and provide a summary. The response rate was very high and feedback was most all “very helpful” or “helpful.”

• 2011 Training, Louisville. The event was centered on the change in constitutional language and its impact on the councils and their committees on representation as well as having content about serving the church in transition. Online evaluations were used for this event in order to provide better accessibility for participants. Among the evaluations we received the following feedback:

  —Three-quarters or more of those who attended the 2011 Synod COR Training described fourteen out of its fifteen activities as “very helpful” or “helpful.”

  —In the overall evaluation question, 88 percent rated the training excellent or good.

  —One participant added: “The best part of the GACOR training was gaining a better understanding of what COR is and the responsibilities. There is a lot of work involved with doing a good job for the synod, presbytery and local church. I feel much more confident and look forward to applying what I’ve learned and helping others understand the work of COR.”

G. Interaction with Related Groups and Partners

• Middle Governing Bodies Commission (MGBC):

  —The GACOR sent a member to observe all the MGBC meetings. The committee member had the privilege of educating, supporting, and encouraging commission members as they fulfilled their charge. One consequence of the GACOR member’s presence came after listening to a presentation to the commission, which omitted the history of African American Presbyterians. The GACOR arranged for the electronic publication of an older report of the General Assembly, All Black Governing Bodies: The History and Contributions of All-Black Governing Bodies. The GACOR printed enough copies to distribute to members of the MGB commission and the document was referenced in their discussions.

  —The GACOR participated in a conference call to consult on proposed language the commission would consider and how it would affect council functions, their work and full participation.
Members of GACOR, involved in an internal FOG task group, were indispensable in advising the 219th General Assembly (2010) as to the importance of the work of committees on representation and GACOR in particular. In the four years of deliberations of the task force, there was talk that committees on representation would be eliminated as a mandated structure when the FOG revision was presented to the assembly. The GACOR sent several comments and responses regarding: the importance of COR, the commitments made in the Articles of Agreement, and participated in several conference calls with nFOG Task Force members. The GACOR observed several FOG and nFOG Task Force meetings, explained the importance of COR in their deliberations from 2006 to 2010, and rejoiced when the task force sent their recommendation with mandated committees on representation functions described.

• Encounters with the General Assembly Mission Council (GAMC):
  —After experiencing accessibility issues with materials posted for the GAMC meetings in 2009 and 2010, the GACOR advocated for those materials in appropriate formats so a GACOR member (who is blind) could follow their meetings. Staff persons (of all the involved bodies) were very helpful in getting these issues resolved.
  —In 2009, the GACOR attempted to send a letter to the council members with advice regarding proposed changes to the Employee Manual consistent with their function to advise and review with regard to employment of personnel. The letter never was shared with elected leadership beyond the chair. When other comments from other entities (who are corresponding members) were raised and referred for more discussion, GACOR comments were not included and the committee was not consulted in the subsequent discussions.
  —In observing meetings of the General Assembly Mission Council (the elected body), concerns were raised about the nearly singular nature of representation in the executive committee after an election in 2010. The member present raised concern with the GAMC elected leadership and the GAMC nominating committee. Correspondence followed to express concern, offer assistance, and suggest an evaluation of their procedures. In 2011, this pattern was nearly exactly repeated and the GACOR wrote another letter advising the council of its excluding practices and suggesting they look for remedies.

• The GACOR consulted with the General Assembly Committee on Bills and Overtures in its participation in process observation of participation in committee meetings during the assembly and collected their observation forms.

• Advised the Stated Clerk, and shared their report on process observation at the 219th General Assembly (2010) with the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly (COGA).

• In February 2007, a special joint session was held between members of GACOR and GANC to create awareness about and discuss barriers that might keep people from serving at the General Assembly level, inhibiting full representation and participation. Discussion also touched on the difficulties to assess and consider theological conviction. This meeting was held in addition to the regular consultation practices of the two committees.

• A sampling of regular constituencies/partners:
  —Presbyterians for Disability Concerns (PDC), is a valued partner in the work of the GACOR. These advocates create resources for congregations, and the wider denomination, around the celebration of Disability Concerns Sunday and connect to the disability consultants who serve on staff. They work with GACOR to hold the assembly accountable to its commitments to maintain access to the meeting and body for all persons regardless of their abilities and disabilities. The GACOR learns from its relationship with this group—and brings their insights and questions into the regular deliberations of the committee in its work.

  —Racial Ethnic Caucuses, Councils and Committees. To the extent possible, GACOR members are assigned to serve as liaisons to each of the recognized caucuses of racial ethnic Presbyterians. The liaison role is to share information from the constituency with GACOR and to share information from the committee to the constituency group. These relationships are relied upon when deficits in nomination pools are identified and targeted recruiting efforts begin. Insights inform the committee’s resources and communications.

  —Advocacy Committees. When the GACOR has special concern with representation and participation of women or racial ethnic persons, or when their work may affect these constituencies, they take care to communicate with the advocacy committees. From time to time they ask that the advocacy committees share what they are working on—especially as they prepare for the assembly meetings. The GACOR shares its comments on items of business and in doing so adjust its actions (when partners are covering the concerns already adequately, for instance). Due to the action of the 218th General Assembly (2008) forming the Climate for Change Task Force, special attention was paid to cooperate with the task force and in response to their questions and draft recommendations, with the advocacy committees to confirm roles and responsibilities that the 220th General Assembly (2012) may approve and that will affect the tasks of GACOR as well as its partner advocacy committees.

H. GACOR Meetings

The GACOR meets with its full membership two times a year. It used to meet three times a year and adjustments were made for fiscal savings. The executive committee may meet face-to-face (or via electronic means) one additional time a year.
to conduct business and/or for training and orientation of new members. The committee conducts most of its business through the work of subcommittees who meet regularly via conference call and occasionally other means. The committee gives and receives reports, monitors employment related materials, and participates in education and training on subjects relevant to the assembly, committees on representation, and issues that affect diverse leadership and full participation.

Training sessions for the review period have included: Cultural Proficiency, The Intersection of Race and Gender, How to Write Advice and Counsel Memorandums and Comments, Effective Church Transformation, How to Work with Advocacy Groups, Consideration of “Rebuilding the Presbyterian Establishment,” Multicultural Ministries, Scenario Planning, and heard from church members, council leaders, and denominational staff. In 2009 and 2010, as they evaluated their work, they read and discussed Just Hospitality: God’s Welcome in a World of Difference, by theologian Letty Russell. Sometimes these sessions drew on the tremendous capacities and gifts of the GACOR members themselves, who are a diverse group of individuals with a variety of talents, education, and career experiences.

The Mandate

The General Assembly Committee on Representation mandate may be traced directly to the Articles of Agreement, specifically Article 8—Racial Ethnic Representation, Participation and Organizations and Article 9—Women’s Representation, Participation and Organizations. These articles were transcribed and enforced in the former Book of Order in G-4.0403 and G-9.0105. There were some adjustments by addition over time, namely the inclusion of persons with disabilities in 1992. These commitments ensured that persons of various backgrounds shall be represented in the decision-making bodies of the church. The work of the GACOR is expected to be available in an advisory capacity to leadership and bodies of the council, serving as advocate for underrepresented groups and reviewer and resource concerning the membership of the General Assembly’s decision-making bodies. In July 2011, the Constitution of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), the Book of Order, was revised to replace one section with two sections, The Foundations of Presbyterian Polity and the Form of Government. Within The Foundations of Presbyterian Polity, Section F-1.0403 Unity in Diversity, emphatically states,

“As many of you as were baptized into Christ have clothed yourselves with Christ. There is no longer Jew or Greek, there is no longer slave or free, there is no longer male and female; for all of you are one in Christ Jesus. And if you belong to Christ, then you are Abraham’s offspring, heirs according to the promise” (Gal. 3:27–29).

The unity of believers in Christ is reflected in the rich diversity of the Church’s membership. In Christ, by the power of the Spirit, God unites persons through baptism regardless of race, ethnicity, age, sex, disability, geography, or theological conviction. There is therefore no place in the life of the Church for discrimination against any person. The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) shall guarantee full participation and representation in its worship, governance, and emerging life to all persons or groups within its membership. No member shall be denied participation or representation for any reason other than those stated in this Constitution.

The Form of Government connects this founding principle with the structures and functions of committees on representation at G-3.0103, where it states that “… councils above the session shall establish by their own rule committees on representation to fulfill the following functions: to advise the council regarding the implementation of principles of unity and diversity, to advocate for diversity in leadership, and to consult with the council on the employment of personnel, in accordance with the principles of unity and diversity in F-1.0403. A committee on representation should not be merged with another committee or made a subcommittee of another committee.”

In addition to the Book of Order, the GACOR has as its guide its Manual of Operations (revised over the 2011 year and adopted in early 2012), the Manual of the General Assembly (which includes the Organization for Mission and the Standing Rules of the General Assembly), and the Churchwide Plan for Affirmative Action and Equal Employment Opportunity.

In the Manual of the General Assembly, according to Standing Rule C.1.c, the GACOR shall assist the Moderator regarding the appointment of a commissioner to be the moderator of each assembly committee and a commissioner to serve as vice moderator of each assembly committee. In the same way, GACOR negotiates with each Moderator to provide advice regarding the appointment of persons to serve on special committees and task forces. There is a recommendation from the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly (COGA) to the 220th General Assembly (2012) to amend Standing Rule K.1.c. to make this relationship between the Moderator and GACOR an automatic one. The GACOR was one of only two committees of the Office of the General Assembly who were not described in the Organization for Mission. Like the General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission, GACOR was described by the Book of Order until July 10, 2011. The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly (COGA) is recommending to the 220th General Assembly (2012) that this change and a brief description be included in the Organization for Mission. These are part of the changes necessitated by the new constitutional language and do not reflect new tasks or responsibilities.

The GACOR provides advice and consults with the General Assembly Nominating Committee (GANC) on a regular basis to review the pools of candidates and slates of nominations with special regard to the race, ethnicity, age, sex, disability, geography, and theological conviction of persons in the various pools for consideration for nomination as well as the slates they produce. Other characteristics that may factor into a deliberation may include socioeconomic class, language, marital status, national origin (ancestry), and other conditions of life as were previously outlined in G-4.0403 in the former Book of Order. The GACOR assists in recruiting of persons from specific recognized underrepresented groups outlined in the Book of
The GACOR consults with the council and advises the body when it concludes that the body is not living out the letter or spirit of the principles of participation and inclusiveness. In accordance with the Churchwide Plan, the GACOR shall participate in any review or revision of the Churchwide Plan for Affirmative Action and Equal Employment Opportunity.20

Like all permanent standing committees of the General Assembly, GACOR submits to regular review of the body, advises the Stated Clerk of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), the Executive Director of the General Assembly Mission Council, and the Moderator of the General Assembly. As a part of its work to advocate for diversity in leadership, the GACOR connects with and consults racial ethnic caucuses, councils, and consulting committees, programmatic offices in the national staff structure that connect with assigned communities (like Racial Ethnic and Women’s Ministries, Youth Ministries, and others) to resource issues regarding equitable representation, and recommends corrective actions designed to accelerate progress toward full representation and participation.

The GACOR reviews each assembly and provides feedback to the Stated Clerk regarding issues impacting full participation, and delivers a report to the Stated Clerk of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). Areas of concern that are reviewed may include: General Assembly elections; procedures and policies that impact the inclusiveness of the assembly, access and participation; the work of the committee on local arrangements; any discriminatory experiences reported to them, business before the assembly that impacts participation and representation; and the characteristics (size, timing, duration, location, room, and committees, etc.) of assemblies and the impacts they have on participants’ access to decision-making (appropriate to their role) as well as representation.

The work of the committee includes critically analyzing the PCUSA system and assisting the body in eliminating disparities, encouraging equity, ensuring access, empowering once silent voices, and transforming structures that serve to keep captive the majority and separate them from the marginalized. The committee looks forward to exploring ways it can help the assembly’s (and through its sister committee other councils’) centered powers reduce their own resistance to sharing power more broadly. The committee works with excluded communities to connect, heal (and encourage reconciliation), empower, and express value for their gifts, underutilized and integrated in the church as a whole. In these ways it seeks to help the church be that community of faith, hope, love, and witness that we are called to be.

IV. AREAS FOR IMPROVEMENT

During the review period and in reflection on its own assessments, the General Assembly Committee on Representation came across several areas where improvement would assist the council to more faithfully apply its commitment to “give full expression to the rich diversity of the church’s membership and shall provide for full participation and access to representation in decision-making and employment practices.”

A. Relationship with the General Assembly Nominating Committee (GANC)

The nomination process is very important in the effective witness of diversity and representation. Full participation is empowered in decision-making bodies by nominating necessary leaders (the right people) rather than simply nominating someone for the sake of affecting the diversity of the body. The work of the committees is enhanced because both staff are in the same department within the Office of the General Assembly, which helps with them remaining in direct contact with one another on a regular basis.

The GANC does an admirable job of considering representational issues as it seeks the best qualified candidates for positions within the General Assembly. They must consider many variables and balance multiple demands. A thorough review of representational concerns may take time away from their other tasks. The GACOR would provide more recruiting support to GANC if they provided more regular and timely information on the pools for the nominated bodies. This shift would allow the GANC to spend more time in considering the candidates themselves.

While GACOR and GANC have worked steadily to strengthen their partnership, there are still gaps existing in the partnership that, if addressed, would help support greater diversity. The General Assembly Nominating Committee is conscientious and private in its work. They do not often share enough information in a timely manner in order for the GACOR to provide its comments and advice. The hardest of the areas in F-1.0403 to provide counsel on is theological conviction. In 2007 the two committees had a conversation about this difficulty. There have been items of business at recent assemblies raising the concern of theological diversity.21 The GANC revised its application form for the pool closing in January 2012. The new form now includes a question aimed at helping candidates reveal their theological commitments by describing their theological perspective. As yet, GACOR has not had access to this information. It has not been shared in data on the pools. The GACOR is not equipped to provide advice to its partner committee regarding the representation of theological conviction of persons in the nomination process. The GANC considers application forms private, so GACOR only has access very limited access to see application forms. They are shared in excerpted form only during the consultation meeting itself, which is usually limited (by availability and timing) to only a few hours on one day. Only in that meeting do GANC members provide the proposed slate (for each entity it nominates for) and abbreviated application forms for the persons proposed to fill the vacant slots. The stack is usually seventy-to-ninety persons high for nomination. In the limited time available for the consultation, GACOR has found it impossible to get a read on theological conviction and to include it in the advice offered. That said, GACOR always lifts up the importance of theological diversity on decision-making bodies and raises it as a concern. The GACOR is interested in having an improved consultation process by GANC allowing more access to information on candidates (while protecting their privacy) and looks forward to see what help the new question may provide to those efforts.

By constantly developing networking relationships with underrepresented constituencies, GACOR has deep resources for recruiting. Having a better understanding of GANC’s needs, would help GACOR improve effective recruiting in support of their ministry to discern who is called for leadership in the PC(USA).

In its role as advocate, advisor, resource, and consultant, the GACOR is able to express its full commitment, as a valuable partner, to maximize the full participation and rich diversity in decision-making bodies at the national level. Instead the committee often feels as if it is hastily being presented with a final list of nominations for a rubberstamp approval. While the GACOR frequently invites representatives from the GANC to its meetings, the invitation in 2007 was the only invitation offered to GACOR from the GANC within the review period.

B. Employment of Personnel

The staff capacities and church structures have changed drastically since the inception of GACOR at reunion, and the writing of the Churchwide Plan shortly thereafter. Where there used to be an affirmative action officer on staff, there hasn’t been an office let alone staff designated as such for at least ten years. In 2010, the GAMC acted to create a referral network for racial ethnic leaders interested in employment opportunities in national staff positions. It came to be after several years of discussion about losses to the search and retention capacity for the organization, particularly related to managed databases that used to exist in programmatic offices and the staff who maintained them. The GACOR staff person served on the internal table (encompassing representatives from all the corporate entities in the PC(USA)) designing the “Diversity in Leadership” project in 2009 and 2010.

For several years, whenever staff positions were posted, GACOR members were often asked to distribute the announcements and assist in the search for diverse, qualified candidates for employment by the PC(USA). They did so but it is a poor use of their networks and time, and rarely garnered results. They provided that feedback to the bodies.

The tasks outlined in the Churchwide Plan, especially the lodging of implementation plans with GACOR, has not been done by GAMC or other corporate entities of the PC(USA) in the time under this review. Requests were not answered, eventually requests stopped. Among the factors for this failure may be the fact that the plan was created at a time with a larger staffing structure and resources. When it was simply a matter of receiving and reviewing reports from staff with these responsibilities, elected leaders had the support they needed to provide the accountability function for the assembly. When that structure shifted, there was no examination of the plan and consideration for adaptations. Instead more layers were applied. Responding to the confusion, the 218th General Assembly (2008) created the Climate for Change Task Force and charged them to bring back recommendations that would untangle the multiple and contradicting requirements imposed by assemblies on PC(USA) corporations regarding affirmative action and equal employment opportunity assessments, cultural proficiency reviews, and supplier diversity programs. As directed, the task force brings its report and recommendations to the 220th General Assembly (2012) for action. The GACOR has been responding to their inquiries since the beginning and has cooperated with their deliberations. The confusion of who’s who and what roles each party has will be resolved by the actions they suggest. The GACOR looks forward to having the assembly once again make its expectations of GACOR’s role clear with regard to how it works with the employment of personnel and the church as employer. With the Book of Order change in July 2011 that crystallized GACOR functions to three, one being as an advisor on the employment of personnel, this action will provide clarity where there was once little. The Churchwide Plan for Affirmative Action and Equal Employment Opportunity needs revision and GACOR looks forward to having a role in that process. As the document refers directly to GACOR on four occasions and locates the advising and reviewing role with the committee, this is one area where the committee could work more collaboratively with the church in fulfilling its task and continue to support our commitment to inclusiveness within our denomination.

The committee has experienced resistance to sharing employment data and AA/EEO reports from the agencies of the church. The agencies of the General Assembly include the Board of Pensions, the General Assembly Mission Council, the Office of the General Assembly, the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) Foundation, the Presbyterian Investment and Loan Program, Inc., and the Presbyterian Publishing Corporation. Items before this assembly should provide more clarity with regard to these tasks.

C. Process Observation at the General Assembly

As the committee looked at its mandate and asked how it was fulfilling the tasks, they considered how they assess the quality of participation in decision-making bodies. Realizing their evaluations often had stopped with who was at the table, they became curious with how the folks at the table were included in the process of decision-making: what the results of representation work had on the inclusiveness of the decisions. This discussion was particularly interesting in light of the action of the 217th General Assembly (2006) and the approval of the peace, unity, and purity report. That action of the assembly declared that different decision-making processes should be explored. The question then was considered, does anyone know what affect different decision-making processes has on participation? Do they have different patterns of participation? In 2010, the GACOR decided to experiment with process observation in General Assembly committees. This is a method that looks at what happened, who participated, and how the decisions were made in committee meetings. In their first attempt they recruited volunteers from the Churchwide Coordinating Team of Presbyterian Women who were familiar with process observation and who were planning on attending to observe General Assembly committees in action, as well as approaching the Assembly Committee on Bills and Overtures who spent some of their time during the assembly observing other committees to gauge how to advise the Stated Clerk on the assignment of reports and actions for the business meeting. The observers were enthusiastic about the process and reported new insights of what actually happened by paying close attention. The GACOR will be doing process observation again at this assembly and has been encouraged to do so by the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly (COGA) and the Stated Clerk. The GACOR looks forward to having more processes other than the default, Roberts Rules of Order, Newly Revised, and learning how that variety may influence who participates, when, and how it impacts the decisions made. The GACOR would like to assist the assembly in exploring decision-making processes and hopes to be a partner to all efforts to this end.

Encouraging and advocating for diverse meeting styles openly invites insights from many communities and widens the wisdom allowed to find expression in the body. The current dominant means of decision-making, Robert’s Rules of Order, Newly Revised, privileges those who are most familiar and comfortable with its conventions. Becoming more inviting in our meeting styles, whenever that is possible, would encourage new persons, emphasize other leaders who will bring valuable gifts to the table, and widen participation in the decision-making processes of the church. Expanding the means of decision-making also opens leadership to new leaders with different skills, enriching the tradition and witness we have inherited. How limited we are when we only have one way, one measure of a “good leader,” and one expression of being Presbyterian. It is in the spirit of all that committees on representation bring to the councils that they serve, that we hope our efforts at process observation bear fruit for the assembly.

D. Receiving and Reporting Disaggregated Data

Responding to General Assembly actions of 2008 and 2010, the committee began asking for data from the Office of the General Assembly in disaggregated data sets. The best example has been the data on ministers for 2008, 2009, and 2010. The request was for the data sets of two variables (gender and age) and then variables with three in the same set (race, gender, and age). The GACOR has learned a tremendous amount from its first efforts to look at data in disaggregated form. Since data sets, rather than having one variable, have multiple variables they are able to express more realistically a complexity that is more accurate to lived reality. Rather than only being able to say how many ministers are women, or young, or people of color, now we can, for example, see how many young female teaching elders are of Native American ancestry in any year. This equips us to identify potential untapped leaders, communities that have disparities, areas where support and discernment may be of assistance. We can also share valuable information with our partners. Not all data is collected in ways that can be reported in a disaggregated fashion. The GACOR hopes more entities will collect data in ways that support disaggregated measures—that will take changing institutional practices.

E. Transparent Reporting for Synod Data

With the 2012 conversion to the new website, GACOR wants to explore ways it can use the website to equip advocates for diversity in their councils. Online report submission is one wished for capacity. Delays caused by hardware and technical staff availability required this to still be a dream. Online reporting will allow data to be collected already in spreadsheet formats so it can be analyzed more easily. Interpreting the data, GACOR can then turn around and post abbreviated content from the synod forms for all to access. Over time, we would be able to show trend data on each synod—comparing its performance on its goals to itself. We have explored linking general demographic data from the synods to the website with their reports, further providing context for the data. We are excited about the possibilities and continue to work to make them realities.

F. Utilizing New Technologies

With the diminishing financial resources, the committee has had to reduce the number of its face-to-face meetings from three to two per year. Expanding costs will continue to challenge our budgets. The GACOR recognizes it needs to explore using more technological solutions for its meetings, whether its “skyping” a presenter into the meeting, using webinars to conduct trainings remotely, using the website to embed video resources, or designing new communications vehicles to re-source mid council leaders. The committee is aware not all technology is accessible. The needs of people with disabilities often point out weaknesses in technological means, but we commit to learning how we might maximize our human and technological capital to encourage the work of committees on representation and to serve Christ’s church.

V. NEW GOALS

Most of the areas of improvement are connected to new or emerging work the GACOR is exploring. Here are goals the committee has set for itself in light of what it has learned.

1. The GACOR proposes that the assembly support its “process observation” and that evaluations be expanded to be conducted in all the assembly committee meetings

Connecting the representational make up of any committee and its room setting, with the processes used for decisions and the impact of those factors on participation is a valuable exercise. It provides valuable feedback for leaders of future assembly committees as they plan for how they will do the work that is assigned to them. This process would enhance the equity, fairness, and opportunity for all commissioners and advisory delegates to participate in decision-making. It is valuable to continue coordinating this observation with the Assembly Committee on Bills and Overtures.

2. Recommend the assembly designate GACOR to be a corresponding member to the General Assembly Mission Council.

This would improve the working relationship while removing barriers between the bodies. Corresponding members have access to communicate advice, counsel, and concerns more effectively. Regardless, GACOR will continue to seek ways to improve its relationship with the GAMC and will continue to send a member to observe its meetings.

3. Recommend that the way be made clear in the PC(USA) to report more data in disaggregated means. Direct GACOR to participate in any review of statistical data reporting and collection.

This may involve reviewing what barriers prevent past assembly actions from being enacted The assembly may again direct entities that report representational data, to do so in disaggregated ways to equip the church to foster better self-understanding and to make persons from underrepresented groups more visible so that adaptive responses may be developed to support their leadership and full participation. The GACOR will consider how it may interpret its experience with disaggregated data so as to encourage others to explore its use.

4. Explore ways the GACOR can continue to love into the more flexible Constitution while continuing to fulfill its functions. Study the emerging structures and changes in the PC(USA) and recommend means for councils to remain connected and accountable to one another.

There are several actions before this assembly that if approved by the body, sent to presbyteries for their vote, and if ratified would radically change the structures of church life. An example would be removing synods as councils of the church (proposed in the Mid Council Commission report). Doing so would change the councils that GACOR directly relates to and would have profound impact on the ways it can do its work. This will take imaginative leaders, committed to diversity and full participation.

VI. PROCESS OF SELF-STUDY

The Executive Committee used the recommendations from the previous study as a guide in its deliberations and planning. In 2011, the GACOR appointed a subgroup to oversee the process of self-study. Considering the majority of the persons serving in 2010 (9 of 16) had been elected at the 219th General Assembly (2010), the committee recruited a former member to assist with the self-study. The subgroup implemented a number of strategies to review the work of the GACOR and to gather feedback for this report. The subcommittee:

1.Reviewed the minutes of the GACOR for the review period, along with all other public documents and reports that the committee produced;

2. Reviewed synod and caucus reports, statistics;

3. Reviewed the evaluations of all meetings and training events;

4. Reviewed the materials from the previous General Assembly review of GACOR (in 2006);

5. Reviewed General Assembly-approved actions related to GACOR’s work; and

The process of self-study for GACOR has been a productive experience for the committee, helping it celebrate both its considerable accomplishments over the last six years as well as identify areas for future work.

The following persons served on the review subgroup:

The Reverend Dr. Stanley Bhasker, Class of 2012, Synod of the Trinity, Asian, Adult;
The Reverend Heather Walchar, Class of 2014, Synod of the Mid-America, White, Young Adult; Elder Angela Battle, Class of 2012, Synod of the Mid-Atlantic, African-American, Adult;
The Reverend Carol Tompkins, Former GACOR Member (2002-2008), Synod of the Sun, White, Adult.

The GACOR received updates from the review subgroup and adopted their report at its February 2012 meeting.

Endnotes

1. The witness of councils is currently described in G-3.0101 and following in the Book of Order (2011–2013) and the General Assembly was specifically described at G-13.0100 and following in the former Book of Order.
2. Reunion in 1983 was of two denominations—the United Presbyterian Church in the United States of America (UPCUSA) and the Presbyterian Church in the United States (PCUS)—to create the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). The Articles of Agreement may be found in the Book of Order (2011–2013) as Appendix B.
3. The use of male language in this confession was intended to be a general reference to humanity and not exclusively describing male experiences. The exclusive use of masculine language shows how even when the church sought to confront idolatries in race and ethnicity present in the moment, it remained blind to other discriminatory practice. There is an inclusive language version of this confession provided by the Theology, Worship and Education office of the General Assembly Mission Council (GAMC)—it can be downloaded here: http://www.pcusa.org/resource/inclusive-language-version-confession-1967/.
4. U.S. Census data projections: 50 percent of total U.S. population will be people of color in 2042, for children, 50 percent will be people of color in 2023. The percentage of people in the “working ages” (from 18 to 64) is expected to decline from 63 percent in 2008 to 57 percent in 2050, http://www.census.gov/newsroom/releases/archives/population/cb08-123.html.
6. Often cited phrase throughout the Form of Government, quoted in reference to committees on representation (including the GACOR) at G-3.0103.
7. See Item 16-02 which is a recommended action from the General Assembly Mission Council. There is also a website highlighting this initiative available here: http://gamc.pcusa.org/ministries/1001/.
8. Isms refer in this usage to the artificial limits imposed to privilege some over others in society that are delineated on aspects of identity. Examples may be on sex, race, age, etc.
9. See Attachment D for a full list of persons who have served on GACOR in the review period.
10. A copy of the Churchwide Plan will be available by request during the 220th General Assembly (2012).
11. See Footnote 4 for the link to the data.
12. See the agency summary submitted to the 220th General Assembly (2012) by GACOR. The report has examples of this data and the insights it provides.
14. Governing bodies was language used under the Book of Order until the adoption of the 2011–2013 edition, in which these levels of church organization are referred to as mid councils. The document was “A Report of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), Approved by the 205th General Assembly (1993).” It documents the histories of all-Black synods and presbyteries that ended with reunion in 1983. It can be accessed here: http://www.pcusa.org/resource/all-black-governing-bodies/.
15. The Middle Governing Bodies Commission (MGBC) was created by action of the 219th General Assembly (2010) and with constitutional reform is now called the Mid Council Commission (MCC).
16. Excerpted here, G-3.0103 is quoted in its entirety on page 5 of this report.
17. A copy of the GACOR Manual of Operations will be available by request during the 220th General Assembly (2012).
18. This resource is available on the website here: http://www.pcusa.org/resource/manual-general-assembly-ga220/.
19. As mentioned in a previous footnote, a copy of the Churchwide Plan will be available by request during the 220th General Assembly (2012).
20. The COGA has sent a recommendation to the 220th General Assembly (2012) to have the Organization for Mission reflect this task of the GACOR. See Item 03-06.
21. There is some concern when this aspect of diversity is raised as most important. Often privileged persons (persons who receive significant unearned advantage) and who do not share many intersecting identities that disadvantage them in church and society, latch on to the rare instances when they feel marginalized. With this limited and self-interested sight, they then use their significant privilege to enter the debate and demand their (perceived and/or real) disadvantage be taken more seriously than others’ intersecting disadvantage. When this happens it threatens to overshadow truly marginalized persons and characteristics that are the chief cause of disparities in access and leadership within the body. The GACOR holds that theological conviction is one of several factors that should be considered when a candidate is examined for fitness to be nominated to a particular body and is seeking the information it needs to more fully include it as a factor in its advice.

Attachment A

Articles 8 and 9 of the Articles of Agreement

ARTICLE 8. RACIAL ETHNIC REPRESENTATION, PARTICIPATION AND ORGANIZATIONS

8.1 The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) shall provide for a Committee on Representation for each governing body above the Session. Its membership shall consist of equal numbers of men and women. A majority of the members shall be selected from the racial ethnic groups within the governing body and the total membership shall include persons from each of the following categories:

a. majority male membership
b. majority female membership
c. racial ethnic male membership
d. racial ethnic female membership
e. youth male and female membership

Its main function shall be to guide the governing bodies with respect to their membership and to that of their committees, boards, agencies and other units, in implementation of the principles of participation and inclusiveness, to ensure effective representation in the decision making of the church.

8.2 Governing bodies of the Church shall be responsible for implementing the Church’s commitment to inclusiveness and participation which provides for the full expression of the rich diversity within its membership. All governing bodies shall work to become more open and inclusive and to correct past patterns of discrimination on the basis of racial ethnic background.

Racial ethnic members in the United States (Presbyterians of African, Hispanic and Asian descent and Native Americans) shall be guaranteed full participation and access to representation in the decision-making of the Church, and shall be able to form caucuses.

Participation and representation of racial ethnic membership shall be assured by the Committees on Representation (8.1).

8.3 Consistent with the principles of diversity and inclusiveness as set forth in 8.2, the General Assembly Council shall consult with and receive input from the racial caucuses of the Church, and shall make provision for the expenses necessary to such consultations.

The purposes of such consultations shall include:

determining the priorities for assisting racial ethnic churches and ministries, developing a denominational strategy for racial ethnic church development, finding ways to assure the funding and operational needs of schools and other institutions which historically have served Black Americans and other racial ethnic groups.

8.4 Racial ethnic educational institutions have been the primary source from which racial ethnic church leadership has developed. Consistent with the dire need for racial ethnic church leadership, the General Assembly Council shall propose to the General Assembly ways whereby the General Assembly shall be able to fulfill its responsibility for education through colleges and secondary schools and for meeting the operational and developmental needs of those Presbyterian schools that historically have served Black Americans and those serving other racial ethnic groups.

ARTICLE 9. WOMEN’S REPRESENTATION, PARTICIPATION AND ORGANIZATIONS

9.1 The Committees on Representation required by G-9.0105 for each governing body above the Session shall guide those bodies, with respect to their membership and that of their committees, boards, agencies and other units, in implementing the principles of participation and inclusiveness, to ensure the fair representation of women, both of the majority race and of racial ethnic groups, in the decision making of the Church.

9.2 The General Assembly Council in consultation with elected representatives from each recognized women’s group of both Churches shall make provision for the continuation of the women’s programs and organizations of the two Churches at all levels, until such time as programs are formulated as described in 9.3.

9.3 A group of representatives elected by each recognized women’s group from the two Churches shall meet to develop programs and organizations, these proposals to be approved by the constituent groups. Such approval shall be reported to the General Assembly Council by the Executive Committees of each of the women’s groups. The group shall report to the General Assembly annually and is expected to complete its work in six years.
G-9.0105 Committee on Representation

Each governing body above the session shall elect a committee on representation, whose membership shall consist of equal numbers of men and women. A majority of the members shall be selected from the racial ethnic groups (such as Presbyterians of African, Hispanic, and Asian descent and Native Americans) within the governing body, and the total membership shall include persons from each of the following categories:

1. majority male membership
2. majority female membership
3. racial ethnic male membership
4. racial ethnic female membership
5. youth male and female membership
6. persons with disabilities.

G-9.0105b. Advise Regarding Membership
Its main function shall be to advise the governing bodies with respect to their membership and to that of their committees, boards, agencies, and other units in implementing the principles of participation and inclusiveness to ensure fair and effective representation in the decision making of the church.

G-9.0105c. Advocate and Resource
The committee on representation shall serve both as an advocate for the representation of racial ethnic members, women, different age groups, and persons with disabilities, and as a continuing resource to the particular governing body in these areas. The committee on representation shall review the performance of its own governing body in these matters and shall report annually to it and to the next higher governing body with recommendations for any needed corrective action. The committee on representation shall consult with the nominating committee of its own governing body.

G-9.0105d. Consult with Racial Ethnic Membership
Prior to nomination or appointment of racial ethnic members to committees, boards, agencies, or other units, the committee on representation shall consult with the appropriate racial ethnic membership through a person or persons designated by that racial ethnic membership. In situations where racial ethnic membership is low, the committee on representation of each governing body shall consult with racial ethnic members, sessions, nominating committees, and persons designated by national racial ethnic membership to discover potential racial ethnic members of such body and to determine achievable representation. Prior to nomination or appointment of women to the above categories, the committee on representation shall consult with the appropriate constituencies of women through a person or persons designated by those constituencies.

G-9.0105e. Employment of Personnel
The committee on representation shall advise the governing body on the employment of personnel, in accordance with the principles of participation and representation (G-4.0403), and in conformity with a churchwide plan for equal employment opportunity. (G-13.0201b)

G-9.0105f. Stands Alone
The committee on representation shall not, in any governing body, be merged with any other committee or designated as a subcommittee of any other committee.

G-9.0106 Exceptions

G-9.0106a. Exception to G-9.0105a
Exceptions to the provisions of G-9.0105a requiring a majority of the members to be selected from racial ethnic groups shall be allowed by a governing or electing body only if it is unable to secure the participation or representation of the necessary persons, and this fact shall be made a part of the official record of the governing, electing, or appointing body. No exception is permitted to the requirement that each governing body above the session elect a committee on representation.

G-9.0106b. Approval for Up to One Year
An exception under G-9.0106a may be allowed for up to one year by governing body action at a meeting. The approval of such exception shall be promptly reported by the stated clerk to the next higher governing body through its stated clerk and committee on representation, which committee shall monitor the lower governing body and its committee on representation during the period of the exception.

G-12.0301 Committee on Representation
Each synod shall establish a committee on representation, as required by G-9.0105, which shall advise synod's nominating committee of any need for nominations in particular categories needing increased representation. The committee on representation shall report at least biennially to synod progress toward fair representation of the categories of persons listed in G-4.0403.
G-13.0108 Committee on Representation

The General Assembly shall establish a permanent Committee on Representation as required by G-9.0105, which shall advise the General Assembly Nominating Committee of any need for nominations in particular categories needing increased representation. The Committee on Representation shall report to each meeting of the General Assembly (other than special or adjourned meetings) regarding progress toward fair representation of the categories of persons listed in G-4.0403. The committee shall consist of members equal in number to the synods of the church, each member resident in a different synod, and members distributed so that there are one third ministers (both women and men), one third laymen, and one third laywomen.

G-13.0202b. Nominating Committee of the General Assembly

In the nominating process, the General Assembly Nominating Committee shall consult with the General Assembly Mission Council to identify needed skills, and shall provide for diversity and inclusiveness in accordance with G-4.0403. It will maintain a goal of at least twenty percent racial ethnic membership for the General Assembly Mission Council. It will also follow the provisions of G-9.0104, G-9.0105, and G-13.0111 and shall ensure that, exclusive of the Moderator and predecessor Moderators, one third of the members are ministers of the Word and Sacrament (both women and men), one third laymen, and one third laywomen. The committee will also provide that members be nominated in such a manner as to provide three classes of approximately equal size. Any vacancy occurring during a term shall be filled pursuant to General Assembly policies.

Attachment C

Current Book of Order Reference Regarding GACOR

Book of Order (2011–2013), Form of Government

G-3.0103 Participation and Representation

The councils of the church shall give full expression to the rich diversity of the church’s membership and shall provide for full participation and access to representation in decision-making and employment practices (F-1.0403). In fulfilling this commitment, councils shall give due consideration to both the gifts and requirements for ministry (G-2.0104) and the right of people in congregations and councils to elect their officers (F-3.0106).

Each council shall develop procedures and mechanisms for promoting and reviewing that body’s implementation of the church’s commitment to inclusiveness and representation. Councils above the session shall establish by their own rule committees on representation to fulfill the following functions: to advise the council regarding the implementation of principles of unity and diversity, to advocate for diversity in leadership, and to consult with the council on the employment of personnel, in accordance with the principles of unity and diversity in F-1.0403. A committee on representation should not be merged with another committee or made a subcommittee of another committee.

G-3.0111 Nominating Process

All councils higher than the session shall have a process for nominating persons to serve in positions requiring election by the council. The process shall ensure that nominations are made by an entity broadly representative of the constituency of the council, and in conformity with the church’s commitment to unity in diversity (F-1.0403).

Item 19-Self-Study ACC

Advisory Committee on the Constitution Self-Study Prepared for the 220th General Assembly (2012)

A SELF STUDY OF THE ADVISORY COMMITTEE ON THE CONSTITUTION
YEARS January 1, 2005–December 31, 2011
LOOKING BACK TO LEAP FORWARD

Introduction

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution (ACC) presents the following report as a measurement of performance for the six-year review period of January 1, 2005, through December 31, 2011. The previous self-study of the ACC occurred in 2006.

The ACC welcomes the opportunity to undergo its six year self-study. The commencement of this self-evaluation coincides with the action of the 219th General Assembly (2010) to replace the Form of Government with a new Foundations of Presbyterian Polity and a new Form of Government, a pivotal time in the life of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). The ACC’s interaction around the adoption of the new Form of Government in many ways reflects how the ACC effectively serves and supports the church’s mission by providing advice, without advocacy, in matters of interpretation and amendment of the Constitution. In the instance of the new Form of Government, the ACC first worked with the Form of Government Task Force to give appropriate feedback in the drafting of the new Constitution, then provided advice to the 219th General Assembly Committee (2010) concerning the Form of Government proposal, and finally was present in support of that advice with the standing committee of the assembly appointed to deal with the proposed revision.

The ACC joins the entire denomination as we collectively approach a paradigm shift in constitutional structure and as we perform a self evaluation that looks back to leap forward.

CHAPTER I: THE TASK

The task of self-study is a process of the General Assembly that occurs every six years. The ACC looks inward and evaluates its work based on review standards covering the previous six years and is required to file its report 120 days prior to the 220th General Assembly (2012). Simultaneously the Office of the General Assembly (OGA), in consultation with the ACC, develops a survey instrument by the Office of Research Services. Finally the review responsibilities are vested in a designated assembly committee. The standards that are under review are covered under two broad headings: (1) Fidelity to Mission and Purpose; and (2) Effectiveness of Services. As presented this report provides a description of the ACC’s work and performance, as requested in the “Manual - Assembly Committee on Review” (Appendix 11) and addresses the self-study criteria indicated in the “Standards for Review of General Assembly Permanent, Advocacy, and Advisory Committee and Commissions” (Appendix 12). Thus, the study provides two things: (1) a firm and focused sense of the ACC’s mission in the life of church, and (2) clear and specific ways to improve the performance and effectiveness of the ACC.

The ACC moderator, Paul K. Hooker, appointed Susan B. Evans to conduct the self-study project, and he assisted her as needed. They were supported by Joanne Green, senior administrative assistant with the Office of the General Assembly Constitutional Services, who is more than an equal partner. Paul says it best when he, in a survey response, wrote: “Joanne Green (Mark Tammen often said) is what we in the South call a Steel Magnolia—sweet spirited, pleasant, loving, and beneath it a will of iron and a readiness to use it. Joanne never says “no” to a task to be done, and always more than delivers on expectations.” Finally we thank the ACC predecessor self-study committee chaired by Kim Leech. We used its report as the foundation for this report and have freely borrowed from its research and its scholarship. We also stand on the good will that its good work has engendered for the ACC. We thank these generous scholars for providing such inspired and inspiring leadership in the work that we do and that we love.

A. A Brief History

The ACC was created with the reunion of The United Presbyterian Church in the United States of America and the Presbyterian Church in the United States in 1983. Prior to that, the predecessor denominations had relied upon the respective General Assembly stated clerks to do several of the functions now assigned to the ACC. In The United Presbyterian Church in the United States of America, it was the General Assembly’s Stated Clerk—who was charged with interpreting the denomination’s Constitution—who would draft the opinions and polity advice pertaining to any overture that sought to amend the Constitution. This overture counsel from the Stated Clerk was summarily presented to the General Assembly’s polity committee for assembly action at the time of the annual General Assembly meeting. The Presbyterian Church in the United States utilized a different mechanism in regard to proposed overtures that sought to change the Constitution. Predictably, the Stated Clerk was the primary ecclesiastical officer; however, any overtures submitted to the Office of the Stated Clerk were duly presented to the Permanent Judicial Commission for action.

The original 1983 formula for ACC membership, previously G-13.0112a, set the number of members at six; but this did not last long, undoubtedly because the number of overtures to the assembly was more than six persons could reasonably handle, and an amendment to the Book of Order, setting the number of members at nine, was approved by the assembly in 1985. The ACC, throughout its history, has had a commitment to remain within the parameters of its constitutional mandate and has not expressed a need to expand or alter its fundamental responsibilities to the General Assembly and the church.

B. Organization and Responsibilities

The ACC is established by the Book of Order G-6.02 (previously G-13.0112):

The General Assembly shall elect an Advisory Committee on the Constitution composed of nine persons, teaching elders and ruling elders in numbers as nearly equal as possible. The Stated Clerk of the General Assembly shall be a member ex officio without vote. No person who has served on the Advisory Committee on the Constitution for a full term of six years shall be eligible for reelection until four years have elapsed after the expired six-year term. The General Assembly shall provide by its own rule for the qualifications of members of the Advisory Committee on the Constitution.

The description of committee and member responsibilities is in the Manual of Procedures for the Advisory Committee on the Constitution of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.).
The ACC serves and supports the church’s mission by providing the General Assembly advice in matters of interpretation and amendment of the Constitution of the PC(USA). In this work, the ACC serves and supports the church’s mission by assisting the General Assembly to make choices about the interpretation and amendment of the Constitution, and more particularly, the Book of Order, with an understanding of the context of their choices and the consequences of proposed actions. To perform this function, the ACC prepares advice to commissioners at each assembly as to each item of business seeking an interpretation or amendment of the Book of Order. In light of this charge, exhibiting “a constant faithfulness to and in fulfillment of its servant role” has several aspects: (1) faithfully providing advice on each item sent to an assembly that suggest a constitutional interpretation or amendment; (2) providing such advice in a manner that is clear and understandable to its audience (i.e., General Assembly commissioners); and (3) providing such advice without becoming advocates for particular factions of the PC(USA). (See Appendix 4 for a full description of the duties of the ACC at the meetings of the General Assembly.)

Prior to the General Assembly meeting, the ACC expresses its partnership role by consulting with various entities that will be making significant reports to the General Assembly. For example at the 218th General Assembly (2008) one important item of business had to do with reaffirming the authority of the General Assembly to guide and set mission priorities for other entities related to the Assembly. The ACC advice set the stage for the General Assembly to form a restricted funds resolution committee and significantly supported the mission of the church. The ACC expresses partnership in mission by regularly consulting with the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly (COGA) and the General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission (PJC). Upon request and need, the ACC continues its servant function by working with various other entities, including governing bodies of the PC(USA).

Another example of partnership and collaboration in the fulfillment of its mission was at the 219th General Assembly (2010) when the ACC and PJC worked together to seek resolution to the issue of the continuing status of authoritative interpretations of the Book of Order (AIs) in light of the passage of the new Form of Government. The fruit of that cooperation was the Special Committee on Authoritative Interpretations, whose work will be reviewed by the 220th General Assembly (2012). During the assembly, the primary arena for the ACC’s advice is with the various General Assembly committees (assembly committees) that have business related to some aspect of the Constitution. Members of the ACC are assigned to the assembly committees that have business with constitutional implications. The role of the ACC members who staff assembly committees is very carefully sculpted: the ACC counsel should faithfully provide information on those items being designated for the assembly that require a constitutional interpretation or amendment. That advice is to be expressed in a manner that is clear and understandable to the General Assembly commissioners and any audience present at the assembly committee meeting. Most importantly, the ACC’s recommendations, because of its focus upon its understanding of the Constitution, shall be neutral in political tone and shall not advocate a position of any entity or group of the PC(USA).

The ACC’s role is constitutional, and supports the mission of the church by guiding the assembly in the authoritative interpretation of the Book of Order to provide for order and justice in the common life of the church. “For God is a God not of disorder, but of peace” (1 Cor. 14:33a). In this way, we help shelter the children of God from injustice and abuse arising out of confusion and disorder, and help exhibit the Kingdom of Heaven to the world (Book of Order, F-1.0304). The ACC consistently attempts neutrally to evaluate constitutional matters before the assembly. It takes great pains to give careful, constructive, critique to proposals. The ACC endeavors to be particularly sensitive to the sometimes volatile sentiments and beliefs expressed in our theologically diverse denomination. The ACC views these realities as an opportunity for further educ-
The ACC’s Faithfulness in Its Servant Role

The ACC’s faithfulness to and fulfillment of its servant role is vividly shown in its commitment to neutrality on difficult issues before the church. While sometimes goaded to be partisan, the committee has maintained and enforced within itself high standards of objectivity and neutrality, in order that its service to the church might be trusted (Catherine MacDonald, ACC 2012). Further, the ACC has strengthened its service by increasingly seeing its role as educational and instructive. Most commissioners to an assembly do not come with a detailed knowledge and understanding of the inter-workings of different sections of the Form of Government or the Rules of Discipline. Former ACC moderator, Jim Wilson, states in his survey response that “the advice the ACC gave during my tenure on the committee generally did a good job of helping commissioners understand those inter-workings, and thus make well-informed judgments about the alternatives offered them.” In preparing this advice, the ACC must be, and generally has been, sensitive to the distinction between advocacy and advice, while still offering its wisdom as to the unintended or less than obvious consequences of particular options being considered. The ACC’s advice given the past few assemblies regarding the options available with respect to the ordination of gay and lesbian Presbyterians, and its advice regarding adoption of the new Form of Government are examples in which the ACC has done a good job of presenting the assembly with options and consequences, without stepping over the line into an advocacy position.

It should be noted that on two occasions since the last self-study the ACC has been named as a party in a remedial case submitted to the General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission. Remedial Case 218-03, Session of Palos Park Presbyterian Community Church v. The Advisory Committee on the Constitution of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) involved a complaint alleging that the ACC had not adequately responded to questions submitted to it by individuals prior to the 217th General Assembly (2006). Both parties submitted to mediation, and a consent agreement was developed that clarified how the ACC should respond to multiple requests on similar topics. The second, Remedial Case 218-21, Robert E. Leech, as President and CEO of Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) Foundation, and Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) Foundation v. The Advisory Committee on the Constitution of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), complained about advice given by the ACC to the 218th General Assembly (2008), and was dismissed on multiple jurisdictional grounds prior to being heard.

While the above cases consumed significant energy and time of the ACC, they demonstrate the very public nature of the work of the ACC and the inevitable consequence that even in the desire to maintain neutrality in matters referred to us, those who disagree with our advice may perceive our neutrality as advocacy against their position. We believe the outcomes of both cases should be regarded as an affirmation both of our work and of our willingness to find ways to become better servants of the whole church.

In sum, the ACC primarily acts in a servant capacity: it does not initiate its own agenda; rather it responds to requests from the church for interpretation of existing provisions of the Book of Order and provides counsel to the assembly regarding amendments to the Book of Order. In addition, the ACC serves the assembly in an advisory capacity when required. Members of the ACC often contribute hundreds of hours of volunteer service in preparation for a particular meeting of the General Assembly, and in service while the assembly is in session. Members of the ACC much like the members of other committees and commissions, boards and ministries in church councils large and small throughout our denomination, are grateful to the presbytery and our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ for affording us the privilege to serve.

The Interface Between the ACC’s Constitutional Mandate and Being Equipped to Respond to the Needs of the Church

Honoring the ACC’s historic charge does not easily lend itself to the notion of being a visionary entity. The ACC’s primary function is to be reactive and responsive to the business that is routinely placed before the committee. The Book of Order places some rather stringent parameters on what the committee can and cannot do. The committee has learned that one of the key components to being visionary in its work is to cherish the past and use it to reflect upon the future. Frequently, when the ACC has crafted its written response to an overture to the General Assembly (GA), the recommendation will cite (and remind the assembly) of historic events that shaped the denomination as well as drawing attention to past assembly actions and judicial decisions that are still relevant and helpful.

The ACC is keenly aware and concerned about emerging issues in the church—especially the issues that have a polemical and divisive nature. Ordinarily, the ACC addresses these issues in the context of an ACC response to an overture or a concern that arises in the assembly’s plenary session. And, the ACC continues to discipline itself not to take an advocacy position on any matter before the assembly.

At appropriate times, the ACC authors a “trend paper” or research paper that endeavors to be “ahead of the curve” on matters that are underway in the church. These papers are for internal use only. Some of the topics that have been researched over the last six years include: Essential Beliefs and Essential Behaviors; Christian Educators; G-2.0500a(2)—Faith of the Reformed Tradition; Ecumenical Issues; Diversity and Inclusion; Per Capita Apportionment; Ordination Standards; and Property Clause.
A primary principle for this self-study is that there be a conspicuous alignment between the self-study strategy and processes if consistent results are to be obtained. Largely, there are two parties in this study: (1) ACC members and former members, and (2) persons who are “consumers” of the ACC’s advice. Because the intent is not only to provide a self-study, but also to solicit perceptions of the ACC from important others, several survey instruments were designed that would generate the information in an honest, objective, and fair manner. In addition, two sets of surveys were prepared and distributed. The first set was designed/modified and distributed by the ACC subcommittee based on a previous self-study of the ACC (2006) and a second survey instrument designed and distributed by the General Assembly Office of Research Services (GAORS). Gathering clear candid data was the goal of both of the survey instruments. The following survey instruments were utilized:

ACC Instruments
- Survey #1 Fidelity to Mission and Partnership (Appendix 5)
- Survey #2 Effectiveness of Services (Appendix 6)
- Survey #3 The Work of the Committee (Appendix 7)

GAORS Instruments
- Survey #4 Evaluating the ACC (Appendices 8 and 9)
- Survey #5 Evaluating the ACC (Appendices 8 and 9)

Recipients of the surveys were:

Surveys #1, #2, #3 went to ACC members; ACC alumni, years 2004–2010; Gradye Parsons, Stated Clerk and member of the ACC, ex-officio; Thomas Hay, interim director of the Office of Constitutional Services (ConServ), Office of the General Assembly; Joanne Green, ConServ senior administrative assistant to the ACC.

Joanne Green was designated the recipient of the completed ACC surveys. She created compilations of each category of survey. The final compilations were sent to Susan Evans and Paul Hooker for study, evaluation, and reflection. The initial draft was presented at the ACC’s fall meeting, which commenced October 15, 2011. At that meeting, the self-study draft was discussed and changes were implemented.

The staff of the General Assembly Office of Research Services worked tirelessly and efficiently to design and disseminate survey invitations to mid council executives and stated clerks, and to 219th General Assembly (2010) commissioners. It was no small feat as the terminology in the constitution was in flux as the church transitioned from the old Form of Government to the new Foundations of Presbyterian Polity and Form of Government in the midst of the survey process. The efforts of Perry Chang, associate for Survey Research, who kept us informed and stayed at the cutting edge of technology, were greatly appreciated. The General Assembly Office of Research Services also compiled the responses, prepared a report, and submitted its findings both to the ACC and the assembly.

CHAPTER III: EFFECTIVENESS

Webster’s Dictionary defines effective as, “…producing the intended or expected result.”

This self-study will explore the performance and role of the Advisory Committee on the Constitution (ACC) within the context of the larger institutional environment of the General Assembly (GA) and the spiritual lives of members of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). In a stringent effort to derive objective and honest information, the surveys targeted several levels and arenas of persons that have felt the impact of the ACC’s work. The harvest of the survey information provides a keen portrait of the ACC’s worth, precisely because the ACC is uniquely effective the manifestation of its constitutional mandate. According to the description of the functions of the ACC in the Book of Order and the Standing Rules of the General Assembly, the primary orientation of the ACC is to the meetings of the General Assembly. However, the data are clear that the impact and effectiveness of the ACC is felt throughout the church in numerous ways, on multiple levels of governance and in the daily lives of Presbyterians.

A. On the General Assembly Level

In preparation for a meeting of the General Assembly, the most conspicuous and common tasks before the committee are the preparation of the written responses to requests for interpretation of the Book of Order (G-6.02 previously G-13.0112c) and the committee’s recommendations to the assembly regarding overtures that seek to change the Constitution (G-6.04 previously G-13.0112d). The Book of Order requires that the ACC meet prior to each session of the General Assembly and submit its recommendations to the Stated Clerk no later than sixty days prior to the convening of the assembly (G-6.04b previously G-13.0112b). The ACC performs its work by initially assigning each item of business coming to an assembly (or in the more unusual case, items referred by an assembly to the ACC) to a drafting team. Each member of the drafting team prepares a draft comment or response to each item of business assigned it. Once the drafting team agrees on a proposed response, that draft is presented to the entire committee for discussion and revision. Only after several redrafts does an item generally receive approval from the entire committee for submission to an assembly. This process is effective in creating consensus among committee members as to the appropriate reasoning and conclusions to be submitted to the assembly, and forces discipline and rigorous writing and analysis. Fortunately, this work all occurs within an atmosphere of community and common mission that places the integrity of our responsibilities to the church above any personal interests, an approach that should be a model to the rest of the PC(USA) (James Wilson, ACC alumnus 2010). When the ACC’s recommendations are submitted to the Stated Clerk, they are the result of arduous toil, both by individual members of the ACC as well as the full committee. Some overtures, in particular, require extensive research and study that is labor intensive. These recommendations soon enter the public domain, initially as Reports to the General Assembly, and are distributed to elected commissioners prior to the General Assembly meeting. The ACC’s recommendations become part of the printed record of the General Assembly in the Minutes of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), Part I, which are available to every stated clerk and council in the PC(USA).

By the time the General Assembly convenes, the ACC has made extensive and thorough preparations for each item of business that requires ACC presence and assistance in General Assembly committees, such as the Church Polity Committee. Because the General Assembly committee structure is set months before the assembly convenes, each ACC member has been given his/her GA committee assignments, which may include several different committees. It is the responsibility of the ACC member to be fully prepared to interpret in full to the GA committee the rationale for the ACC’s recommendations. Members of the ACC are not authorized to deviate from the ACC recommendations to offer personal opinions. It is the responsibility of any ACC member assigned to a General Assembly committee to introduce oneself to the committee’s leadership team prior to the convening of that committee for business. At that time, ACC members will request a moment of time on the committee’s agenda to state briefly the role of the ACC. Comments from the survey underscore the importance of an early working relationship between the leadership team and the ACC member(s). In those committees with controversial business items, it is not uncommon for the ACC representatives to be called upon multiple times by the committee leadership, as well as by individual members of the committee. Members of the ACC, in preparation for the General Assembly, are trained to utilize those times in GA committees when questions arise for the ACC as “teaching moments” about our polity and Constitution. However there is a minority opinion amongst commissioners that “the committee has a disproportionate amount of influence in the GA and its committees. This influence is used to intimidate commissioners and direct discussions to promote desired outcomes.” The greater response from commissioners of the 219th General Assembly (2010) can be summed up in the following response: “I was extraordinarily impressed with the Advisory Committee. Their impartial and factual information helped me immensely to understand much of what I was hearing in the committee meeting. This committee is most important to new commissioners which many of us may be.” Another view point from leadership: “I was the Moderator of the Polity Committee for the 219th GA. We relied on the ACC’s guidance and expertise and they did not disappoint. They were thorough, attentive, and objective.”

Perhaps the best indicator of ACC effectiveness at the General Assembly meetings, whether it is regarding the written recommendations on business items or the oral interpretations in GA committees, is the relative absence of complaints or criticisms of the ACC. One of the most meaningful experiences for ACC members is to hear, during the GA plenary discussion, a commissioner echoing verbatim written recommendations of the ACC. Surely the most important indicator of GA effectiveness is the esteem and appreciation of the ACC by the GA commissioners, and at each assembly there is considerable praise for the ACC.

B. The ACC as Communicator

The ACC’s constitutional responsibilities require it to be primarily reactive, not proactive in its communications. It is an advisory committee and should not initiate discussion of issues before the PC(USA). The constraints of the Book of Order and the Standing Rules of the General Assembly have successfully prevented the ACC from becoming tainted by or accused of having any political agenda. The ACC, therefore, is not charged with or expected to communicate to the church at large directly, and it has scrupulously avoided doing so.

Although the opportunities for communications are limited, the ACC’s primary communications with the church-at-large is through its comments to proposed actions of each assembly, which are posted on the denomination’s website prior to the assembly. The ACC has sought to bring its reports earlier each year to the assembly, and to structure them when they were posted to make them as clear as possible to anyone reviewing an assembly’s business online.

In addition, the ACC is literally on the record regarding constitutional issues that have come to the General Assembly for action. Not only do the Minutes contain the ACC recommendations but also the electronic version of each GA’s Annotated Book of Order contains ACC advice on overtures that sought to amend the Book of Order. At each meeting of the General Assembly, the ACC makes a formal entity report that is also included in the Minutes. Typically, the ACC report provides general information about the nature of the ACC and its constitutional mandate of service to the General Assembly and the church; and it also renders specific comments on the nature of the business before the Assembly that has constitutional implications.

The ACC occasionally communicates in unseen and yet important ways typically within the context of General Assembly entities. “When directed by the General Assembly or when requested by an agency or committee of the General Assembly, the committee may consult with said agencies or committees on constitutional matters.” “The ACC sees itself as having a small, yet significant role as being servant to the General Assembly and the church as well as being in partnership with various key GA entities. An example of this consultation is the ACC’s conversation with the Form of Government Task Force on issues arising from their early drafts of the revised Foundations and Form of Government; another is the work the ACC has done in offering constitutional guidance to the Mid Council Commission over the past two years. There is a strong “comfort zone” for the ACC members in its role as communicator because of the power and wisdom of the Constitution and the Scriptures, “Your decrees are my delight; they are my counselors” (Ps. 119:24).

C. Fidelity to Mission

The ACC has always completed its work in a timely, but thorough and comprehensive manner. Of more significance is the ACC’s awareness of its responsibility in providing a high-quality of performance in every venue. Individually and corporately, the ACC has a strong sense of call and faithfulness to Jesus Christ in the fulfillment of its required work.

Conscious of its mission the ACC is careful to function within the limits of the powers granted to it by the Constitution and the processes outlined in the Standing Rules of the General Assembly. The ACC often works closely with task forces and commissions of the assembly that have been charged with addressing matters impinging on the Constitution to provide timely advice in matters that require constitutional interpretation. While ACC advice to the assembly on proposed amendments is transmitted through the Office of the General Assembly, the ACC on occasion has requested that some of its advice be released sooner than planned to provide increased understanding and transparency of its work.

In addition, the ACC’s work often attracts observers from interested parties or groups in the church. Provision for their observation is facilitated during both face-to-face meetings and on conference calls, except on the rare occasion when it is necessary for the ACC to meet in executive session. Lastly, while the newly adopted revision to the Form of Government no longer specifies that ACC members must be present whenever the assembly is in session, it has been the practice of the ACC that the full complement of ACC members is ordinarily present, rather than only the three whose presence was previously required.

CHAPTER IV: STRENGTHS AND WEAKNESSES

A. Strengths

The primary source for information about the strengths of the Advisory Committee on the Constitution (ACC) was from current and former members of the ACC, using Surveys #1, #2, and #3. As mentioned earlier in Chapter II, Gradye Parsons, Thomas Hay, and Joanne Green also provided answers to Surveys 1, 2, and 3. Key information was also obtained from the mid council executives and stated clerks, and commissioners who attended the 219th General Assembly (2010) in Surveys 4 and 5.

High praise and an extremely large number of survey respondents mentioned the people that populate the ACC as an enormous strength. Specifically, the caliber and wide diversity of persons was a key factor; the knowledge, skills, and unique credentials create a powerful dynamic when the committee is in action together, in particular. Another major strength is in the ability of the ACC to provide informed helpful advice without advocacy for a particular cause.

The following represent other survey comments by members of the ACC:

“The ACC loves the church, that is, its members are grounded in profoundly valuing the PC(USA) and its mission as it exists faithfully within the Body of Christ. This isn’t to say that the committee or its members are blindly institutionalist, but it is fair to note that we accept and love our very fallibly human institutional expression of the Body. The ACC’s strengths related to that love include at least its diverse and deep levels of experience in mid-council ministries in particular, the strong intellectual gifts and skills of its members, its self-discipline in maintaining neutrality on issues, its institutional memory, its enjoyment of puzzles of order and vitality in the church, and a helplessly Calvinist willingness and ability to work very, very hard.” (Catherine MacDonald, ACC 2012)

“The strength of the Advisory Committee on the Constitution lies in its commitment to educate assembly commissioners in matters of interpretation and amendment of the Constitution of the PC(USA) without becoming an advocate for any particular segment of the denomination. It inevitably was at the center of controversial issues within the church, and functions effectively only when it preserves its reputation as a neutral advisor to the commissioners. Its written work was consistently of high quality. Its work in Assembly committees in my experience has been very helpful to those committees. Its ability to reach consensus on difficult issues, and to speak with one voice, give it strong credibility.” (James Wilson, ACC Alumnus 2010)
“The ACC has historically had the best constitutional minds in the church. It has worked tirelessly and without ego to produce sound advice to the General Assembly.” (Paul Hooker, ACC 2012)

“ACC’s strengths are its commitment and diligent work of the members.” (Heahwan Rim, ACC 2014)

“The strength of the ACC is in its membership—a dedicated group of bright, articulate teaching elders and ruling elders, called to this service to the PC(USA).” (Therese Howell, ACC 2016)

“Very qualified and dedicated members committed to the importance of providing objective advice to the denomination. Any piece of advice has been attacked by the smartest minds of the denomination—and whatever has emerged has been tested under fire.” (Keith Geckeler, ACC 2014)

“The members of the committee have an amazing breadth and depth of knowledge about our church’s polity. It is a joy to work with them.” (Stewart Pollock, ACC 2016)

“The ACC is a strong committee with members who bring experience, knowledge and very good advice to the General Assembly. The committee members have good speaking skills and work with each other and the GA committees in such a way as to bring the best advice to the General Assembly.” (Joanne Green, OGA, Senior Administrative Assistant)

“The committee has a very passionate and informed core of leadership. Their commitment to constitutional practices and understanding of our polity is key to their success. They are also willing to share their wisdom broadly to the church. This creates a tension sometimes between being an advisor and being an expert, and as sometimes can happen, their work bleeds over into the broader mission of the church.” (Thomas Hay, Interim Director of Constitutional Services)

“The committee has benefitted from capable leadership during my time of service. Both Jim Wilson and Paul Hooker have brought gifts of administrative leadership that have enabled the committee to serve the assembly well. I believe the quality of our work as constitutional interpreters is higher than it has ever been.” (Dan Saperstein, ACC 2012)

“One strength of the committee is the willingness of members to prepare for meetings (especially the biennial spring meeting) and then to have the ability to express themselves freely as they support their positions and debate the positions of others. The unique aspect of these discussions is that there is an opportunity to be convinced out of your position by the persuasiveness of the debate and/or the movement of the Lord Jesus Christ through the Book of Order, Scripture, prayer or the moving of the Spirit.” (Susan Evans, ACC 2014)

Standards of performance for the ACC, especially in regard to the written recommendations of the ACC to the General Assembly, are both a daunting and challenging dimension of the scholarship expected and tacitly required. The history and continuity of ACC achievements are unquestionably of major significance. Whereas many would expect the ACC to perform in a rather orthodox, even wooden, manner because laws are perceived as rigid and conventional, in many situations the ACC purposely has endeavored to pursue creative solutions to complex issues. On every overturing or issue that the ACC addresses, it is the ACC’s practice to point out the “upside” and “downside” for approving an amendment to the Constitution, for instance. It is the responsibility of the ACC to educate and elucidate the General Assembly with its recommendations.

The following responses represent comments by mid council executives and stated clerks as well as commissioners who attended the 219th General Assembly (2010), as to the strengths of the ACC:

“My GA 219 experience was made better by the diligent work of the ACC. Its guidance on review of overtures helped me better understand the possible ramifications and determine my point of view. In my committee work (middle governing bodies), the ACC was invaluable in clarifying the constitutional impact of the overtures we considered, which was crucial given the important issues this committee faced.”

“I found input from the Advisory Committee extremely helpful in preparing for GA. Their work highlighted issues -- often carefully stating each side of a consideration—without tilting the results.”

“This committee is critically important at all times, but especially as it serves several of the GA committees. I am grateful for the knowledge, wisdom, and reliable assistance we received during the last GA.”

“The comm. provides a good historical and constitutional context for review and decision-making”

“Due to the complete revision of the Form of Government, more proposed changes to the Form of Government can be expected over the next few GA’s. The advisory committee will be critical in keeping the Form of Government coherent.”

“I worked on the FOG committee and the input of the ACC was fabulous.”

“The Advisory Committee on the Constitution was, on the whole, very impressive.”
“The nFOG committee could not have completed their work without the help of the Advisory Committee on the Constitution.”

“As a member of the middle governing bodies committee, I appreciate the availability and depth of knowledge these folks had—either on hand or as resources they could tap into fairly quickly.”

“As a first time commissioner, having the insights of the Advisory Committee on the overtures was very helpful. The Advisory Committee was crucial for clarification of confusing issues and in helping our committee determine how our votes would impact the Book of Order.”

“The 220th General Assembly will benefit greatly from the expertise of this committee. It will take some time for most commissioners to become familiar with the nFOG just approved and instituted.”

“The ACC members supporting our GA committee were very professional and provided very thorough information without choosing ‘sides’ in the discussions before the committee.”

“I can’t imagine trying to proceed without their insights and wisdom. As GA meetings deal significantly with issues of legislation, it is critical to have a body of people experienced and versed in this area providing unbiased and carefully considered advice on how each action would impact our constitution and our life as a church. My kudos to them for their hard work and commitment to fairness.”

Perchance it is the invisible, unseen character of the ACC that is its strength. The committee is deeply cognizant that undergirding its work is the commitment to “seek the Lord and his strength” (Ps. 105:4a). Unspoken norms prevail, such as one’s personal political views are not appropriate for the arena of the ACC. Most members have no idea of the personal opinions of other members on issues such as ordination standards. Intriguingly, the glue that holds the committee together is the ACC’s constitutional mandate coupled with a personal respect and regard for each other and a commitment to committee harmony and unity. Deep friendships have been forged among members; and it is precisely these friendships that foster keen commitment to the ideals of the committee. All of this leads to a high quality of dialogue—even healthy, exciting, argument—when the committee is in full session, working on the overtures and other matters that come before the committee. The caliber of work that is dispensed from the ACC is not a convenient quirk of luck. Rather, it is the product of the wisdom of our faith, polity, and commitment to the church.

The nature of the work and mission of the ACC has deeply affected and strengthened the faith and commitment of its members to the mission of the PC(USA).

Some sample comments from members of the ACC:

“Serving on the ACC, and through it on the Form of Government Task Force, have been the most meaningful forms of service to the church I have been privileged to render. They have immeasurably deepened my appreciation for the theological grounding of our polity, and thus have made me a far better theologian.” (Paul Hooker, ACC 2012)

“The Constitution reflects the basic Reformed understanding that no one person makes decisions on behalf of the whole. My faith has been deepened because I have had the joy of working with good people like the members of the ACC.” (Gradye Parsons, Stated Clerk of the GA)

“Again, with very limited experience I can only say that whatever question is presented to the ACC it challenges me personally in new ways. I can’t say that serving as a member of the ACC that it has significantly deepened my faith in Christ but it certainly has confirmed my faith.” (Linda Therien, ACC, 2016)

“Of course, ACC work helped me to broaden my understanding of the mission of the church. At the same time, it gave me a frustration when ACC is politically motivated rather than faith basis of work.” (Heahwan Rim, ACC 2014)

“As a new member of the ACC, and at the risk of sinfulness—I was honored to be nominated and elected to serve on this committee. My understanding of the mission and ministry of the PC(USA), as well as my faith, has been strengthened by years of volunteering at the General Assembly and seeing the Church at work, and I believe serving on the ACC will continue to educate me about the Church as well as deepen my faith. I appreciate the camaraderie of the ACC, and the strong work ethic of its members, and believe the ACC models the behavior so desired (and often missing) in the Church today – people working together, despite differing views on potentially volatile issues. And I believe the ACC models the behavior Jesus calls us to model—servant leadership.” (Therese Howell, ACC 2016)

“It is yet another ‘behind the scenes’ effort to make the denomination as healthy as possible. Knowing there are dozens of such groups operating selflessly for the good of the whole makes me much more comfortable with the outcomes.” (Keith Geckeler, ACC 2014)

“The process of doing background research on the matters referred to the ACC has frequently led to rereading of historical sources that bring me back to original principles, refreshing my understanding of how the Presbyterian Church has fol-lowered Jesus Christ and helping me to remember the principles of mutual forbearance that Christ taught.” (Stewart Pollock, ACC 2016)

“I don’t help interpret the Constitution, but it has been an amazing experience to watch the ACC fine tune their work and prepare excellent advice to the General Assembly on issues that are many times so complex. Jim Wilson was an excellent moderator of the ACC and Paul Hooker is also an excellent moderator. The ACC depends heavily on their leadership. My faith in Jesus Christ has been deepened by watching these dedicated volunteer members of the ACC give of their time and talents to the church they love. What a gift they are to the PC(USA). It’s a privilege to work for them” (Joanne Green, OGA, Sr. Admin Asst).

“What a high honor to serve in this capacity … my faith has grown, my understanding has grown, my JOY has grown and my appreciation of both the order and patience of our denomination has grown leaps and bounds! To God be the Glory!” (Susan Evans, ACC 2014)

“The transition to the new Form of Government has focused all of us on the foundations of our polity and the place of the constitution in providing a platform for mission and ministry. By remembering that Jesus Christ is the foundation of the Church (F-1.0205) I’ve come to see and experience the presence of Jesus in new places. In the relationships with others who interpret the Constitution, I have seen the ‘covenant community of disciples of Christ living in the strength of God’s promise’” (F-1.0303). (Thomas Hay, Interim Director of Constitutional Services)

“I often tell people that Presbyterianism began with a lawyer, which is both a curse and a blessing. To have a constitutional polity that is so closely identified with our ethos inspires confidence in the legitimacy of the church’s witness to Christ. In a time in the life of our church in which the rule of law and voluntary submission to shared processes seem to be increasingly questioned, I am grateful for the opportunity to participate in shaping the constitution by which our church is ordered. The more deeply I have studied the history and theology of our polity, the more I have appreciated the gifts that the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) brings to Christ’s work in the world.” (Dan Saperstein, ACC 2012)

The surveys noted a few singular strengths that deserve mention:

The staff of the Department of Constitutional Services deserves high praise and kudos.

ACC Moderator Paul Hooker (ACC 2012) perhaps said it best: “I cannot let this moment pass without offering a commendation to two individuals: Mark Tammen and Joanne Green. Mark’s intense, insightful manner illumined many questions for me. His insistence on the best, and not merely good enough, was a constant challenge to me to reach for a higher standard. His ability to bring creative, if different, minds together in the same room around a common task, was a model for the church at its best. He will be missed by me, by the ACC, and by the General Assembly.

“Joanne Green (Mark often said) is what we in the South call a Steel Magnolia—sweet spirited, pleasant, loving, and beneath it a will of iron and a readiness to use it. Joanne never says ‘no’ to a task to be done, and always more than delivers on expectations. I cannot imagine serving on either the ACC or the FoG TF without her aid, comfort, instigation, and nagging. She is a great blessing, and a wonder, and a dear friend.”

B. Weaknesses

There was no clear consensus amongst active committee members as to actual or perceived weaknesses in the work of the committee. Everyone would likely agree that time devoted to discussing issues and ability to staff all of the General Assembly (GA) committees effectively were challenges that the committee struggles with. The occasional failure of members of the ACC to prepare drafts of advice in a sufficiently timely manner to allow adequate review was also noted as a weakness. Representation on the committee that balances diversity of the church as to racial minorities, women, theology, age, and constitutional underpinnings through attention in the nominating process was another issue raised. The following represent other survey comments by members of the ACC:

“If it suffers from a weakness, it is that we have probably underrepresented the racial/ethnic minorities of the church. This, however, is much better at present; two of the nine members of the committee are racial/ethnic.” (Paul Hooker, ACC 2012)

“A weakness is not enough time allocated to do its work.” (Heahwan Rim, ACC 2014)

“The only weakness I have observed, in my short time with the ACC, is that a very shy person might be hesitant to speak up in discussions. I am not shy, but it is intimidating, early on, when trying to make or raise a point. Like everything else in the life of the Church, you must become comfortable in discussions with strong-willed people!” (Therese Howell, ACC 2016)

“The ACC does not have enough members to serve the Assembly effectively if business requiring advice from the ACC continues to be spread across too many assembly committees.” (Stewart Pollock, ACC 2014)
“The ACC has a lot of business coming to them to write responses and send on to the General Assembly. It helps if assignments are completed before each meeting so that it doesn’t put extra burden on the members when they arrive for the ACC meeting. I think the ACC has been doing well in this area and will continue to improve.” (Joanne Green, OGA, Sr. Admin Asst)

“Of course, the committee is diverse in composition and perspective, and is not immune from the political storms that rage in the larger church. There are times where I have felt that the advice of the committee has been overly influenced by political outcomes rather than the text of the Constitution itself. There is a certain inevitability to this, although it can be mitigated by attention in the nominating process to secure proven constitutional interpreters representing the diversity of the church.” (Dan Saperstein, ACC 2012)

“The other ‘weakness’ I would identify in the work of the ACC is inherent in the nature of the terms of office in a time of biennial assemblies. The first assembly at which an ACC member serves is a particular challenge—issues move quickly and it is important that the ACC honor its role but be responsive to the needs of the assembly. As a practical matter, this means the first assembly for an ACC member is something of a training exercise. Thus, members really only have two assemblies in which they have sufficient experience to offer their gifts fully. I do not have a ready solution to this problem, but it does mean that approximately a third of the ACC at each assembly is in a training mode.

“The ACC could also improve its performance when it is asked to speak to a question on the floor of the assembly. Such occasions often present difficult questions to answer. However, too often, the ACC has been overly concise in its answers without laying out for the assembly the full context of issues and options available” (Jim Wilson, ACC 2010)

Weaknesses perceived and articulated by mid council executives and stated clerks as well as by commissioners who attended the 219th General Assembly (2010) focused primarily on the perception that members of the ACC were ecclesiastically politically motivated to a given result. The following are representative statements of weaknesses are:

“In the committee on which I served, the ACC had enormous floor time and even went as far as to suggest a number of amendments. This seemed to give undue influence to the ACC when commissioners were unable to offer only a small percentage of the comments and amendments they themselves wanted to contribute in committee.”

“While at GA I would have liked to ask questions of clarification regarding the Constitution. I do not recall a way that I could have connected with someone on the Advisory Committee while on the floor of Plenary or in committee on my computer. It might be worthwhile to have a live link to the Constitution with the opportunity to get quick feedback to questions.”

“Needs to be more visible, but am not sure how to do that.”

“It often seems that the Advisory Committee is not aware of the problems and contexts that the church struggles with and against. The Committee should work towards recommendations of compromise and unity for all theological perspectives.”

“The ACC since 2006 seems to have become more of an advocacy group than an interpretive body—seemingly to advocate on behalf of office of stated clerk.”

“Given the politicization of the Constitution in recent years, and its use as a club to affirm or deny varying theological (Christian Educator and homosexual ordination) and cultural (gay marriage) positions, the committee has to do as much as humanly possible to offer ‘just the facts, ma’am’ advice. As the committee is able to do so, the greater church will benefit in its decision-making.”

“The Stated Clerk and his office fulfill this function, in my opinion.”

“Again, the work must be shared, interpreted, rewritten as required, by all sorts of ‘mediated opportunities.’ Failure to do this in a digital world is inadequate.”

“Among evangelicals (of which I include myself), the general feel from those with whom I spoke is that the Advisory Com is an agent of the left-wing of the PCUSA, that it is more of a Political Action Committee than an unbiased, nonpartisan agent.”

“Neutrality is not helpful in our context. Focusing on polity rather than theology and Scripture is not helpful. Focusing on process over content is not helpful. The value of this committee evaporates if it does not tell the truth, the whole truth, and give great balance to all which is done.”

“My sense of the ACC is that they take a rather conservative judicial approach to their work. If something is not specifically mentioned, they seem to take a dim view of it. However, in a missional era the ACC has become an impediment. It seems to me a more faithful approach would be to say, ‘If it is not specifically disallowed, let it rock and roll!’ The church needs entrepreneurs and the ACC, I am afraid, discourages such.”
“The Advisory Committee on the Constitution should be in the business of informing not interpretation. They should be tasked with alerting the GA to possible conflicts when changes to the constitution are considered. They should report the PJC’s previous rulings when relevant and leave all interpretation to the GA.”

“I think the ACC is good at interpreting questions that have to do with our current Constitution, but are less helpful when it comes to envisioning changes to the constitution. I think the ACC has a tendency to advocate for the inertia of the status quo.”

CHAPTER V: SURVEY LEARNINGS

A. Scope of the Surveys

The surveys utilized were intentionally designed to meet the criteria suggested in the self-study survey guide published by the Office of the General Assembly. Therefore the scope was broad and yet specific. In the spirit of the criteria, the surveys endeavored to provoke in-depth, thoughtful and candid responses. The scope of the surveys pinpointed key aspects of our life together as Presbyterians:

- PC(USA) Constitution
- Faith
- Polity
- Mission
- Theology
- Dedication to the PC(USA)
- Meetings of the General Assembly
- Welfare of the church

The intent of the surveys was more than to glean simple statements. Rather, the desire was to measure the Advisory Committee on the Constitution (ACC) against the above hallmarks in a very personal and inspiring manner. The ACC is at its best when its Christian humanness shines through when writing, presenting, and meeting; and the surveys tried to establish this with a somewhat clinical means. The subtitles of the three surveys reveal categories of inquiry that are specific and probing:

Survey #1, “Fidelity to Mission”
Survey #2, “Effectiveness of Services”
Survey #3, “The Work of the Committee”

B. Participation

For the first three surveys, which sought responses by the ACC, former ACC members, the Stated Clerk, the Director of Constitutional Services, and the ACC’s senior administrative assistant, the response was unanimous.

The General Assembly Office of Research Services surveyed 219th General Assembly (2010) commissioners and mid council leaders (presbytery and synod executives and stated clerks) about the work of the Advisory Committee on the Constitution. On October 18, 711 commissioners and 382 mid council leaders were invited by email to participate in the survey on the web. Non-respondents received three subsequent e-mail reminders. Three-quarters of General Assembly commissioners (73 percent) and three in five presbytery and synod leaders (62 percent) responded. Half of the General Assembly commissioners who responded (50 percent) were elders and half (50 percent) were ministers. Three in five presbytery and synod leaders who responded were stated clerks (61 percent) and half (48 percent) were executives (some served in both roles). Given the voluntary nature of the survey the response was excellent and significantly greater than in the previous self study.

Responses to Surveys 1, 2, and 3, generally expressed enthusiasm and furnished high-quality comments. All of the questions in these surveys received a large quantitative response. Question one in Survey #1 asked: “Does the committee as it was created by the church serve and support the church’s mission in a particular area? Does the committee exhibit a constant faithfulness to and in fulfillment of its servant role in the life of the PC(USA)?” From the responses to this question, it is clear that this committee of church law/polity wonks sees itself as an deeply missional unit of the church. As mentioned in an earlier chapter, it was Survey 3, which centered on the work of the ACC, that prompted several responses. Members of the ACC and ACC alumni, in particular, wanted to express considerable feedback as well as constructive criticism. Easily the most evocative question in Survey 3 was the final question, “As you have worked to interpret the Constitution of the PC(USA) to the General Assembly and the church, how has it affected your understanding of the mission of the PC(USA) and deepened your faith in Jesus Christ?” The answers provide a powerful testament to the Spirit at work in each member and the ACC.
C. Portrait of the Committee

Perhaps the most significant characterization of the ACC is its integrity. “The word integrity comes from the same Latin root as the word integer and historically has been understood to carry much more the same sense, the sense of wholeness: a person of integrity, like a whole number, is a whole person, a person somehow undivided.”5 There is not the slightest inkling in the surveys that the ACC has violated the trust of the General Assembly and the church. In a sense, the respect, health and wholeness of the ACC is a mirror image of the Constitution itself. This is the result of an almost mantra-like theme within the committee: of respect for the constitutional boundaries and the refusal to yield to the temptation of taking a position on any matter or issue before the church. There is frequent mention within the committee of the political boundaries on any piece of business before the committee. The importance of ACC integrity was a heritage bestowed upon its current members by predecessors. It is therefore a norm that must be continually earned and upheld by successor committee members.

A study of the individual answers of the members (and alumni) of the ACC reveals a rather predictable result. Whereas a glimmer of each person’s personality shines through, the corporate image of this assortment of persons yields images of strong personalities with strong convictions about the work of the ACC and its mission to and with the church.

Surveys 4 and 5 are extremely important because the portrait revealed therein is not tainted by any notion of bias or being self-serving. The surveys were quite candid and expressive of both strengths and weaknesses of the ACC. The perception of the ACC provided in the surveys is overwhelmingly positive; however, these surveys do establish that the public perception of the ACC can be a bit uneven. While affirming the theology of gifts (Rom. 12:3–8), the ACC loses some of its luster when a member speaking to a committee seems to advocate rather than inform and educate. Oftentimes, however, if an ACC member expresses an ACC position contrary to an assembly committee member or overture advocate, the position is seen as “political”. The strength of the Advisory Committee on the Constitution and each of its members lies in its commitment to educate assembly commissioners in matters of interpretation and amendment of the Constitution of the PC(USA) without becoming an advocate for any particular segment of the denomination. Its neutrality is central to its effectiveness as an advisor to the commissioners.

CHAPTER VI: RECOMMENDATIONS: ON IMPROVING THE ADVISORY COMMITTEE ON THE CONSTITUTION

The role of the ACC is ever evolving as we face the challenges of interpreting a new Constitution, employing new technologies, and working faithfully and effectively with other General Assembly committees and commissioners. The following recommendations are issues that the committee is addressing as “we look backwards to leap forward” to enable the ACC to serve as a more valuable instrument of the Presbytery and our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ:

Recommendation 1. Meet at least annually so as to foster personal relationships; do any pertinent necessary business; discuss any trend papers or projects underway.

Rationale: Members of the ACC have identified, both in their responses to the surveys and in meetings of the committee, that it requires time and concerted effort to “get up to speed” with the volume and quality of required work, and to feel comfortable in entering committee discussions conducted at a high level. Perhaps most significantly, the committee needs to be aware of its own advice history, particularly around recurrent issues.

Recommendation 2. Design a formal/informal orientation for new members including training on the use of certain technology used by the ACC (e.g., Basecamp) as well as emerging technologies. It would help the new and old members of the committee to have some training and to discuss ways in which ever changing technology can best be used in the work of the ACC.

Rationale: In recent years, the committee has made increasing use of GoToMeeting and Basecamp technologies, both of which may be intimidating to persons not accustomed to them. Some time in orientation devoted to these technologies and their application would ameliorate this concern.

Recommendation 3. Design a process to allow the ACC to recruit former ACC members to sit as “second chair” in assembly committees. They would not be allowed to speak for the ACC, but having been briefed in the issues and the ACC advice on them, they might serve as counsel to the ACC member sitting on the committee.

Rationale: A recurring concern on the part of ACC members and moderators is that, as the volume of constitutionally related business has increased, and especially as the number of standing committees of the assembly has increased, members of the ACC are spread thin in an attempt to provide constitutional advice where needed. Having additional resources in the form of individuals already broadly experienced in the committee’s work style could ameliorate some of the pressure on the committee.

Recommendation 4. Review the ACC’s Manual of Procedures to determine if changes need to be made in conformance with the new Foundations of Presbyterian Polity and new Form of Government.
Recommendation 5. Empower the ACC to provide interim advice to requests from General Assembly entities and their subgroups.

Rationale: It is clear from recent experience that when commissions, special committees, or task forces are created by the Assembly and charged with proposing sweeping changes to the structure of our polity, interim advice from the ACC has been helpful in enabling the entity so created to bring recommendations that meet with fewer constitutional barriers. Both the Form of Government Task Force and the work of the Mid-Council Commission have benefitted from consultations with the ACC during the preparation of their work.

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

Our profound appreciation to Joanne Green, senior administrative assistant for the Advisory Committee on the Constitution, Department of Constitutional Services in the Office of the General Assembly. Joanne kept us on task and provided a multitude of supports during this process and did it in such an unassuming but deliberate way that she almost made us think we were in charge. She is indeed the “wind beneath our wings”… she keeps us flying. Joanne’s continuing standard of excellence and efficient pleasant demeanor helped to make this a labor of love.

Appendix 1
Excerpts—Book of Order

(Chapter Six)

G-6.02 INTERPRETING THE CONSTITUTION

The General Assembly may provide authoritative interpretation of the Book of Order, which shall be binding on the councils of the church when rendered in the manner described in this section or through a decision of the General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission in a remedial or disciplinary case.

The General Assembly shall elect an Advisory Committee on the Constitution composed of nine persons, teaching elders and ruling elders in numbers as nearly equal as possible. The Stated Clerk of the General Assembly shall be a member ex officio without vote. No person who has served on the Advisory Committee on the Constitution for a full term of six years shall be eligible for reelection until four years have elapsed after the expired six-year term. The General Assembly shall provide by its own rule for the qualifications of members of the Advisory Committee on the Constitution.

All questions requiring an interpretation by the General Assembly of the Book of Order arising from councils of the church shall be communicated in writing to the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly no later than 120 days prior to the convening of the next session of the General Assembly. The Stated Clerk shall refer all such questions of interpretation to the Advisory Committee on the Constitution, except those pertaining to matters pending before a judicial commission. The Advisory Committee on the Constitution shall communicate its report and recommendations to the next session of the General Assembly, no less than sixty days prior to the General Assembly.

G-6.04 AMENDING THE BOOK OF ORDER

Amendments to the Book of Order shall be made only if all the following steps are completed:

a. All proposals requesting amendment of the Book of Order are communicated in writing to the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly no later than 120 days prior to the convening of the next session of the General Assembly.

b. The Stated Clerk shall refer all such proposals to amend the Book of Order to the Advisory Committee on the Constitution (G-6.02), which shall examine the proposed amendment for clarity and consistency of language and for compatibility with other provisions of the Constitution of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). At least sixty days prior to the meeting of the General Assembly, the advisory committee shall report its findings to the General Assembly along with its recommendations, which may include an amended version of any proposed constitutional changes as well as advice to accept or decline the proposals referred to the committee. The General Assembly shall not consider any amendment until it has considered the report and any recommendations from the Advisory Committee on the Constitution.

c. The same General Assembly approves the proposal to amend and transmits the proposed amendment to the presbyteries for their vote.

d. Presbyteries shall transmit their votes to the Stated Clerk no later than one year following the adjournment of the assembly transmitting the proposed amendments.

e. The Stated Clerk receives written advice that a proposed amendment to the Book of Order has received the affirmative votes of a majority of all the presbyteries. The proposed amendment so approved shall become effective one year following the adjournment of the assembly transmitting the proposed amendment.

I. MEETING

The committee shall ordinarily meet once a year at a date to be established by the moderator, vice moderator, secretary and the Office of the Stated Clerk following the 120 day deadline for the submission of Overtures to amend, or request to interpret, the Constitution. The committee shall also meet in time to submit its report and recommendations no later than sixty days prior to the convening of the next session of the General Assembly.

Additional meetings may be scheduled when the works require it at a time to be established by the moderator, vice moderator, secretary and the Office of the Stated Clerk.

The scheduling of meetings shall be done in such a manner as to insure maximum participation by the members of the committee.

The quorum for a meeting of the committee is a majority of the voting members.

II. OFFICERS

A. Officers of the committee shall be the moderator, vice moderator, and secretary. They shall be elected for one year terms to take effect upon the adjournment of the next General Assembly. They shall be eligible for re-election for as many terms as may be consistent with their membership on the committee.

III. RESPONSIBILITIES

A. The Moderator

1. The moderator shall preside at all meetings of the committee. If the moderator is incapacitated or absent, the vice moderator will carry out his or her responsibilities or the committee may elect a Moderator Pro Tem.

2. The moderator, vice moderator, secretary, and liaison staff person from the Office of the Stated Clerk shall determine prior to each of the committee meetings the work which will be considered by the committee and make assignments for preliminary study and recommendations by other members.

3. The moderator shall be responsible for the agenda of each meeting, while advance arrangements for the meeting include the sending of papers and assignments to the committee members shall be the responsibility of the Office of the General Assembly.

4. The moderator, secretary and liaison staff person from the Office of the Stated Clerk shall prepare the report of the committee to the General Assembly.

5. The moderator, or a member designated by him or her, shall be available to represent the committee at any orientation of the General Assembly Leaders and of General Assembly Commissioners upon invitation from the committee and the Office of the General Assembly and the Office of the Stated Clerk.

6. The moderator shall be responsible for presenting the report of the committee to the General Assembly. The moderator may request any member of the committee to speak on a particular item of business.

B. The Vice Moderator

1. In the absence of the moderator, or his or her incapacitation, shall call to order the meetings of the committee and preside until the arrival of the moderator.

2. In the event of the death, incapacitation or resignation of the moderator, shall become the acting moderator.

C. The Secretary

1. Shall be responsible for recording the proceedings of the committee.

2. Shall, in cooperation with the moderator and liaison staff person perform the duties outlined in Section III A-2-4.

3. Shall be responsible for maintaining this Manual.

4. Shall assist the moderator in the conduct of meetings so as to insure the completion in a timely manner of all the work of the committee.

D. Liaison Staff persons

1. Shall receive and assemble for transmission to the committee all papers requiring review and comment from the committee.

2. Shall make logistical arrangements for any and all meetings of the committee.

3. Shall assist the moderator and secretary in the preparation for and conduct of all meetings of the committee.
4. Shall serve as archivist for the committee.

5. Shall serve as the corresponding secretary of the committee in matters referred to the committee by governing bodies of the Church.

6. Shall in cooperation with the secretary develop forms and procedures to facilitate the work of the committee.

7. Shall perform such other services for the committee as may be assigned by the Office of the Stated Clerk or at the request of the committee.

E. Procedures for Handling Requests for Interpretation

1. The Office of the General Assembly receives a request for an authoritative interpretation.

2. The Office of Constitutional Services makes an initial judgment as to whether the request “requires an interpretation” by the General Assembly.

   a. If Constitutional Services believes that the provision is adequately interpreted by other provisions of the Constitution or past authoritative interpretations, it will respond to the request, with a copy to the moderator, vice moderator and secretary of the Advisory Committee on the Constitution.

      (1) If the moderator, vice moderator and secretary agree that the request needs no further response, they will recommend to ACC that the reply of Constitutional Services be affirmed. When ACC agrees, this is an ACC determination that the provision does not “require interpretation.” The requesting entity is informed of this action and the request does not appear in the record of the General Assembly. If ACC does not agree, the request will be assigned to a writing team.

      (2) If the moderator, vice moderator, and secretary do not agree with the judgment of Constitutional Services or its response, the request will be assigned to a writing team for the development of a recommended response for the General Assembly’s consideration.

   b. If Constitutional Services believes that the request requires an ACC response, the moderator and secretary will assign it to a writing team for the development of a recommended response for the General Assembly’s consideration.

3. Once ACC approves a recommended response, it is included in its report to the General Assembly. Upon action by the General Assembly the provision will have been authoritatively interpreted.

GENERAL RULES FOR MEMBERS

1. All members are expected to be in attendance throughout each and every meeting of the committee.

2. All members of the committee shall be in attendance at the session of the General Assembly.

3. To insure their availability for the work of the Committee at the General Assembly meeting, members of the committee should be free of any other responsibilities at the General Assembly.

4. At the General Assembly the members of the committee will be expected to serve as resource persons to Assembly committees and especially those committees to which recommendations from the Advisory Committee have been assigned by the Assembly Committee on Bills and Overtures.

5. Members of the committee are not authorized to speak for the committee and thus are expected to show restraint in responding to any request for constitutional interpretation.

6. The actions of the committee have no authority until acted upon by the General Assembly. It is therefore improper for any committee member to disseminate any actions taken by the committee before they have been made public by the Office of the General Assembly.

7. In preparing responses to communications to the committee, those members assigned responsibility for review and recommendations should use the document identification number assigned to that document.

8. When directed by the General Assembly or when requested by an agency or committee of the General Assembly, the committee may consult with said agencies or committees on constitutional matters. The only authoritative interpretations of the Constitution are those recommended by the committee as a whole and approved by the General Assembly.

GLOSSARY AND ABBREVIATIONS OF TERMS

Overture (O) A formal action by a presbytery, synod, or agency of the General Assembly seeking an amendment to the Constitution. (See G-18.0300 for requirements.) There is no required style. The signature of the stated clerk of the presbytery or synod certifying the action of the governing body makes a communication an overture from one governing body to another. The numbering of overtures shall be done by the Office of the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly.
| Request (R) | Any request for an authoritative interpretation of the Constitution submitted to the Stated Clerk by a governing body or an individual. Those requiring an interpretation are submitted to ACC. |
| Reports (RGA) | Material submitted to the General Assembly by its entities or Special Committees. |
| Referral (REF) | An action referred to the Advisory Committee on the Constitution by the General Assembly for report to a subsequent General Assembly. |
| Commissioners’ Resolution (CR) | A written resolution introduced by any two commissioners to the General Assembly in accordance with the Manual of the General Assembly. |

NUMBERING OF PAPERS

Each of the above referenced papers shall carry an ACC Document Identification Number for easy reference by committee members. The Office of General Assembly staff shall maintain a summary chart of all business before the ACC.

Appendix 3

EXCERPT—Standing Rules of the General Assembly

(From the Manual of the General Assembly, 2012)

Stated Clerk of the General Assembly

Titles/Functions—

a. Title and Functions of the Stated Clerk at the General Assembly

(1) The title of the Stated Clerk is “The Stated Clerk of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.)” and may be used by the incumbent until a successor is elected and takes office. (SR H.2.a.(1)

(2) The Stated Clerk is accountable, through the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly, to the General Assembly for the performance of the duties of the office, and shall present to each meeting of the General Assembly a report on the state of the church. (SR H.2.a.(2)

(3) The Stated Clerk is responsible for all matters related to the sessions of the General Assembly and all other matters relative to and arising from the General Assembly for which no other assignment has been made. (SR H.2.a.(3)

(4) The Stated Clerk shall also be responsible for guidance of the procedures for candidates seeking the office of moderator, and for supervision of the election of each moderator. (SR H.2.a.(4)

(5) In accordance with directives from previous General Assemblies and in consultations with the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly, the General Assembly Mission Council, and other General Assembly agencies, the Stated Clerk is authorized to decide on matters pertaining to facilities and special events that must be established before the first meeting of the Assembly Committee on Bills and Overtures. (SR H.2.a.(5)

(6) The Stated Clerk shall receive all reports, communications, overtures, and any other materials appropriate for General Assembly consideration. The Stated Clerk shall recommend to the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly, for presentation to the Assembly Committee on Business Referral, a referral of such items of business coming before the General Assembly. (SR H.2.a.(6)

(7) The Stated Clerk shall prepare for consideration of the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly a proposed docket for the General Assembly’s consideration of its business (Standing Rule C.4.a.). The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly shall present the proposed docket to the first meeting of the Assembly Committee on Bills and Overtures so that it may recommend a docket to the commissioners at the first business session. The docket presented to the Assembly Committee on Bills and Overtures shall provide a time early in the General Assembly for a report by the Stated Clerk on the state of the church, and for a report by the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly. (SR H.2.a.(7)

(8) The Stated Clerk shall propose to the General Assembly the number of assembly committees and a name for each committee after consultation with the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly and the appropriate General Assembly entity or entities (Standing Rule C.1.). The Stated Clerk shall present the committee structure to the General Assembly for ratification at the first business session. Each commissioner and advisory delegate shall be assigned by random selection to one assembly committee at least forty-five days before the opening date of the General Assembly. (SR H.2.a.(8)

(9) The Stated Clerk shall provide opportunity for orienting the commissioners, advisory delegates, and others taking part in the session of the General Assembly. The use of Robert’s Rules of Order, sources of parliamentary advice, and the availability of resource persons and materials to facilitate their work should be part of the orientation. (SR H.2.a.(9)

(10) The Stated Clerk shall be the parliamentarian for the meetings of the General Assembly, or arrange for the service of a professional parliamentarian. (SR H.2.a.(10)
(11) The Stated Clerk shall transmit to the councils and agencies of the assembly, persons who presented business to the assembly, and others affected by the assembly’s actions, a report on actions of the General Assembly on matters pertaining to their concerns. The Stated Clerk shall transmit to the presbyteries all assembly actions on which the presbyteries are requested to take action. (SR H.2.a.(11)

(12) As soon as practicable after the adjournment of the General Assembly, the Stated Clerk shall publish the assembly’s proceedings and other documents as the assembly may direct in an appropriate format (i.e. print or electronic) to be determined by the Stated Clerk. (SR H.2.a.(12)

EXCERPT—Standing Rules of the General Assembly
(From the Manual of the General Assembly, 2012)
Advisory Committee on the Constitution

a. The Advisory Committee on the Constitution shall report to the General Assembly its findings along with its recommendations on all questions requiring an interpretation by the General Assembly of the Book of Order, including proposals for constitutional change. “The General Assembly shall vote on the recommendations, and may amend or decline to approve them” (Book of Order, G-6.02). The Advisory Committee on the Constitution shall report any editorial changes made to the Book of Order since its last report to the General Assembly. (SR A.5.a.)

b. New business initiated in an assembly committee proposing an amendment to the Constitution or requiring an interpretation of the Constitution by the General Assembly (Book of Order, G-6.04b and G-6.02) shall be referred to the Advisory Committee on the Constitution, which shall report its findings and recommendations to the General Assembly. (SR E.3.b)

c. Any other new business initiated in an assembly committee that touches upon constitutional matters (Book of Order, G-13.0112e) shall be communicated in writing to the Advisory Committee on the Constitution and the Stated Clerk. The Advisory Committee on the Constitution shall consider each matter so referred and report its findings and recommendations, which may include proposals for constitutional change, to the assembly committee and the Stated Clerk. The assembly committee shall vote on the recommendations and may amend or decline to approve them. The advice of the Advisory Committee on the Constitution on these matters shall be transmitted to the General Assembly with the report of the assembly committee. (SR E.3.c)

d. Recommendations and reports to the assembly regarding such new business must be approved in assembly committees by three-fourths of the committee members voting on the matter. (SR E.3.d)

e. New business, other than that described in this standing rule, must be presented in accordance with Standing Rule A.8. (SR E.3.e)

f. New business initiated in an assembly committee proposing an amendment to the Constitution (Book of Order, G-6.04) or requiring an interpretation of the Constitution by the General Assembly (Book of Order, G-6.02) shall be referred to the Advisory Committee on the Constitution, which shall report its findings and recommendations to the General Assembly. Any other new business initiated in an assembly committee that touches upon constitutional matters (Book of Order, G-13.0112e) shall be communicated in writing to the Advisory Committee on the Constitution and the Stated Clerk. The Advisory Committee on the Constitution shall consider each matter referred and report its findings and recommendations (which may include proposals for constitutional change) to the assembly committee and the Stated Clerk. The advice of the Advisory Committee on the Constitution on these matters shall be transmitted to the General Assembly with the report of the assembly committee. (SR E.3.f)

Advisory Committee on the Constitution on these matters shall be transmitted to the General Assembly with the report of the assembly committee. (SR E.3.f)

Self-Study Survey #1

ADVISORY COMMITTEE ON THE CONSTITUTION
Office of the General Assembly
Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.)

SELF-STUDY SURVEY #1

It is absolutely essential that the members of the Advisory Committee on the Constitution (ACC) respond to the survey questions in a very thoughtful and comprehensive manner. It is extremely important that your responses include examples and detailed evidence. It is also appropriate to answer with suggestions of improving ACC performance in regard to the issues being addressed. Please respond on this document, taking as much space as needed; then, e-mail the completed survey to Joanne Green (joanne.green@pcusa.org) Thanks!

Fidelity to Mission and Partnership

1. Does the committee as it was created by the church serve and support the church’s mission in a particular area? Does the committee exhibit a constant faithfulness to and in fulfillment of its servant role in the life of the PC(USA)?

2. Do the basic processes of the committee demonstrate fidelity to the mission and accountability procedures set forth in its establishing deliverance, charter, or mandate from the assembly?
3. Does the committee exhibit practical cooperation with the other agencies or committees of the church in areas of overlapping responsibility and opportunity?

4. Does the committee provide timely responses to directives and requests from the General Assembly?

Effectiveness of Services
The services of the committee are consistent with its assembly constitutional mandate.

Does the committee have a defined and consistent process for completing its work?

Does the committee have a regular process of self-evaluation of its services?

Does the committee employ a strategy for effective communication with the church-at-large?

Does the committee utilize current and emerging technologies to enable it to fulfill its mission?

Does the committee have a developed vision and plan for its work in light of its historic mandate and the emerging issues before and context of the PC(U.S.A.)?

As you have worked to interpret the Constitution of the PC(USA) to the General Assembly and the church, how has it affected your understanding of the mission of the PC(USA) and deepened your faith in Jesus Christ?
During fall 2011 the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) Research Services office conducted survey research for the review the Advisory Committee on the Constitution.

Research Services surveyed 219th General Assembly commissioners and mid-council leaders (presbytery and synod executives and stated clerks) about the Advisory Committee on the Constitution. On October 18, 2011, 711 commissioners and 382 mid-council leaders were invited by email to participate in the survey on the web. Non-respondents received three subsequent e-mail reminders. Three-quarters of General Assembly commissioners (73%) and three in five presbytery and synod leaders (62%) responded. Half of the General Assembly commissioners who responded (50%) were elders and half (50%) were ministers. Three in five presbytery and synod leaders who responded were stated clerks (61%) and half (48%) were executives. (Some served in both roles.)

A brief summary of findings is provided here. The complete report and summary of the Research Services report will go to the 220th General Assembly committee that will review the work of the ACC. More details are available in four appendices: Appendix A provides a numerical summary of percentage responses to each question in the survey of presbytery and synod leaders. Appendix B provides the text of all comments made in response to open-ended questions in that same survey. Appendix C provides a numerical summary of percentage responses to each question in the survey of 219th General Assembly commissioners. Appendix D provides the text of all comments made in response to open-ended questions in that survey. (Excerpts from Appendix A and C are included in Appendix 9)

Results

About nine in ten General Assembly commissioners (92 percent) and almost all mid council leaders (99 percent) are very familiar, familiar, or slightly familiar with the Advisory Committee on the Constitution. Among General Assembly commissioners and mid-council leaders with at least some familiarity with the Advisory Committee on the Constitution, more than four in five believe that the committee accomplished very well or well a variety of tasks associated with General Assembly meetings between 2006 and the survey period.

Perceived Advisory Committee on the Constitution Accomplishments

Four in five commissioners with at least some familiarity with the Advisory Committee on the Constitution (83 percent) served on a committee at the 219th General Assembly that was resourced by a member of the advisory committee. More than four in five such commissioners believe the advisory committee member who resourced their GA committee presented a professional demeanor, demonstrated competence, clearly articulated constitutional principles, and helped the committee interpret Advisory Committee on the Constitution recommendations quite a bit or a fair amount.

Performance of Advisory Committee Members Who Resourced General Assembly Committees (Commissioners’ Responses)

Nine in ten mid-council leaders with at least some familiarity with the advisory committee (92%) found to be very helpful or helpful the advice about proposed constitutional changes that the advisory committee gave to presbyteries in 2010 in the booklet titled Proposed Amendments to the ‘Constitution of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.).’ Nine in ten mid-council leaders with at least some familiarity with the advisory committee (92 percent) found to be very helpful or helpful the advice about proposed constitutional changes that the advisory committee gave to presbyteries in 2010 in the booklet titled Proposed Amendments to the ‘Constitution of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.).’

About half of mid council leaders who have some familiarity with the committee (53 percent) report that their presbytery or synod submitted an overture proposing a change to the Book of Order between 2006 and the survey period. Three-quarters of mid-council leaders with some familiarity with the committee whose presbytery or synod proposed a change to the Book of Order (76 percent) rate the quality of the advice the advisory committee gave about constitutional issues raised by overtures their mid-council submitted as very good or good.

Presented with the Advisory Committee on the Constitution’s mission, almost all of the mid-council leaders with at least some familiarity with the committee (96 percent) believe that between 2006 and the survey period it was very faithful or faithful in carrying out its mission.

Fidelity of the Advisory Committee on the Constitution to Its Mission (Mid Council Leaders’ Responses)

Nine in ten commissioners (89 percent) and mid council leaders (89 percent) believe the work of the committee is very important or important to the PC(USA).

Importance of the Advisory Committee on the Constitution’s Work

In response to open-ended questions, some respondents argue that the work of the committee is indispensable. Others maintain the committee intervenes too assertively and is too liberal.

Conclusion

Commissioners and mid-council leaders generally believe the Advisory Committee on the Constitution’s work is important and well done, although a few believe the committee is too assertive.

Budgetary Information

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution (ACC) is housed in the Department of Constitutional Services in the Office of the General Assembly (OGA). Budget requests are submitted every two years. Budget approval is a four-step process:

1. Requests are submitted to a budget committee comprised of the budget director and two staff members from each department. This committee reviews each request, making sure that it complies with the funding formulas approved by the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly (COGA), and negotiates any suggested changes with departments.

2. The requests are then submitted for Senior Coordinating Cabinet approval.

3. Once approved by the Senior Coordinating Cabinet, the budget is sent forward to COGA for approval.

4. The final budget proposals are sent to the General Assembly.

The formula used to calculate travel, lodging and meals is $665.00 for the first day, and $160.00 for each additional day. The $665.00 is to include the cost of transportation. The budget does not take into account that some committee members must arrive and/or stay a day later due to airline schedules and/or meetings. Additionally, to reduce cost of staff travel, COGA has requested that as much as possible, all meetings should be held in Louisville. In the past several years, the Advisory Committee has met in Louisville for their spring meeting. The fall meeting is held two days prior to the Fall Polity Conference. At least half of the ACC members are mid council members who are already attending the fall conference, which means less money is used from the budget of the Advisory Committee on the Constitution.

For even numbered years when the General Assembly meets, COGA budgets for two meetings of the Advisory Committee on the Constitution, plus one person to attend the GA Leadership Briefing in the spring. For odd numbered years when the General Assembly does not meet, the ACC has one meeting.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution requests budget for printing and mailing. In the past several years the ACC has been working to use less paper. The current moderator did have the fall 2011 ACC meeting be virtually paperless. The ACC has used electronic meetings (Go To Meeting) to work on business since 2007 and that has been a savings in the budget not to have face-to-face meetings.

The ACC also uses a web-based program, Base Camp/Project Path, to cut down on the use of paper.

The ACC continues to find ways to get their work done in a way that will be less cost to the church.

Part One: The Purpose of the Assembly Committee on Review

The purpose of the Assembly Committee on Review evaluation is not to find fault but to evaluate the committee or commission’s goals and goal implementation while helping to formulate solutions for improvement.

The Assembly Committee on Review should:

- Interview committee or commission leadership
- Evaluate self-study draft
- Determine affirmations for committee or commission
- Propose improvements for committee or commission
- Strive for fair and impartial evaluation regarding committee or commission at all levels of the review

Specific criteria are found in the following section, Assessment Criteria. Please review this section carefully.

Assessment Criteria

A. Fidelity to Mission and Partnership

1. Each committee or commission was created by the church and exists to serve and support the church’s mission in a particular area. Each committee or commission is expected to exhibit a constant faithfulness to and in fulfillment of its servant role in the life of the PC (USA).

2. The basic process of the committee or commission should demonstrate fidelity to the mission and accountability procedures set forth in its establishing deliverance, charter, or mandate from the assembly. The committee or commission should exhibit leadership in guiding the church in engagement with the work and resources in which the committee or commission acts.

3. The committee or commission should exhibit practical cooperation with the other agencies or committees of the church in areas of overlapping responsibility and opportunity.

4. The committee or commission should provide timely responses to directives and requests from the General Assembly.

B. Effectiveness of Services

The services of the committee or commission are consistent with its assembly or constitutional mandate.

1. The committee or commission has a defined and consistent process for completing its work.

2. The committee or commission has a regular process of self-evaluation of its services.

3. The committee or commission employs a strategy for effective communication with the church-at-large.

4. The committee or commission utilizes current and emerging technologies to enable it to fulfill its mission.

5. The committee or commission has developed a vision and plans for its work in light of its historic mandate and the emerging issues before and context of the PC (USA).

Part Two: Evaluation at the General Assembly

I. Introduction

The Assembly Committee on Review is the second step in the PC (U.S.A.)’s assessment of the committee or commission and its mission.

The review can be a valuable opportunity for the committee or commission to see itself as others see them, and to formulate a plan for goal setting and strengthening of its role both in the PC (U.S.A.) community and within the organization.

A. Before the General Assembly

Before meeting with the committee or commission for the review, the Assembly Committee on Review may take the following steps:

- Divide the committee into sub-committees to review individual committees or commissions
- Mail out the self-study and survey material to committee members
- Mail out to study “How to review GA permanent and advisory committees and commissions material”

B. Conducting the Interviews

In conducting the review, the Assembly Committee on Review should take the following steps:
• Review survey results. This will help with your fact-finding relevant to the self-study.
• Hold the discussion in the style of an open interview. The purpose of the review is not an inquisition, but a fact-finding mission.
• Prepare questions in advance.
• Listen attentively and take notes. Even with a photographic memory, written documentation is critical for the person or persons preparing the evaluation.
• Ask for documentation if not already provided or made available.

C. Questions to Ask and Things to Look For Following these guidelines will help ensure a successful review while adhering to a standard protocol.

II. Fidelity to Mission and Partnership

1. Does the committee or commission as it was created by the church serve and support the church’s mission in a particular area? Does the committee or commission exhibit a constant faithfulness to and in fulfillment of its servant role in the life of the PC (USA)?

2. Do the basic process of the committee or commission demonstrate fidelity to the mission and accountability procedures set forth in its establishing deliverance, charter, or mandate from the assembly? Does the committee or commission exhibit leadership in guiding the church in engagement with the work and resources in which the committee or commission acts?

3. Does the committee or commission exhibit practical cooperation with the other agencies or committees of the church in areas of overlapping responsibility and opportunity?

4. Does the committee or commission provide timely responses to directives and requests from the General Assembly?

III. Effectiveness of Services

The services of the committee or commission are consistent with its assembly or constitutional mandate.

1. Does the committee or commission have a defined and consistent process for completing its work?

2. Does the committee or commission have a regular process of self-evaluation of its services?

3. Does the committee or commission employ a strategy for effective communication with the church-at-large?

4. Does the committee or commission utilize current and emerging technologies to enable it to fulfill its mission?

5. Does the committee or commission have a developed vision and plan for its work in light of its historic mandate and the emerging issues before and context of the PC (USA).”

IV. After the Interviews

After the interviews, the Assembly Committee on Review should take the following steps. After each interview, summarize each session using bullet points to help you formulate your report.

• Identify any additional information needs to be addressed.

• Assign a writing group to draft report.

V. Supporting Information

The committee or commission is expected to provide supporting evidence for its claims. In addition to survey results and interviews conducted by the Assembly Committee on Review, information from such sources as other reports and studies, prior General Assembly reports may be included in informational citations.

Part Three - Evaluation

I. Introduction

The Assembly Committee on Review report is the third step in PC(U.S.A.) review process. This important document outlines the strengths and weaknesses of the committee or commission being reviewed and is a valuable tool for improvement.

The report schedule may be hectic, but it is imperative that observations be recorded and distilled promptly for maximum effectiveness.

II. Preparing the Reports

The report by the Assembly Committee on Review should follow the standard from for reports to the plenary of the general Assembly. Recommendations should be listed first with supporting rationale to follow. In the event that there are no recommendations the report should follow the format of reports with no recommendations.
III. Committee or Commission Response to the Reports

Bear in mind that the Assembly Committee on Review recommendations, suggestions and findings may be controversial. They must reflect the consensus of the Assembly Committee on Review. After receipt of the report, the committee or commission has the opportunity to respond. Permitted response components could include a correction of factual errors, recommendation and suggestion replies and supporting information and documents that address the committee’s concerns.

Response

After the Assembly Committee on Review prepares its report

• The committee or commission may respond to recommendations cited in the final Assembly Committee on Review report
• Address and implement recommendations per their report
• Establish a plan for the committee or commission members to implement the plan
• Create short-term objectives and long-term goals, using the self-study as a guide
• Develop a timeline for the implementation of these objectives and goals

Appendix 12
Standards for Review of General Assembly Permanent, Advocacy, and Advisory Committee and Commissions

STANDARDS FOR REVIEW OF GENERAL ASSEMBLY PERMANENT, ADVOCACY, AND ADVISORY COMMITTEES AND COMMISSIONS

A. PURPOSE

The responsibilities of the committee or commission that are being reviewed

1. A self-study of its work based on the review standards covering the previous six years.
2. The self-study will have to be available by the 120-day deadline before the General Assembly at which it is to be reviewed.
3. Representatives of the committee or commission will need to be available at the assembly to serve as resources for the assembly committee.
4. The committee or commission may include responses in the self-study and additional questions that explore the standards that apply to its particular work.
5. The committee or commission may utilize former members to help develop the self-study.

B. THE RESPONSIBILITIES OF THE OFFICE OF THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY IN THE REVIEW

1. The Office of the General Assembly (OGA), in consultation with the leadership of the committee or commission, will supervise the development of a survey instrument by the Office of Research Services.
2. Specific training of assembly committee leadership and members as needed to accomplish the evaluation process.
4. The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly (COGA) and the GAC will evaluate the review process after each assembly.

C. THE WORK OF THE ASSEMBLY COMMITTEE FOR REVIEW

1. The review assignment will be given to a designated assembly committee.
2. The assembly committee’s review will be limited to certain questions:
   Is the committee or commission fulfilling its mandate (based on self-study, surveys, consultations with committee or commission leadership)?
3. Are there items that need to be referred for further study?
4. The assembly committee will hold hearings, etc.
5. The assembly committee will be in dialogue with representatives of the General Assembly permanent, advocacy, and advisory committees or commissions being reviewed.
6. The assembly committee may break into subgroups to cover each committee or commission being reviewed.
7. The review committee will respect the distinction between a committee and a commission.
8. The assembly committee will make a final report, possibly with recommendations.
A. Fidelity to Mission and Partnership

1. Each committee or commission was created by the church and exists to serve and support the church’s mission in a particular area. Each committee or commission is expected to exhibit a constant faithfulness to and in fulfillment of its servant role in the life of the PC(USA).

2. The basic process of the committee or commission should demonstrate fidelity to the mission and accountability procedures set forth in its establishing deliverance, charter, or mandate from the assembly. 19-Self-Study ACL

Advisory Committee on Litigation Self-Study

1. History

In 1987, the Office of the General Assembly joined with the office of the Advisory Council on Church and Society to carry out a consultation on involvement in litigation in civil courts. Guidelines were prepared to assist the Stated Clerk in carrying out responsibilities in connection with possible participation in litigation in civil courts. In 1988, the Office of the General Assembly recommended that the General Assembly establish an Advisory Committee on Litigation to advise the Stated Clerk on various matters of litigation for which the clerk is responsible under Organization for Mission IV.B.2.b. This body was anticipated to strengthen the work of the Office of the General Assembly in dealing with matters such as the filing of briefs amicus curiae (friend of the court briefs), and other, more direct forms of participation in litigation in secular civil and criminal courts.

2. Purpose and Form

The Advisory Committee on Litigation is made up of six elected persons who are members of a PC(USA) council and ordinarily an attorney-at-law. These six elected persons are experienced in legal fields that relate to issues that may be the subject of legal proceedings in which the church is, or may become, interested. The committee advises the Stated Clerk regarding participation in litigation related to matters of civil and religious liberty, relations between church and state, and any other matters related to the mission and interest of the church.

Occasionally an issue will arise in a presbytery or synod where it will be appropriate for that council to join, or even draft, an amicus curiae brief in support of religious liberty or a position of interest to the governing body. An amicus curiae brief is literally a “friend of the court” brief. It may raise an issue not explicitly raised by the parties, but one quite relevant to the case. Usually such briefs are filed only with leave of the court. They are almost always limited to appellate level filings.
The Organization for Mission of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) gives the General Assembly Stated Clerk authority to join in such briefs on behalf of the General Assembly. Since 1988, the Advisory Committee on Litigation has advised the clerk on whether to join or file particular amicus curiae briefs. The General Assembly has approved seventeen criteria for use in determining whether to file a particular brief (see below).

When a case arises, the Advisory Committee on Litigation reviews all the case material, any social policy of the General Assembly, and any procedure of the PC(USA) that may pertain to the case. They then apply the criteria in deciding how to advise the State Clerk. This process can take many hours of intense evaluation and may result in a recommendation that the Stated Clerk participate in, either directly as a party or by filing an amicus brief, in the litigation. The ACL may also advise that the Stated Clerk not participate in the particular litigation for a variety of reasons.

Over the years, the General Assembly has also occasionally requested that the Advisory Committee on Litigation be a resource in the development of social witness policy when that social witness policy may have secular legal implications.

When the General Assembly Stated Clerk is invited to join or file a brief that would have regional or local implications, the Assistant Stated Clerk will normally contact the stated clerk of the affected governing body. She will provide, upon request, copies of legal pleadings, relevant Scriptural, Confessional, or General Assembly Social Policy statements on the substantive issue. If there is a draft amicus, she will normally share that as well.

A presbytery or synod may join the General Assembly Stated Clerk on briefs if that fits within the social witness of the congregations within the presbytery or synod. The appropriate signatory on such a brief is typically the Stated Clerk as the ecclesiastical representative of governing body. A presbytery may provide by rule for some other person (such as an executive presbyter) who bears that responsibility. It is advisable for the governing body to develop a process and identify responsible officers or employees. If legal issue arises within a presbytery or synod that would benefit by the filing of an amicus brief, the General Assembly Stated Clerk will often join the presbytery upon request.

3. Self-Evaluation

a. In developing and using consistently the criteria for evaluation of litigation, the Advisory Committee on Litigation has a thorough definition of its work and process for completing its work. Because of the nature of litigation, this usually is applied in a short timeframe for each particular case involvement, however, the application and evaluation process happens continually for as long as the Stated Clerk is involved in a particular litigation.

b. The Advisory Committee on Litigation regularly self-evaluates its services to the Stated Clerk as it applies to evolving civil law and evolving social policy of the PC(USA). The Advisory Committee on Litigation is always on call for use by the Stated Clerk. The Stated Clerk may participate in conference calls and meetings of the Advisory Committee on Litigation. The Stated Clerk additionally employs an Assistant Stated Clerk as a liaison with the Advisory Committee on Litigation.

c. Since the Advisory Committee on Litigation advises only the Stated Clerk, the committee itself does not employ a strategy for communication with the church-at-large. The Stated Clerk and the Office of the General Assembly does have a strategy for communication of any litigation in which the Stated Clerk participates through amicus briefs or as a direct party. The OGA has created a webpage that includes copies of all briefs filed by the Stated Clerk as an amicus or a direct party.

d. The Advisory Committee on Litigation utilizes technology made available to them through the Office of the General Assembly. They additionally utilize their professional expertise to advise the Stated Clerk on any needs they may have to fulfill their function as an advisory committee.

e. The Advisory Committee on Litigation meets face-to-face biannually and reviews its mission as well as any potential litigation or social issue that may be emerging that is of interest to the PC(USA). This meeting typically consists of a review of current, past, and future civil legal issues of interest to the PC(USA) and their evolving civil legal precedents and church social policy.

f. The Advisory Committee on Litigation budget includes biannual face-to-face meetings, legal research fees, conference calls, copying, legal resources, and representation to General Assembly.

4. Criteria for Evaluation of an Amicus Brief in Litigation

a. Does the case raise a significant religious or ethical issue of concern for the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.)?

b. Has the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), through the General Assembly, the Church Constitution, or accepted biblical, confessional, and theological principles, advocated or adopted a position that is relevant to the issue or issues raised in the case?
c. Can the church’s position on the issue or issues be persuasively and effectively communicated in the amicus brief?

d. Does the amicus brief enunciate statements inconsistent with policies and positions approved by the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) through the General Assembly or inconsistent with accepted theological principles? If such an inconsistency exists, can the church’s position be expressed in such a way as to accurately reflect the church’s position without compromising that position or the integrity of the amicus brief? or should a separate amicus brief be prepared?

e. Is the proposed amicus brief well-written and practically and legally well-reasoned and persuasive?

f. Has the committee and the Stated Clerk been provided with adequate time to evaluate any proposed amicus brief and the issues presented?

g. Are the issues raised in the case based on a properly developed record and have key pleadings and lower court decisions been supplied?

h. What other organizations, including other religious entities, have been requested to join as amici?

i. Who has prepared the draft amicus brief and for what purpose?

j. Are there issues in the case that will need interpretation to presbyteries and congregations? Should pastors and governing bodies be notified of the case so that they may be able to answer questions? If yes, staff are instructed to notify.

k. Are the issues raised in the case of sufficient importance to justify participation?

l. Does the proposed amicus brief really add anything to the court’s consideration of the issues presented?

m. Within the judicial system, is the level appropriate for the church’s participation?

n. What positions or views will other proposed amici take with respect to the issue or issues raised?

o. Is there a legislative remedy?

p. Criteria 1–5 are guidelines and in each case the committee will exercise its best judgment, but may also consider other factors in making its decision.

q. Is there a significant or passionate constituency within the PC(USA) who might disagree with the position of the brief?

5. Stated Clerk’s Comments Self-Study of the Advisory Committee on Litigation

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution plays an important role in the life of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). In addition to witness in the public arena, the General Assembly has long recognized the need and value of making witness to our theological, moral, and social justice concerns through the judicial system in our country. Such witness requires knowledge of General Assembly policy and an understanding of the implications of particular judicial actions or inaction on how they are lived out in our society.

The Advisory Committee on Litigation was created to provide the legal advice and expertise to the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly. It is composed of six Presbyterian attorneys who advise the Stated Clerk on the legal and judicial implications of potential amicus briefs that the church is invited to enter from time to time to promote religious freedom, human rights, and social justice.

As the Stated Clerk ultimately responsible for making the decisions to engage in secular judicial actions as a form of social witness, I am so grateful for the competence, dedication, and insight that this committee offers. They have greatly enhanced my understanding of the secular judicial sphere and has enabled the church to make an important witness in a number of areas about which the General Assembly cares deeply.

Below is my brief response as the only “client” of the Advisory Committee on Litigation in relation to the criteria that the General Assembly has specified for the evaluation of its permanent committees:

“V. Assessment Criteria

“A. Fidelity to Mission and Partnership

“1. Each committee or commission was created by the church and exists to serve and support the church’s mission in a particular area. Each committee or commission is expected to exhibit a constant faithfulness to and in fulfillment of its servant role in the life of the PC(USA).
"The ACL committee serves to advise me as Stated Clerk on the complicated connection between the social witness of the General Assembly and the secular judicial process. The Committee has fulfilled their charge faithfully and has carried it out well in their detailed and nuanced advice to me.

2. The basic process of the committee or commission should demonstrate fidelity to the mission and accountability procedures set forth in its establishing deliverance, charter, or mandate from the assembly. The committee or commission should exhibit leadership in guiding the church in engagement with the work and resources in which the committee or commission acts.

"The ACL has consistently advised me based on the seventeen criteria in the Criteria for Evaluation established by the General Assembly. The members of the committee are ready at a moment’s notice to review complicated cases, briefs and social policy within a relatively short time frame and honestly discuss the affects of any particular amicus witness.

3. The committee or commission should exhibit practical cooperation with the other agencies or committees of the church in areas of overlapping responsibility and opportunity.

"The ACL has received for its review several potential amicus opportunities for social witness from other agencies or committees of the PCUSA and seems to take seriously the difficult work of other agencies and committees.

4. The committee or commission should provide timely responses to directives and requests from the General Assembly.

"The Assembly has not issued directives or requests to the ACL except for the addition of a 17th Criteria that the committee has added to its extensive evaluation prior to giving its advice to me as the Stated Clerk. The Committee uses all of the social policy given by the General Assembly in its evaluation of potential amicus briefs in particular cases.

B. Effectiveness of Services

"The services of the committee or commission are consistent with its assembly or constitutional mandate.

1. The committee or commission has a defined and consistent process for completing its work.

"The committee has followed its established criteria and has always been available to advise the Stated Clerk either by email, conference call, or face to face meeting often evaluating highly complicated issues. These evaluations often happen with little advance notice and I am grateful to the members of the committee for their attention to highly complex issues within a short time frame.

2. The committee or commission has a regular process of self-evaluation of its services.

"The committee gives to the assembly a regular assessment of the judicial cases in which the amicus briefs were filed.

3. The committee or commission employs a strategy for effective communication with the church-at-large.

"The committee’s primary role is to advise the Stated Clerk only so that the committee itself does not have a major interpretive role to the church. However, the Office of the General Assembly has established a website so that the church can be aware of the committee’s procedures and the briefs filed by the Stated Clerk.

4. The committee or commission utilizes current and emerging technologies to enable it to fulfill its mission.

"The ACL makes regular and effective use of technology in its work.

5. The committee or commission has developed a vision and plans for its work in light of its historic mandate and the emerging issues before and context of the PC(USA).

"The committee holds a face-to-face meeting every two to three years in which it reviews the General Assembly social witness and current issues before the judicial system to advise the Stated Clerk on opportunities to judicially make witness. This has led to giving priority in briefs to issues of First Amendment Establishment and Free Exercise clause interpretations, human rights, and justice for immigrants.”

6. Excerpts from the Organization for Mission of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) 2012 IV.B and IV.C.4

IV. General Assembly Officers and Committees and the Office of the General Assembly

B. Stated Clerk of the General Assembly

1. The title of the Stated Clerk is “The Stated Clerk of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.)” and may be used by the incumbent until a successor is elected and takes office.

2. Functions of the Stated Clerk [For functions related to General Assembly meetings, see Standing Rule H.2.)

b. As an officer of the General Assembly, the Stated Clerk shall preserve and defend the Constitution of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), and support the decisions, actions, and programs of the General Assembly. The Stated Clerk shall give advisory opinions concerning the meaning of the provisions of the Constitution of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), and shall give advisory opinions on the meaning of the actions of the General Assembly. When the Stated Clerk deems it necessary, after consulting with appropriate persons or bodies, the Stated Clerk may retain legal counsel and institute or participate in legal proceedings in civil and criminal courts. …
C. Committees of the General Assembly

4 Advisory Committee on Litigation

a. The Advisory Committee on Litigation shall advise the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly in connection with instituting or participating in legal proceedings (see Functions of the Stated Clerk earlier in this section).

b. The members of the committee shall ordinarily be attorneys, and the members shall be experienced in fields related to issues that may be the subject of legal proceedings in which the church is, or may become, interested. The committee shall be composed of six persons, elected by the General Assembly upon nomination by the General Assembly Nominating Committee. The advisory committee may invite other persons with special competency related to particular cases or situations to participate in the consideration of particular cases or issues. The members shall be evenly divided into three classes, shall serve six-year terms, and shall be eligible for election to one additional term. No member may serve more than two terms, full or partial. Members of this committee are exempted from the prohibition against service on more than one entity of the assembly set forth in Section IV.C.1.c. above.

c. The committee shall elect its own moderator and ordinarily shall meet at the call of the Stated Clerk. The committee may carry on its work by correspondence, telephone consultation (including conference telephone calls), or meetings.

d. The committee shall advise the Stated Clerk regarding participation in litigation related to matters of civil and religious liberty, relations between church and state, and any other matters related to the mission and interest of the church. The Advisory Committee on Litigation shall advise the Stated Clerk regarding the establishment and maintenance of a resource file of legal documents as a means of assisting the governing bodies and agencies of the church in initiating or participating in litigation in the areas within the concerns of the committee.

e. The committee shall be funded through the per capita budget of the Office of the General Assembly, receive staff services as provided by the Stated Clerk, and designate a representative to the annual session of the General Assembly (see Standing Rule B.3.).

f. The committee shall report to each session of the General Assembly.

Item 20-01

[Withdrawn by the Presbytery of San Diego on May 22, 2012.]

Item 20-02

[The assembly disapproved Item 20-02. See p. 36.]

On Directing the Board of Pensions to Provide a Medical Benefits Plan That Will Not Pay for Abortions Except to Save the Life of the Woman—From the Presbytery of Washington.

The Presbytery of Washington overtures the 220th General Assembly (2012) to protect Presbyterians who believe abortion is sin, from the sin of complicity in the taking of human life by directing the Board of Pensions to provide a medical benefits plan that will not pay for abortions, except that any procedure necessary to save the physical life of the woman will be covered.

Rationale

The Board of Pensions medical plan currently covers abortion under a wide range of circumstances. We believe this coverage should be revised to a more focused scenario—namely, medical emergencies when the life of the mother is at stake. To do otherwise is to fly in the face of the Scriptures, which show a clear and consistent regard for human life at even its earliest stages. Has not the Lord chosen his people even from before the foundation of the earth (Eph. 1:4–6)? Does not he himself knit us together in our mother’s wombs (Ps. 139:13)? Did not John the Baptist even leap for joy in the womb of his mother when he heard the voice of Mary, the mother of our Lord (Lk. 1:41)? Let us not treat lightly lives that are costly and precious to our Lord, but instead adopt a medical plan that shows compassion for both mother and child, in full obedience to God’s revealed will.

ACSWP ADVICE AND COUNSEL ON ITEM 20-02

Advice and Counsel on Item 20-02—From the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP).

Item 20-02 calls for the Board of Pensions to provide a medical benefits plan that does not pay for abortions except to save the physical life of the woman.

The Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP) advises that Item 20-02 be disapproved.

Rationale

Previous General Assemblies have addressed the issue of conscience with regard to financial support of abortion. To that end, the Board of Pensions has structured and operates a Relief of Conscience (ROC) Plan that permits Churches and employing organizations that object as a matter of conscience to the use of their dues for abortion procedures may apply for relief of conscience. A dollar amount equal to the cost of abortion procedures from the prior year is set aside from the Medical Plan dues of employers that have relief of conscience status. These monies are transferred to the Board of Pensions Assistance Program, where they provide a small portion of the funding for Adoption Assistance Grants to Benefits Plan members.

Relief of conscience is granted to the organization that pays dues. The full coverage protection of the Medical Plan is available to all Benefits Plan members whether or not their employing organization has relief of conscience status. This overture would violate the church’s current and longstanding policy on abortion. Since 1970 the PC(USA) has strongly and consistently affirmed that women may face situations in which the decision to terminate a pregnancy may be a morally valid decision. Therefore, a woman’s right to have available to her the full range of reproductive options when faced with a problem pregnancy must also exist within the context of the medical plans offered by the Board of Pensions.

The Relief of Conscience mechanism that is already in place provides an avenue by which those individuals, churches, or organizations that oppose abortion in all circumstances (except to save the physical life of the woman) may have relief of conscience, and thus a provision is already in place to meet objections of conscience.
Advice and Counsel on Item 20-02—From the Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns (ACWC).

The Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns advises that the 220th General Assembly (2012) disapprove Item 20-02.

Rationale

The ACWC concurs with the comments of the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP) and advises that Item 20-02 be disapproved.

BOP COMMENT ON ITEM 20-02

Comment on Item 20-02—From the Board of Pensions (BOP).

The Board of Pensions (the “Board”) advises that the General Assembly disapprove Item 20-02.

The General Assembly has discussed and debated the issues relating to problem pregnancies and abortion for many years.1

The Board administers the Benefits Plan of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) consistent with the normative values of the PC(USA), which affirm the right of a woman to make good moral choices in regard to problem pregnancies.2 This means that legal medical procedures related to the termination of pregnancy are covered by the Medical Plan, with the admonition that:

Consistent with the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.)’s affirmation of the ability and responsibility of a woman to make good moral choices regarding problem pregnancies, the Medical Plan reimburses medical costs for abortion procedures, subject to plan limits. The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) further affirms that abortion should not be used as a method of birth control, for gender selection only, or solely to obtain fetal parts for transplantation. See Minutes, 204th General Assembly (1992), available upon request from the Board of Pensions.

Choirs and employing organizations that object, as a matter of conscience, to the use of their dues for abortion procedure costs may apply for Relief of Conscience. Monies offset from Medical Plan dues of employers that have applied for and received Relief of Conscience are deposited in the Board’s Assistance Program and are used to help provide Adoption Assistance Grants to plan members. For more information regarding this administrative policy and Adoption Assistance Grants, contact the Board of Pensions.3

The Board’s Relief of Conscience (ROC) process was approved by the General Assembly in 1992 and refined by subsequent General Assemblies since its initial approval.4

The ROC process reflects the PC(USA)’s long-standing affirmation of the conscience of those who hold a moral position not supported by a majority of Presbyterians. Consistent with the principles of Presbyterian form of government,5 it allows those who hold varying positions to remain in the church. The ROC process allows individual churches or employing organizations to object to the possible use of its Medical Plan dues for abortion-related procedures. Upon the approval of the presbytery, the church is placed on the Board’s ROC roll. The Medical Plan dues of ROC organizations are separately accounted for and claims related to abortion procedures are not paid from those funds.

The Board tracks nine procedure codes used to submit payment for abortion claims, along with three prescription drugs that may be used to induce an abortion, and aggregates those claims to determine the total amount of medical claims that may have been for the termination of a pregnancy. The Medical Plan paid in excess of $170 million dollars in medical claims and expenses in 2011. Of that amount, $8,600 dollars may have been for the termination of a pregnancy.

Ultimately, a dollar amount proportionate to abortion-related procedures are taken from the ROC dues and transferred to an assistance program that provides adoption assistance grants. As of December 31, 2011, there were 537 churches participating in the ROC administrative process.

Endnotes

1. Since 2001, the General Assembly considered abortion in:
   2010: Items 18-12, 19-03, and 19-04
   2008: Items 10-01, 10-03, and 10-04
   2006: Items 10-01, 10-02, and 10-03
   2004: Items 11-01, 11-02, and 11-03
   2003: Items 08-01, 08-02, and 08-03
   2002: Overtures 02-37 and 02-48
   2001: Overtures 01-26, 01-47, 01-48, 01-50, and 01-54.

2. “We affirm the ability and responsibility of women, guided by the Scriptures and the Holy Spirit, in the context of their communities of faith, to make good moral choices in regard to problem pregnancies” (Minutes, 1992, Part I. p. 69, 368).

4. Following an initial study by the Board of Pensions, the 204th General Assembly (1992) approved a process referred to as “Capturing Dues for Alternative Use.”

In 1995, the Board appointed a Special Committee of the Board of Directors, called the Committee on Conscience, who convened a consultation with members of the original relief of conscience work group, persons who objected to the “capture of dues” concept, and the Office of the General Assembly. This consultative process included regional consultations open to the public in San Francisco, California; Cincinnati, Ohio; Overland Park, Kansas; and Charlotte, North Carolina. Based on this consultation, the Relief of Conscience administrative process was modified to further insulate the dues pool. The Board of Pensions also committed to a review of the modified process after two years.

The final report of this special committee was presented to and approved by the 210th General Assembly (1998), formulating relief of conscience as it is currently administered (Minutes, 1998, Part I, p.38, 544–46).

5. “Decisions shall be reached in councils by vote, following opportunity for discussion and discernment, and a majority shall govern” (Book of Order, F-3.0205).

GAMC COMMENT ON ITEM 20-02

Comment on Item 20-02—From the General Assembly Mission Council.

The General Assembly Mission Council recognizes that abortion is a highly sensitive issue that needs to be approached with prayerful consideration. The General Assembly has acknowledged that within our church there is a wide range of deeply held convictions about the matter. The 204th General Assembly (1992) reflected this diversity of opinion, in its approval of the report of the Special Committee on Problem Pregnancies and Abortion.

Clearly there is both agreement and disagreement in our use and interpretation of Scripture. There is also agreement and disagreement on the basic issue of abortion. The committee agreed that there are no biblical texts that speak expressly to the topic of abortion, but that taken in their totality the Holy Scriptures are filled with messages that advocate respect for the woman and child before and after birth. Therefore the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) encourages an atmosphere of open debate and mutual respect for a variety of opinions concerning the issues related to problem pregnancies and abortion. (Minutes, 1992, Part I, p. 367)

Consequently, as the policies of the General Assembly regarding abortion and related issues have developed, they do not fit neatly into the frequently used forced-choice between “pro-life” and “pro-choice.” The church ought to be able to maintain within its community those who, on the basis of a study of Scripture and prayerful decision, come to diverse conclusions and actions.

The overture asks that The Board of Pensions medical plan “be revised to a more focused scenario—namely, medical emergencies when the life of the mother is at stake.” This is not consistent with General Assembly policy. The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) continues to be guided by the 1992 policy on problem pregnancies and abortion, which encourages the church to continue to approach this challenging issue with the atmosphere of “open debate and mutual respect” for a variety of opinions (Minutes, 1992, Part I, p. 374).

The 1992 policy states,

Problem pregnancies are the result of, and influenced by, so many complicated and insolvable circumstances that we have neither the wisdom nor the authority to address or decide each situation. Christians seek the guidance of Scripture in the midst of relationships and circumstances of awesome proportions that affect their interpretation and decision making.

We affirm the ability and responsibility of women, guided by the Scriptures and the Holy Spirit, in the context of their communities of faith, to make good moral choices in regard to problem pregnancies.

We call upon Presbyterians to work for a decrease in the number of problem pregnancies, thereby decreasing the number of abortions.

The considered decision of a woman to terminate a pregnancy can be a morally acceptable, though certainly not the only, or required, decision. Possible justifying circumstances would include medical indications of severe physical or mental deformity, conception as a result of rape or incest, or conditions under which the physical or mental health of either woman or child would be gravely threatened.

The Christian community must be concerned about and address the circumstances that bring a woman to consider abortion as the best available option. Poverty, unjust societal realities, sexism, racism, and inadequate supportive relationships may render a woman virtually powerless to choose freely (Minutes, 1992, Part I, p. 368)

The General Assembly has been very clear on the issue of abortion legislation, which states, “We do not wish to see laws enacted that would attach criminal penalties to those who seek abortions or to appropriately qualified and licensed persons who perform abortions in medically approved facilities” (Minutes, 1992, Part I, p. 368).

The 217th General Assembly (2006) reiterated the role of the church in individual and families’ lives as they face problem pregnancy issues:

The church has a responsibility to provide public witness and to offer guidance, counsel, and support to those who make or interpret laws and public policies about abortion and problem pregnancies. Pastors have a duty to counsel with and pray for those who face decisions about problem pregnancies. Congregations have a duty to pray for and support those who face these choices, to offer support for women and families to help make unwanted pregnancies less likely to occur, and to provide practical support for those facing the birth of a child with medical anomalies, birth after rape or incest, or those who face health, economic, or other stresses. (Minutes, 2006, Part I, p. 905)

The 217th General Assembly (2006) also approved language that clarified the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) position on problem pregnancies:

When an individual woman faces the decision whether to terminate a pregnancy, the issue is intensely personal, and may manifest itself in ways that do not reflect public rhetoric, or do not fit neatly into medical, legal, or policy guidelines. Humans are empowered by the spirit prayerfully to make significant moral choices, including the choice to continue or end a pregnancy. Human choices should not be made in a moral vacuum, but must be based on Scripture, faith, and Christian ethics. For any choice, we are accountable to God; however, even when we err, God offers to forgive us. (Minutes, 2006, Part I, p. 905)

“In life and death, we belong to God.” Life is a gift from God, and we should preserve and protect it. We derive our understanding of human life from Scripture and the Reformed Tradition in light of science, human experience, and reason guided by the Holy Spirit. Because we are made in the image of God, human beings are moral agents, endowed by the Creator with the capacity to make choices. Our Reformed Tradition recognizes that people do not always make moral choices, and forgiveness is central to our faith. In the Reformed Tradition, we affirm that God is the only Lord of conscience—not the state or the church. As a community, the church challenges the faithful to exercise their moral agency responsibly.

Item 20-03

[The assembly approved Item 20-03 with amendment. See p. 36.]

On Instructing the Board of Pensions to Consider the Possibility of Adding to the Disability Benefits the Option of Partial Disability Benefits—From the Presbytery of San Gabriel.

The Presbytery of San Gabriel humbly overtures the 220th General Assembly (2012) to [instruct] [urge] the Board of Pensions to:

1. investigate and consider the possibility of adding to their Disability Benefits the option of receiving partial benefits for partial disability of plan members, appropriately pro rated for the medically certified degree of disability, [to include human as well as financial costs] and,

2. [that the Board of Pensions] report back to the 221st General Assembly (2014) with [plans for] [its investigation including its recommendations regarding] implementation or the impediments to this scheme being approved.

Rationale

Presbyterians view ordered ministry as a calling to which those ordained to it do so with the intent of an extended period of service. However, some in professional ministry have been afflicted with progressive diseases that, over time, result in increasing levels of disability. This disability may begin as a partial disability and many in this position desire to continue in professional ministry to the extent they are able.

The Board of Pensions Disability Benefits Plan only provides for benefits when “A Plan member is considered disabled if he or she is unable to perform his or her regular work duties (or any other work providing a reasonably comparable income) due to sickness or bodily injury.” This precludes a status and coverage of partial disability with the congregation, or other employer, and the Board of Pensions sharing the support.

It would seem to be a benefit to all involved—the plan member, the congregation, and the Board of Pensions—for a plan member to continue working part-time to the extent that they are able with the congregation, or other employer, and the Board of Pensions sharing the support.

ACSWP ADVICE AND COUNSEL ON ITEM 20-03

Advice and Counsel on Item 20-03—From the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP).

The Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP) advises approval with amendments of Item 20-03. [Text to be deleted is shown with brackets and a strike-through; text to be added is shown with brackets and with an underline.]

“The Presbytery of San Gabriel humbly overtures the 220th General Assembly (2012) to instruct the Board of Pensions to [investigate and consider]

“[1. evaluate] the possibility of adding to their Disability Benefits the option of receiving partial benefits for partial disability of plan members, appropriately pro rated for the medically certified degree of disability, [this evaluation to include human as well as financial costs] and
“[2.] [that the Board of Pensions] report back to the 221st General Assembly (2014) with [plans for] [its evaluation, including its recommendations regarding] implementation or the impediments to this scheme being approved.”

Rationale

The amendments call for a broad evaluation of costs, consistent with both ministry and stewardship concerns, and require that the evaluation be communicated to the 221st General Assembly (2014) with recommendations.

BOP COMMENT ON ITEM 20-03

Comment on Item 20-03—From the Board of Pensions (BOP).

Should the General Assembly wish to approve the overture, the Board of Pensions advises changing the word “instructs” in the first sentence to “urge.” The General Assembly, by creating an independent, incorporated Board of Pensions to be responsible for benefits, vested in that board the responsibility for decisions on matters under its jurisdiction. The General Assembly has control of the Board of Pensions by virtue of the requirements that it elects each director of the Board of Pensions, confirms the election of a new president of the Board of Pensions, and must approve in advance any amendment to the Pension Plan that is in the nature of a benefit reduction to the members.

The General Assembly may also simply refer this item to the Board of Pensions for study and report back to the 221st General Assembly (2014). If the General Assembly refers the matter to the Board of Pensions or approves the overture with the “urge” language, the Board of Pensions’ study would be conducted in the context of the current benefits philosophy and with appropriate consideration of the Board of Pensions’ fiduciary responsibilities. It should also be noted that such a study should not, in and of itself, establish expectations about any eventual ability to offer additional disability benefits.

Background

The Board of Pensions recognizes that degenerative diseases may cause a reduced capacity for members to perform their job duties. The Disability Plan is specifically designed, however, to provide members with a source of income in the event of “total disability,” defined as, the inability of a Member due to sickness or bodily injury to perform substantially all of the material duties of his or her regular work or any other type of work that would afford a reasonably comparable level of income, and after a period of twenty-four (24) consecutive months of such disability, the inability of a Member due to sickness or bodily injury to perform any type of work for which he or she is fitted by education, training or experience…

While the plan has been designed (and funded) to support totally disabled members, there are vocational rehabilitation resources available through Liberty Mutual, the Plan Administrator, for members who may be able to return to full-time employment, often in a position that is different from their previous position but one which they may be able to perform on a full or partial basis, notwithstanding a continuing disability. Therefore, while total disability establishes initial benefit eligibility, permanent disability is not presumed. The Board of Pensions has taken the approach that encouraging a full return to work, where feasible, is in the best interest of the Plan and the member. Under these current terms, members who suffer from progressive diseases may, and do, avail themselves of this income protection at the point in time at which their condition prohibits them from performing their duties. Medical coverage continues for them and their families throughout their disability at no cost to them or to their employing organization.

The funding status of the Disability Plan is actuarially determined on an annual basis, using the cited definition of disability. As financial stewards of this Plan, the Board of Pensions would not be in the position to absorb any portion of a member’s salary expense or related dues obligation for members who had not met the current eligibility standards of total disability. With approximately $2 billion in salaries and benefits paid to Plan members each year and around 3 percent of active members on disabled status, the scope of funding a salary replacement program would be beyond the means of the Benefits Plan.

The Board of Pensions also notes that the Disability Plan is designed as a complement to Social Security Disability benefits. Any “partial disability” benefit expected to stand alone without a corresponding Social Security benefit could prove more costly than the Benefits Plan can accommodate.

Given these constraints, there are three specific areas that the Board of Pensions would investigate during a study, which would be limited to specific degenerative diseases that would ultimately result in total disability:

1. definitions of “partial disability” used by organizations that act as administrators of disability benefits and the administration of those definitions, where available;
2. “partial disability” coverage for specific progressive diseases that might be offered by other denominational plans; and
3. opportunities for offering partial disability coverage as an optional rider to the existing plan.
Item 20-04

[The assembly disapproved Item 20-04 with comment. See pp. 36-37.]

On Instructing the Board of Pensions to Switch Mental Health Providers—From the Presbytery of Central Nebraska.

The Presbytery of Central Nebraska overtures the 220th General Assembly (2012) to instruct the Board of Pensions to switch mental health providers from Cigna to a company that offers more counselors in all geographic areas, including small cities and rural areas.

[Comment: The 220th General Assembly (2012) commends and encourages the Board of Pensions to increase mental health care network providers for all members.]

Rationale

The current mental health provider available through the Board of Pensions, Cigna, is primarily an employee assistance program, not a mental health provider.

Cigna does not provide as many mental health providers as other companies nationwide. The problem is especially worse in smaller towns and cities and rural areas. In one Central Nebraska city of 30,000, Kearney, Cigna has five mental health providers. Blue Cross has ninety-three.

Grand Island, the next large city to Kearney, also has thirteen Cigna providers. After Grand Island, the next options are in Lincoln or Omaha.

This does not just impact clergy in Grand Island or Kearney or other “hub” cities. Clergy in smaller cities and towns almost certainly have to go into the larger cities for counseling. If two hours are spent driving to and then an additional two hours are spent driving back from therapy sessions this causes problems with stress, fatigue, and time management.

Clergy problems with depression, stress, obesity, divorce, and burnout point to a need for better access to mental health providers. These problems are not just problems of the clergy but extend to their dependent families, other church employees, and the congregations being served.

Additional cost for an out-of-network provider is borne by the presbytery or Pension Plan member already. Many presbyteries, including Central Nebraska have paid for Pension members to receive counseling from an out-of-network provider. Cigna may be lower cost, but the problems of hidden costs to presbyteries and pension plan members still exist. Also, the cost of untreated behavioral health issues is incalculable.

This proposed change would allow all Pension Plan members and their dependents better access to mental health professionals no matter where they live.

Concurrence to Item 20-04 from the Presbyteries of Albany and Prospect Hill.

BOP COMMENT ON ITEM 20-04

Comment on Item 20-04—From the Board of Pensions (BOP).

The Board of Pensions (“the Board”) advises that the 220th General Assembly (2012) disapprove Item 20-04.

The General Assembly, by creating an independent, incorporated Board of Pensions to be responsible for benefits, vested in that board the responsibility for decisions on matters under its jurisdiction. It would serve neither the Board of Pensions nor the church to have decisions of the incorporated Board of Pensions subject to appeal to the unincorporated, ecclesiastical General Assembly. The General Assembly has control of the Board of Pensions by virtue of the requirements that it elects each director of the Board of Pensions, confirms the election of a new president of the Board of Pensions, and must approve in advance any amendment to the Pension Plan that is in the nature of a benefit reduction to the members.

This overture addresses vendor selection, an issue operational in nature for the Board of Pensions and beyond the scope of the General Assembly’s control of the Board of Pensions.

The Board of Pensions is committed to attending to the issue raised in the overture. The Board of Pensions has addressed the concern about the number of providers in Central Nebraska with CIGNA and is committed to finding solutions for plan members, including single-case agreements where appropriate.
The Board of Pensions has also reached out to leaders in the Presbytery of Central Nebraska to seek information on specific providers that plan members wish to have included as in-network providers. With that information, the Board of Pensions and CIGNA can seek to have those providers included in CIGNA’s network of providers.

Item 20-05

[The assembly approved Item 20-05 with amendment. See pp. 36, 37.]

The Board of Pensions recommends that the [219th] [220th] General Assembly [(2010)] [(2012)] approve the following amendments to its Articles of Incorporation, which require the prior approval of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) to be effective. [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

“COMMONWEALTH OF PENNSYLVANIA

“AMENDED AND RESTATED ARTICLES OF INCORPORATION

“OF THE BOARD OF PENSIONS OF THE PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH (U.S.A.)

“FIRST: The name of the corporation is ‘The Board of Pensions of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.)’. The registered office of the corporation is 2000 Market Street, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania 19103-3298.

“SECOND: The purposes for which the corporation shall exist are exclusively charitable and shall consist of the following:

“(a) To acquire, receive and hold, directly or in trust, by gift, legacy, devise, purchase or otherwise, money, securities, income and property, real and personal, in whatever form, in any state, territory or country, for and about the general objects and purposes of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), including pensions, benefits and relief for ministers teaching elders (as defined in the Book of Order of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.)), missionaries and non-ordained employees of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) as well as to collect and receive all interest and income therefrom, and to grant, bargain, sell and otherwise dispose of personal properties and real estate when necessary, required or expedient.

“(b) To pay pension and other benefits to those entitled to receive the same in accordance with rules adopted by the corporation and approved by the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.).

“(c) To make grants to such eligible ministers teaching elders, missionaries and non-ordained employees of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) and/or its predecessors, and their surviving spouses and dependents, as may be entitled in accordance with rules adopted by the corporation.

“(d) To own and operate such homes as have been or may be established for the care of such eligible ministers teaching elders and missionaries of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) and/or its predecessors, and their surviving spouses and dependents, and such other persons as may be entitled in accordance with rules adopted by the corporation.

“(e) To engage in and conduct such business as may be authorized by the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) and which is permitted under the Pennsylvania Nonprofit Corporation Law.

“The purposes for which the corporation exists identified in paragraphs (a) through (e) may not be altered, amended or repealed without the prior approval of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.).

“THIRD: The purposes for which the corporation shall exist are exclusively charitable within the meaning of Section 501(c)(3) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986, or the corresponding provisions of any future United States Internal Revenue Law (the ‘Code’). Notwithstanding any other provision of these articles, the corporation shall not carry on any activities not permitted to be carried on (a) by a corporation exempt from Federal income tax under Section 501(a) of the Code as an organization described in Section 501(c)(3) of the Code, or (b) by a corporation contributions to which are deductible under Section 170(a) of the Code as being to an organization referred to in Section 170(c)(2) of the Code.

“No part of the net earnings of the corporation shall inure to the benefit of, or be distributable to, its directors, officers or other private persons, except that the corporation shall be authorized and empowered to pay reasonable compensation for services rendered and to make payments and distributions in furtherance of its exempt purposes. Except as otherwise provided by Section 501(h) of the Code, no substantial part of the activities of the corporation shall consist of carrying on propaganda, or otherwise attempting, to influence legislation. The corporation shall not participate in, or intervene in (including the publishing or distributing of statements), any political campaign on behalf of (or in opposition to) any candidate for public office.

“Upon the dissolution of the corporation, the Board of Directors shall, after paying or making provisions for the payment of all of the liabilities of the corporation, dispose of all the assets of the corporation exclusively for the purposes specified herein and in such a manner to such organization or organizations organized and operated exclusively for charitable purposes which at the time qualify as an exempt organization or organizations under Section 501(c)(3) of the Code, as the Board of Directors shall determine. Any assets not so distributed by the Board of Directors shall be distributed by the Court of Common Pleas of the county in which the corporation’s principal office is then located exclusively for the corporation’s exempt purposes. The use of any surplus funds for private inurement to any person in the event of a sale of the assets or dissolution of the corporation is expressly prohibited.

“FOURTH: The term for which the corporation shall exist is perpetual.

“FIFTH: The corporation does not contemplate pecuniary gain or profit, incidental or otherwise.

“SIXTH: The corporation is organized on a nonstock, non-member basis.

“SEVENTH: The management and control of the corporation shall be vested in a Board of Directors and the corporation shall have no members. The number of directors and their term of service shall be fixed from time to time by the bylaws of the corporation. All directors shall be elected by the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), and shall be citizens of the United States of America, over twenty-one (21) years of age and members of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). At least a majority of the Board of Directors shall be from the laity. The requirement that all directors be elected by the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) may not be altered, amended or repealed without the prior approval of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.).

“EIGHTH: The assets of all funds administered by any predecessor or merging corporation shall continue to be administered by the Board of Directors of this corporation in such equitable manner as to assure adherence to the purposes for which such funds were set aside and to fulfill all liabilities and obligations of any such predecessor or merging corporation.

“NINTH: The assets of all pension funds administered by the corporation shall be administered solely and exclusively in the interest of the beneficiaries of the pension fund.

“TENTH: Subject to the limitations set forth herein these Articles may be amended at any regular or special meeting of the Board of Directors provided written notice that the proposed amendment would be presented for action shall have been given in writing to each Director at least fifteen days before the meeting. The Board of Directors shall not have the power to amend these Articles so as to change the provisions in subparagraphs (a) through (e) of Article Second or Article Seventh without prior approval of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). Any amendment to the Articles adopted by the Board of Directors shall be reported to the next General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.).”

Rationale

At its meeting on March 3, 2012, the Articles of Incorporation of the Board of Pensions were amended to state that any amendment to subparagraphs (a) through (e) of Article Second or Article Seventh of the Articles requires the prior approval of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) to be effective. These amendments authorize the Board of Directors to undertake activities in service to the PC(USA) in addition to those required by the General Assembly and conform the document to the new Form of Government. The Board of Pensions respectfully requests the General Assembly’s approval of this amendment in order that it may take advantage of any synergistic collaborations among the national agencies or mid councils that might arise in the future.

Item 20-06

[The assembly approved Item 20-06 with comment. See pp. 36, 37.]

The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) Foundation recommends that the 220th General Assembly (2012) direct the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) Foundation to

1. continue its churchwide gifts program, as well as utilize the Foundation’s subsidiary, New Covenant Trust Company, N.A., for the benefit of churches, church organizations, and individuals who wish to use the foregoing to make gifts as an expression of Christian faith and stewardship;

2. explore and initiate ways to enhance its expertise and capacity in support of planned and deferred giving (including wills emphasis) and to explore the services of New Covenant Trust Company, N.A., that will allow these programs and entities to be ever more effective contributors toward the fulfillment of the Great Commission for the Glory of God.

[Comment: We urge the 220th General Assembly (2012) to affirm the work of the Presbyterian Foundation and encourage all Presbyterians to seriously consider the Presbyterian Foundation for investment services, financial advice, endowments, and assistance in growing a culture of generosity within the church; the Presbyterian Foundation reinvests its fees to further the mission of the church and follows investment strategies that accord with our values. We request that the General Assembly allow time to view the video God’s Hidden Treasures.

Rationale

Each year, the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) Foundation trustees ask the General Assembly to endorse the Foundation’s work in support of mission and ministry throughout the church. This unbroken series of affirmations allows the Foundation to confidently pursue its ministry among congregations, presbyteries, synods, related organizations, and individual Presbyterians. General Assembly validation of our vital work on behalf of mission and ministry is essential to our effectiveness throughout the church.

The amount of $65.9 million was made available through the Foundation for mission in 2011. Additionally, as a ministry of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), the Foundation’s efforts to nurture the accumulated resources of Presbyterians to further the mission of the church, call us to grow the resources that support mission giving for the future. New gifts and accounts amounting to almost $21.1 million were received over the course of the year.

These striking results are a testament to the power of giving witnessed by the Foundation as it lives its goal of bringing people and mission together. Because of the generosity of faithful Presbyterians, over the past five years the Foundation has made available more than $368 million for the work and mission of the church.

[The assembly approved Item 20-07 with amendment. See pp. 36, 37.]

The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) Foundation, New Covenant Trust Company, recommends that the General Assembly (2012) confirm the following individuals as directors of New Covenant Trust Company, N.A., that have been elected for the year 2012, consistent with the Deliverance for New Covenant Trust Company, N.A., as approved by the 211th General Assembly (1999) and amended by the 212th and 214th General Assemblies (2000) and (2002), and subject to applicable law:

* Foundation Trustee: Lois A. Clarke (investment professional, white, female, married, lay, over 50) Synod of the Mid-Atlantic.

* Former Foundation Trustees: Timothy P. Clark (senior bank officer, white, male, married, lay, over 50) Synod of Living Waters; Sharon Z. Fesler (retired trust officer, white, female, married, lay, over 50) Synod of Lincoln Trails.

* OGA Designee: Christopher Y. Nicholas (OGA staff, Asian, male, married, lay, over 50) Synod of Living Waters.

* GAMC Designee: Donald S. Hunt (retired bank executive, white, male, married, lay, over 50) Synod of Lincoln Trails.

Rationale

In response to changing needs, including a new business plan and reduced budget, in December 2011 the Foundation, as the majority shareholder of NCTC, reduced the size of NCTC’s board of directors and elected a new slate of directors. New Covenant Trust Company seeks confirmation of the following individuals:

Item 20-08

[The assembly approved Item 20-08. See pp. 36, 37.]

The Board of Directors of the Presbyterian Publishing Corporation recommends that the 220th General Assembly (2012) confirm the reelection of Marc Lewis to a second, four-year term as president and publisher of Presbyterian Publishing Corporation.

Rationale

The Board of Directors of the Presbyterian Publishing Corporation has reelected Marc Lewis following a review of the recent self-study and review conversations with board members, staff, and other PC(USA) colleagues.
Item 20-09

[The assembly approved Item 20-09. See pp. 36, 37.]

The Presbyterian Publishing Corporation, Office of Theology, Worship and Education, and Presbyterian Association of Musicians herewith present the final selection of hymns, songs, and liturgical material to the 220th General Assembly (2012) and recommends that the 220th General Assembly (2012) do the following:

1. Commend Glory to God: The Presbyterian Hymnal to the churches for their use in worship.

2. As part of the report of PPC’s General Assembly committee, allocate ten minutes to recognize the Presbyterian Committee on Congregational Song and to express thanks for their work.

Rationale

The 216th General Assembly (2004) of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) gave authorization to the Presbyterian Publishing Corporation (PPC) to research the feasibility of a new Presbyterian hymnal, in cooperation with the denomination’s Office of Theology, Worship, and Education (TAW) and the Presbyterian Association of Musicians (PAM). The results of this study were reported to the 217th General Assembly (2006), which authorized PPC to prepare a new denominational hymnal, the first since 1990, in cooperation with TAW and PAM.

The recommendation (Minutes, 2006, Part I, pp. 1142–43, Item13-11) included the following points:

- PPC, TAW, and PAM would jointly assemble a committee to choose the contents of the new hymnal;
- the hymnal committee would have two people who were under the age of twenty-five at the start of the project;
- PPC would bear all expenses for the project, without using any mission funds of the PC(USA);
- the committee would exhibit “sensitivity to the need for inclusive language, the diversity of worship styles regnant in the church today, the richness of multicultural and global forms of worship, the enduring value of traditional hymnody, the importance of the Psalter, and the distinctiveness of the Reformed theological tradition”; (Minutes, 2006, Part I, p. 1142)
- PPC would give serious attention to including liturgical material in the book “in order to enhance its utility in a variety of worship contexts”; (Minutes, 2006, Part I, p. 1142)
- PPC would “explore publication of the new hymnal in a variety of media as befits the worship practices of the church at the time of publication, with developing an e-hymnal being the top priority”; (Minutes, 2006, Part I, p. 1143)
- PPC will “report its progress in the development of the new hymnal to the 218th and 219th General Assemblies (2008 and 2010) and present the final selection of hymns and liturgical material to the 220th GA (2012).” (Minutes, 2006, Part I, p. 1143)

A separate overture from the Presbytery of Miami (2006, 13 -10) requested that PPC, TAW, and PAM develop an “internet-based denominational resource for congregational singing” as part of the hymnal project. This overture was approved by the Assembly. (Minutes, 2006, Part I, pp. 1141)

The PPC, TAW, and PAM are pleased to report that they have fulfilled each of these recommendations.

The hymnal committee, renamed the Presbyterian Committee on Congregational Song (PCOCS) to signal the diversity of music they wanted to include in the book, was appointed in 2008 following a nationally advertised search for nominees. The committee consists of fifteen voting members (two of whom were under the age of twenty-five when the project began), the hymnal editor, and three ex officio members appointed by TAW (David Gambrell), PPC (David Maxwell), and PAM (Alan Barthel). The committee members all volunteered their time and gave countless hours to the work. Biographies of the committee members are attached.

Under the leadership of hymnal editor David Eicher and committee chair Mary Louise Bringle, the PCOCS met on fifteen occasions from September 2008 to January 2012. During this time they reviewed material from an open submission process (3,678 items) and material from various subgroups working within the PCOCS structure (Other Hymnals, Global, Contemporary, and Single Author/Composer Collections); wrote a Statement on Language (attached); consulted with staff from the World Mission and Racial Ethnic and Women’s Ministries divisions of the General Assembly Mission Council; met with representatives of Presbyterians for Disability Concerns; held Skype consultations with leaders in the fields of global and contemporary congregational song; conducted research into the usage of hymns and songs in the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.); developed a plan of organization for the hymnal; and discussed various electronic options.

All material considered for inclusion in Glory to God: The Presbyterian Hymnal was reviewed anonymously. Author, composer, arranger, and copyright holder information was removed before the committee members saw the material. A two-thirds majority vote was required in order for a selection to be placed on the Approved to Carry Forward list. Each item was read carefully, sung, and discussed before a vote was taken.

The committee also prepared a theological statement that was used to guide their work. The entire statement is attached, but this excerpt gives insight into their perspective: “The overarching theme of the collection will be God’s powerful acts of creation, redemption, and final transformation. It will also bespeak the human responses that God’s gracious acts make possible. In other words, the framework for this collection of congregational song will be the history of salvation.”

The PCOCS concluded their service with a worship celebration in the chapel of the Presbyterian Center on January 11, 2012.

The Presbyterian Publishing Corporation is assuming all costs for the development and production of the hymnal, including the expenses of the PCOCS. No money is being spent on the project from the denomination’s budget.

The hymnal is now in production, and will be published in the fall of 2013. In addition to the pew edition, churches will be able to purchase an accompaniment edition, enlarged print edition, gift edition, web-based electronic edition, projection edition, e-Book edition, and a hymnal companion. Print and digital versions of the hymnal will also be produced for people with visual impairments.

All of this is done to the Glory of God. Soli Deo Gloria.

Attachment B: Members of the Presbyterian Committee on Congregational Song

Mary Louise (Mel) Bringle, Chair

Mel is professor of philosophy and religious studies and chair of the Humanities Division at Brevard College in Brevard, North Carolina. She received her PhD from the Graduate Division of Religion at Emory University, with particular interest in practical and pastoral theology. She has served as a consultant for the Office of Health Ministries of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). Recognized in 2002 as an “emerging hymn text writer of the U.S. and Canada,” she has won many international competitions for hymn texts, and is the author of two single-author collections. Her texts are included in hymnals and supplements of numerous denominations and her translations from the Spanish figure in a bilingual hymnal under production by GIA. She currently serves as president of The Hymn Society in the U.S. and Canada, and is a member of Trinity Presbyterian Church in Hendersonville, North Carolina.

Chi Yi Chen

Chi Yi is choral associate at Princeton Theological Seminary. Born in T’ai-nan, Taiwan, into a Taiwanese Presbyterian pastor’s family, Chi Yi earned a degree from T’ai-nan Theological Seminary and College and a Masters in Choral Conducting from Westminster Choir College, Princeton, New Jersey. Her undergraduate studies with Dr. I-To Loh led to her interest in global church music and liturgy, and Asian hymnody. She has traveled throughout Europe, Asia, and the United States to various conferences and churches, and has been a workshop clinician at the Kodaly Choral Institute. Chi Yi is a member of the Taiwanese/American Fellowship Presbyterian Church in New Brunswick, New Jersey.

Adam Copeland

Adam J. Copeland is a Presbyterian minister, writer, and blogger. He serves as mission developer for The Project F-M, an emerging faith community in the Fargo-Moorhead metro area. Previously, he was pastor of First Presbyterian Church in Hallock, Minnesota. A graduate of Columbia Theological Seminary, Adam’s interests include ministry, social media, young adult culture, and technology. He twice received the Emma Gaillard Boyce Memorial Award for the best paper on music and worship. As an undergraduate, Adam attended St. Olaf College where he sang with the St. Olaf Cantorei and St. Olaf Choir. Adam blogs at A Wee Blether, (http://adamjcopeland.com) and lives in Moorhead, Minn. with his partner Megan Thorvilson.

Alfred V. Fedak

Al is minister of music and arts at Westminster Presbyterian Church on Capitol Hill in Albany, New York. He holds degrees in organ performance and music history from Hope College and Montclair State University, and has done additional study at Westminster Choir College, Eastman School of Music, and in Austria and England. A Fellow of the American Guild of Organists, he also holds the guild’s Choirmaster Certificate. A widely published and well-known composer of church music, he has more than 150 choral and organ works in print, and his many hymn tunes appear in hymnals and collections throughout the English-speaking world and Asia.

Stephen H. Fey

Steve serves as codirector of music ministries at First Presbyterian Church of Bristol, Tennessee. He is a native of Arkansas and received degrees from Washington University in St. Louis, Missouri, and from the University of North Texas. A member of The Hymn Society in the United States and Canada, Steve teaches church music courses as an adjunct faculty member of King College, Bristol. He is dean of the Northeast Tennessee/Southwest Virginia Chapter of the American Guild of Organists and serves on the editorial committee for A Magazine for the Arts, a monthly regional arts journal. Steve served on the 2000 Presbyterian Association of Musicians (PAM) Western Conference planning team and co-directed with his wife, Vicki, the 2002 PAM Westminster Conference.

Charles D. Frost

Charlie is minister of music at Sea Island Presbyterian Church in Beaufort, South Carolina. A native of Red Bank, New Jersey, he holds degrees from Westminster Choir College, Princeton, New Jersey. Prior to his work at Sea Island, he served churches in New Jersey, New York, California, Washington, and Michigan. He serves on the executive committee of the Lowcountry Chapter of the American Guild of Organists, board of directors of the Beaufort Orchestra, and is keyboardist for the Beaufort Orchestra. Charlie is a member of the Presbyterian Association of Musicians and The Hymn Society in the U.S. and Canada.

Karen Hastings-Flegel

Karen is organist and director of music ministry at Good Shepherd Lutheran Church in Concord, California. She holds a doctor of musical arts degree in organ performance from Stanford University, and is currently attending seminary at Pacific School of Religion in Berkeley, where she is working toward a master of divinity and an MA in biblical languages. Karen is a member of Covenant Presbyterian Church in Palo Alto, California, and is under care of their session as an inquirer.

Beverly Howard

Beverly is professor of music at California Baptist University in Riverside, California, where she teaches music and worship, music theory, and organ. Since 1988, she has also served as organist at Calvary Presbyterian Church in Riverside. She holds degrees from the University of Oklahoma and the University of North Texas. In December 2008, she will complete a six-year term as Editor of THE HYMN: A Journal of Congregational Song, the journal of The Hymn Society in the U.S. and Canada.

Paul Junggap Huh

Paul is assistant professor of worship and director of Korean American Ministries at Columbia Theological Seminary, Decatur, Georgia. He has taught at Yonsei University in Korea and served Euro American and Korean American churches in the United States. For six years he was the pastor of Bethany Presbyterian Church in Bloomfield, New Jersey. He was the editor of Come, Let Us Worship: The Korean-English Presbyterian Hymnal and Service Book (Geneva Press, 2001), and is a frequent keynote speaker, preacher, and conference leader.

Mary Beth Jones

Mary Beth is director of music ministries at Northminster Presbyterian Church in Troy, Michigan, where she has led in collaborative efforts with the Troy Interfaith Group as a witness to the multicultural community. She holds a degree in church music from DePauw University in Greencastle, Indiana. A member of the Presbyterian Association of Musicians Executive Board from 1999–2004, she directed the 2004 PAM Westminster Conference on Worship and Music.

Eric T. Myers

Eric serves as pastor of Frederick Presbyterian Church in Frederick, Maryland. Before ordination, he served as director of music and organist at churches in South Carolina and Virginia. He holds degrees from Shenandoah College and Conservatory of Music, Columbia Theological Seminary, University of Notre Dame, and a PhD from Garrett-Evangelical Theological Seminary; he has served as adjunct faculty at Garrett-Evangelical Seminary and Wesley Theological Seminary in Washington, D.C.

Chelsea Roeder Stern

Chelsea Stern is director of music at Greenland Hills United Methodist Church in Dallas, Texas. She is a licensed Kindermusik educator and teaches for Kindermusik by SoundSteps in Dallas. She has served as music intern at Highland Park United Methodist Church in Dallas and at Calvary Baptist Church in Waco, Texas. Chelsea has also served as director of children’s ministry and children’s choir director at First Presbyterian Church, Temple, Texas. She holds the master of sacred music degree from Perkins School of Theology, the master of music in vocal performance from Meadows School of the Arts at Southern Methodist University, and the bachelor of music degree in church music from Baylor University.

Edwin Chr. van Driel

Edwin is assistant professor of theology at Pittsburgh Theological Seminary. A native of the Netherlands, he received degrees from Utrecht University and Yale University. He has one book published and is currently working on another project. Edwin is a contributor to several volumes of “Feasting on the Word,” the lectionary commentary series published by Westminster John Knox Press. His home congregation is Valley Presbyterian Church in Brookfield, Connecticut.

Michael Waschewski

Michael is associate pastor of First Presbyterian Church of Fort Worth, Texas. He holds a degree in music from Luther College in Decorah, Iowa, and degrees in theology and ministry from Brite Divinity School and Austin Presbyterian Theological Seminary. A member of Grace Presbyter’s Committee on Preparation for Ministry, he is also a member of the Educator Certification Council of the General Assembly. He is an associate member of the Iona community where he participates in the worship life of the abbey for several days each year.

Barbara G. Wheeler

Barbara is director of the Center for the Study of Theological Education at Auburn Seminary in New York City, and for thirty years was president of Auburn. She was a founding member of the board of the Presbyterian Publishing Corporation and a member of the Theological Task Force on the Peace, Unity, and Purity of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). A graduate of Barnard College, she is a published author and frequent speaker on the future of religion in North America, the public role of religion, and resources for healing religious divisions and conflicts. A member of Peniel Presbyterian Church in Granville, New York, she serves as its elder commissioner to the Presbytery of Albany.

Attachment C: Theological Vision Statement

Collections of psalms, hymns, and spiritual songs give voice to the church’s core beliefs and theological convictions. Their texts are “compact theology,” and the selection of hymns and songs (both the themes that are emphasized and those that are overlooked), the order in which they are presented, and even the ways they are indexed shape the theological thinking and ultimately the faith and practices of the church.

Previous hymnals have responded to the needs of the church and the world by highlighting the rhythms of the church year, the centrality of the Psalms in the prayer and praise of Reformed churches, the corporate witness of the church to the world, the seeking of God’s peace and God’s justice, and the rich musical and poetic resources of world Christianity. All these motifs remain important and should be retained, in one way or another, in this collection.

The next Presbyterian collection of hymns and songs, however, will be published amid different conditions than those that molded previous ones. It will be offered in a world in which trust in human progress has been undermined and eclectic spiritualities often fail to satisfy deep spiritual hungers. It will be used by a church many of whose members have not had life-long formation by Scripture and basic Christian doctrine, much less Reformed theology. It is meant for a church marked by growing diversity in liturgical practice. Moreover, it addresses a church divided by conflicts but nonetheless, we believe, longing for healing and the peace that is beyond understanding.

To inspire and embolden a church facing these formidable challenges, the overarching theme of the collection will be God’s powerful acts of creation, redemption, and final transformation. It will also bespeak the human responses that God’s gracious acts make possible. In other words, the framework for this collection of congregational song will be the history of salvation.

This theme of salvation history answers the needs of the church and the world in the following ways:

- The priority placed on God’s acts offers hope to those whose faith in human efforts has been undermined.
- A focus on salvation history reminds a church and world riddled with anxiety, frustration, and conflict that love has come to earth and that the risen and ascended Christ is alive and active.
- The emphasis on God’s provision for us invites our grateful response. It makes a place for expressions of corporate commitment (a special emphasis of the previous hymnal) as well as personal devotion.
- The framework of salvation history is widely inclusive. It has places for existing hymns and invites the writing of new words and music to supply major omissions. It makes room for the whole of the biblical witness, not only psalms and the Gospels that are well reflected in hymn texts, but also the segments of the Scriptures that are not. It incorporates the events of the Christian year, the sacraments, and the mission of the church throughout the world as Christ’s living body.
- As such, this framework both encompasses and enriches the liturgical practices that exist in the church. It includes the christological rhythm of the liturgical year, from Advent to Christ the King, but also places the liturgical year in the wider framework of God’s covenantal acts in creation and towards Israel. It challenges all users, whatever liturgical patterns they use, to shape their worship by the full extent of the biblical narrative.
The framework of the history of salvation offers a theological rationale for asking us to learn songs that come from cultures different than our own: Pentecost teaches us to speak and hear the gospel in many tongues and languages and only thus, “with all the saints,” to comprehend the breadth and length and height and depth of the love of Christ (Eph. 3:18). We do not sing hymns and songs because they were birthed in our culture; we sing them because they teach us something about the richness that is in God.

Likewise, the notion of salvation history invites us to bridge the divide between different musical styles and traditions. As scribes who have been trained for God’s reign will bring out of their treasures “what is new and what is old” (Mt. 13:52), so musicians are invited to lead us in songs both old and new, in praise of a God who is the first and the last, the ancient of everlasting days and the Lord of the new creation.

Endnote for Attachment C

1. "Compact theology" is a phrase used by the late David Allan Hubbard, biblical scholar and president of Fuller Seminary, to describe hymn texts.

Attachment D: A Statement on Language

Language is close to the heart of Christian faith. As befits a faith community called into being by a God we know as the Word made flesh, we pray, proclaim, teach, comfort, admonish, serve and administer justice with words woven in and through all our actions. Language used in worship has great power. Therefore the language used in collections of psalms, hymns, and spiritual songs matters a great deal. Worshipful words joined to worshipful music deeply shape the faith and practices of the church.

The church has been enriched by several decades of conversations about language used for God and for the people of God. Christians in denominations like the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) have become aware that our language can exclude and stereotype, but also that carefully chosen language can embrace and include people who have been separated from the centers of power. A commitment to inclusive language for the people of God reflects the consensus of the church. When it comes to use of language for God, however, the conversation is still ongoing. While many are deeply nurtured and comforted by traditional imagery for God, many others are concerned about associations of patriarchy and other forms of domination and are looking for other and more diverse language.

In negotiating these different convictions, the Presbyterian Committee on Congregational Song is guided by the theological framework of this new collection of songs: salvation history. Scripture uses an abundantly rich array of prose and poetry to tell us about God’s powerful acts of creation, redemption, and final transformation. Much biblical imagery is indeed masculine, but there is also a wide variety of other metaphors that are either feminine or gender-neutral. Most important, behind all biblical narrative lies the deep and prevailing sense that God is the one whose ways and thoughts are as beyond human speech as the heaven is higher than the earth (Isa. 55:8). Our lips need to be cleansed by a burning coal before we speak or sing any word about the holy God (Isa. 6:5).

The framework of salvation history requires a collection of songs that reflects the full extent of the biblical narrative and also the full array of biblical language used for God—even if that leads us to using words and imagery that go beyond our natural comfort.

Given these commitments, the Committee seeks a songbook that is characterized, as a church document formulates it, by “inclusive language with reference to the people of God, and expansive language with reference to God.” Thus the committee uses the following guidelines:

Language used for the people of God

- Language that stereotypes persons according to categories such as gender, race, ethnicity, socio-economic class, sexual orientation, age, or disabilities will be avoided.
- The “generic masculine” is no longer generally understood to include persons of both genders and will therefore be avoided. Texts that employ the generic masculine will be evaluated individually to determine what alterations, if any, are poetically appropriate.
- Salvation history invites us to sing joyfully of the creative and healing presence of our God. We will be sensitive, however, to potentially denigrating implications of poetic metaphors in our songs, especially with respect to persons of color or with disabilities.

Language used for God

- The collection will draw from the full reservoir of biblical imagery for God and God’s gracious acts. The final product will include both metaphors that are comfortable in their familiarity and those that are enriching in their newness.
- The collection will emphasize that the God who meets us so graciously and intimately in salvation history is at the same time one who is wholly other and beyond gender. Therefore, texts will reflect a strong preference for avoiding the use of male pronouns for God. In evaluating each hymn or song, issues of tradition, theological integrity, poetic quality, and copyright will all be considered. The goal is a collection in which traditional hymns and songs are balanced with others that are more gender-neutral or expansive in their reference to God.
- Two references to God should be preserved in the collection:

1. "Compact theology" is a phrase used by the late David Allan Hubbard, biblical scholar and president of Fuller Seminary, to describe hymn texts.

Language used for God

- The collection will draw from the full reservoir of biblical imagery for God and God’s gracious acts. The final product will include both metaphors that are comfortable in their familiarity and those that are enriching in their newness.
- The collection will emphasize that the God who meets us so graciously and intimately in salvation history is at the same time one who is wholly other and beyond gender. Therefore, texts will reflect a strong preference for avoiding the use of male pronouns for God. In evaluating each hymn or song, issues of tradition, theological integrity, poetic quality, and copyright will all be considered. The goal is a collection in which traditional hymns and songs are balanced with others that are more gender-neutral or expansive in their reference to God.
- Two references to God should be preserved in the collection:
(1) In the biblical narrative both the God of Israel and Christ are called “Lord.” The practice of calling God “Lord” goes back to Greek-speaking Jews who sought to avoid pronouncing God’s holy name, YHWH, by using a replacement term: Lord (kurios). The practice has since been followed by virtually all Christian Bible translations. Rather than being an expression of domination or masculinity, “Lord” stands in for the name by which God chose to disclose Godself in Hebrew Scripture (Exod. 3:15).

That “Jesus Christ is Lord (kurios)” is one of the oldest confessions concerning Jesus. It has both a Roman and a Jewish background. On the one hand, “Lord” (kurios) was the title of the Roman emperor. When the writers of the New Testament confess Jesus to be Lord, they thereby proclaim that not Caesar, but Christ rules this world. On the other hand, in applying the reference to the name of Israel’s God to Jesus, the New Testament makes a startling identity statement: that in Jesus this very God has become present among us.

Were we no longer to use “Lord” for Israel’s God, we would no longer understand what we claim about Jesus’ identity when we confess him Lord. Were we no longer to use “Lord” for Jesus, we would lose the strongest defense we have against empire: that Christ is Lord, and not Caesar.

(2) The church confesses a Trinitarian God: one God, in Father, Son, and Holy Spirit. This is the formula by which we are baptized; this is the name that unites us with each other and with all Christian communities beyond our denomination (Mt. 28:19). This threefold name will not be eliminated. At the same time, many other images and metaphors for the Trinity will be welcomed, as long as they express the principles of Trinitarian theology:

• God exists in three persons, but there is nevertheless only one God who knows and loves and acts;
• In salvation history, no person of the Trinity acts alone; every act is an act of all three persons in the one God;
• Each person of the Trinity is not a part of God, but fully God.

General Assembly Committee on Review of the Presbyterian Publishing Corporation (PPC)

The General Assembly Committee on Review of the Presbyterian Publishing Corporation (PPC) recommends that the 220th General Assembly (2012) direct the PPC to do the following:

1. Consider hiring personnel to relate to mid councils, being conscious of the importance of diversity in the hiring of staff.

2. Be aware of the General Assembly mandate for cultural proficiency, especially in the hiring of senior staff.

3. Continue and increase the publication of material that provides a platform for new voices, material that is important to the life of the church, and material that represents the diversity of the church, realizing, as they have stated in their self-study, that “some books, in fact, are accepted with PPC’s full expectation of break-even sales or, in a few cases, even [losses].”

4. Initiate and continue collaboration with Congregational Ministries Publishing (CMP) on the development of cultural and linguistic resources that will develop discipleship and leadership for the whole church.

5. Continue and enhance the collaboration with all of the agencies of the General Assembly Mission Council (GAMC) in order to produce material that fulfills the mission of each of the agencies.

6. Continue to explore and develop ways to utilize current and emerging online and digital technologies, both as a delivery system and as a resource to the whole church.

7. Work with other agencies of the church to consolidate and leverage their marketing efforts, including electronic publishing, to facilitate a better understanding of and access to the resources available through the PC(USA).
8. Undertake a comprehensive and collaborative review by all agencies involved in publishing to determine if there is duplication of services and resources that does not serve the mission of the church as effectively as possible, and that PPC initiate such a review.

[Comment: That the General Assembly pay attention specifically to Recommendation 8.]

Rationale

The General Assembly Committee on Review echoes the applause of the former review committee and shares its appreciation for the way in which PPC is weathering the economic and political climate of the last few years and preparing for even greater challenges in the coming years. We believe PPC has demonstrate fidelity to the church’s mission, has provided an invaluable service to the Reformed family, and has become a recognized leader in the religious publishing community.

I. Introduction

The General Assembly Committee on Review is pleased to present to the 220th General Assembly (2012) a written review of the Presbyterian Publishing Corporation (PPC). This review is the result of the decision of the 213th General Assembly (2001) of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) that established a new evaluation process of General Assembly (GA) agencies.

The purpose of the review process is “to evaluate the relationship of their individual [agency] ministry with the mission of the whole Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.)” (Minutes, 2001, Part I, p. 67, addition of Standing Rule E.10. Agency Review). The instructions to the General Assembly Committee on Review were that the committee must conduct the process according to predetermined standards and present a written report to the next General Assembly (Manual of the General Assembly, pp. 71–72). The first review of the PPC was conducted in 2002–2003 with the results being presented to the 215th General Assembly (2003). This is the second review of the agency.

The review process is founded on the principle that an agency of the General Assembly shall participate in a self-study review process with a General Assembly Committee on Review elected by the General Assembly. The General Assembly Committee on Review, likewise, shall participate with the agency in a study process the scope of which is limited to helping the assembly and its agency see that the mission of the church is being fulfilled according to certain standards. (See Manual of the General Assembly, pp. 71–72.) It is not the intent of the review process to find fault, but rather to evaluate and offer suggestions for improvement.

It is important to note that the scope of the review is also limited by the amount of time and resources allocated for the review process. Initially, the General Assembly Committee on Review spent two days together to train for the task and to prepare a survey to send out to various constituencies of the PPC. Subsequently, the committee engaged in two conference calls with the full committee, several conference calls with individual subgroups, and came back together for three days to conduct on-site interviews with agency leaders and appropriate General Assembly staff and elected leaders. At the on-site visit, the committee presented the initial report to the PPC for response, as outlined in the Agency Review Manual. After the final revisions were made, the committee submitted the report to the Office of the General Assembly (OGA) for presentation at the next General Assembly.

The following report is the result of the work of the OGA in developing an “Agency Review Manual,” the published Self-Study of the PPC, the data collected by the Research Services Office of the PC(USA), and the work of the elected General Assembly Committee on Review for PPC. The elected committee brought skills from all facets of church and society. Members were well versed in matters relating to the publishing industry, the business community, and the PC(USA) theology, polity, and ethos.

The committee based the report on the self-study published by PPC; interviews with the President and Publisher Marc Lewis, members of the board of directors, PPC staff, General Assembly Council Executive Director Linda Valentine, Stated Clerk Gradye Parsons, and others identified by the committee; and the results from a survey conducted by Research Services Office. The General Assembly Committee on Review organized itself around three focus groups: Program Effectiveness, Policies and Practice, and Church Relatedness. The committee also structured the report around these three areas.

In the initial evaluation of the PPC in 2003, the review committee offered six specific recommendations that were approved by the 215th General Assembly (2003). This report will also address the effectiveness of the PPC in addressing those recommendations.

Those recommendations of the 2003 review committee were:

1. That PPC work to improve its presence on the worldwide web.
2. That the curriculum publishing change, the additional trade name, and the original trade name that is now used without the slash (“/”) should be noted in appropriate attachments or amendments to the deliverance, the Organization for Mission of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), and PPC’s Articles of Incorporation and Bylaws.

3. That the PPC mission statement be revised by the board of directors and management to produce a more succinct statement that will better communicate the unique nature of PPC.

4. That the board of directors and management work together to develop a long-range plan (for three to five years). The long-range plan should include a business plan outlining a market and competitive analysis as well as a marketing plan. This long-range plan, and resultant major decisions, should be reviewed with and approved by the board prior to implementation.

5. That, in order to ensure a broader representation from the church, that the PPC do the following as soon as financially feasible:
   a. Revise the membership of the board of directors by naming the president and publisher of PPC, and the Executive Director of the General Assembly Council and the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly or their designee, as ex-officio members without vote.
   b. Maintain the required number of nine voting members by electing two additional members in 2004, and distributing those nine members among equal classes.
   c. Authorize up to twelve voting members when PPC resources permit.
   d. Add congregational pastoral experience to the categories of expertise needed by one or more members of the board of directors.

6. That PPC continue to strengthen its marketing efforts to congregations, lay leaders, and seminarians.

The General Assembly Committee on Review expresses appreciation to President and Publisher Marc Lewis, the PPC’s board of directors, the staff of PPC, and the Office of the General Assembly and the General Assembly Mission Council for their helpfulness and willing cooperation in completing this review. Their self-study stands as a model for all other agencies.

In accordance with Standing Rule E.10., the following persons were elected by commissioners of the 219th General Assembly (2010) to serve as the General Assembly Committee on Review: Mary Gene Boteler, moderator (Presbytery of Giddings-Lovejoy); Jose Luis Casal (Presbytery of Tres Rios); Melva Wilson Costen (Presbytery of Greater Atlanta); Karen E. Dimon (Presbytery of Cayuga-Syracuse); Ernest E. Ettlich (Presbytery of Cascades); Carolyn Heyward (Presbytery of Charleston); David Hintz (Presbytery of Heartland); Rodger Y. Nishioka (Presbytery of Greater Atlanta); David Olson (Presbytery of South Dakota); Marvin L. Roloff (Evangelical Lutheran Church in America); Allison Seed (Presbytery of Heartland).

As we began our work, Karen E. Dimon resigned from the review committee because she was named to the Commission on Middle Governing Bodies and Ernest Ettlich resigned for health reasons.

II. Policies and Program Effectiveness

The General Assembly Committee on Review (committee) examined the PPC execution of its mandate from General Assembly. In addition, the committee devoted effort to understanding how PPC is addressing the dramatic changes in the publishing business and the decline in traditional users of their services.

The PPC must be financially self-sustaining. Since 1994, the PPC has generated an overall net surplus from operations leading to a more sound financial position. The PPC experienced a loss in 2010 but is projecting a surplus in 2011. The committee has concluded that PPC has met its mandate from General Assembly to be financially self-sufficient, but faces continued challenges as the publishing and delivery environment changes. The PPC has placed a significant emphasis on the success of the new hymnal.

The committee examined what we aggregated as “operational effectiveness.” The PPC exhibited adherence to general business “best practices.” An outside audit is conducted on an annual basis, and the audits have been issued without exception. Management closely monitors appropriate external and internal metrics and appears to be willing to adjust to the ever-changing publishing environment. The PPC has appropriate policies and procedures in place. Staffing performance and compensation are determined in a rational approach. The PPC racial ethnic staff percentage has exceeded the General Assembly recommended level for the last five years. The PPC continues to be technologically innovative and has developed strong partnerships with external firms to stay current in an efficient manner. The committee has concluded that the PPC is operationally effective.
Looking forward, the PPC faces several significant concerns. Sales continue to decline at a rate that could, at some point, make financial viability questionable. The PPC management is fully aware of the trends in publishing and the challenges they bring to the organization. The long-range plans address the current reality and outline their plans for flourishing in a new and different publishing world. In the short-term, the major focus of the PPC is the development and publishing of the new hymnal. If sales are realized as estimated, the resulting income will generate a significant surplus that will provide a cushion as the PPC adjusts to a “new normal” in publishing.

In the midst of stressful financial times and the continuing changes in publishing, particularly in the area of electronic publishing, PPC faces a number of significant challenges in the years ahead.

First of all is the immense task of developing, publishing, and marketing a new hymnal to the congregations and agencies of the church. This will require careful planning and collaboration, and a significant financial commitment to introduce and deliver this resource to the church.

Second is the transition to a new system of distribution of products to its retail customers in the church. The challenges come from electronic book sales, on-line book sales, and a decrease in brick and mortar retail outlets. The new delivery systems must bring a closer relationship of the congregations and their members to the publishing house.

Third is the continued challenge of the PPC’s strong academic book program to publish books of academic excellence to the PC(USA) and beyond. It will take major expertise and financial commitment to attract and publish the work of scholars writing for both the academy and the church.

Finally, strategic budgeting will be required to plan and implement optimum stewardship of the resources available to the publishing house.

Other observations include:

1. If the new hymnal sales fall below expectations, there may be a critical financial concern for PPC.
2. There is significant lead time in bringing new products to market.
3. The PPC must work to publish books and other material that appeal to the broad spectrum of theological thinking.
4. The PPC must publish books aimed for emerging markets growing within the Presbyterian church worldwide.

The PPC Board and senior management appear to be aware of the constraints with which the organization is faced, especially financial resources, and are acting in good faith to move the organization forward to fulfill its mission. The agency is effectively managed and able to address the changes in the publishing environment.

III. Collaboration

The final recommendation presented in the 2003 Review of the PPC was more a hope than a directive, calling on “the General Assembly, Office of the General Assembly, General Assembly Council, and PPC board to make every effort to work together toward a common call to serve the church of Jesus Christ” (Minutes, 2003, Part I, p. 672).

It is the determination of this committee on review, based on the PPC’s self-study and its own research, that the PPC has taken this encouragement from hope to reality in significant ways. The PPC has cooperated with Congregational Ministries Publishing (CMP) to develop curriculum growing out of the Feasting on the Word series; developed resources to equip members, leaders, and congregations of the church through the Thoughtful Christian and Presbyterian Leader; assisted the Office of the General Assembly (OGA) in creating the Bible study for General Assemblies; and now shares warehouse and distribution services with CMP. Other agencies of the denomination recognize the PPC as a robust partner in carrying out the mission of the PC(USA) within the church and beyond. The PPC has rightly recognized that it does not have the resources to meet the needs of the church on its own and that collaborative efforts are critical to the fulfillment of its stated mission (Presbyterian Publishing Corporation Self-Study, p.12).

While these efforts are to be lauded, it must be noted that the PPC remains unknown in certain segments of the Presbyterian church. The Six Agency Review Committee (2010) conducted a survey that determined that respondents, taken from a broad spectrum of the church, were largely unaware of PPC’s work with other agencies and, indeed, unaware of PPC as a PC(USA) agency as well.

In the survey conducted by this committee on review, the following assessments were gleaned:

Six in ten agency leaders (64 percent) but only one in ten middle governing bodies (MGB)² executives (10 percent) report that PPC has collaborated with their agency or middle governing body “very extensively” or “extensively” in the past two years. In fact, a slight majority of MGB executives (56 percent) report that PPC has not collaborated with their entity at all.
Of those serving agencies or entities with which PPC has collaborated at all in the past two years, seven in ten agency leaders (69 percent), but only one-third of MGB executives, say that collaboration has been “very successful” or “successful.” Of those with an opinion, many more agency leaders (82 percent) than MGB executives (43 percent) describe PPC’s resources overall as “very helpful” or “helpful” to “you personally in your ministry.”

Four in ten MGB executives with an opinion (38 percent) report that PPC is “very helpful” or “helpful” in resourcing congregations in their presbytery or synod. More (46 percent) respond “somewhat helpful.” (Final Report, Research Services, 6/24/11, Appendix)

To the committee on review this indicates a need for increased efforts in working with MGB leadership as well as other agency leadership in developing and promoting pertinent resources to constituents. Having PPC staff assigned to liaise with MGB staff would be another way of growing collaboratively and multiplying awareness and use of PPC and jointly produced material.

Continuing obstacles to collaboration exist, to be sure. Because much of PPC’s output is going to academic audiences with ecumenical perspectives, not just to Presbyterians, collaboration with entities outside the denomination is vital. Collaboration with corporate entities such as Barnes and Noble has so far been limited. However, staff report that ways are being found of distributing CMP resources through Amazon.com, which has been a significant partner for PCC in distribution.

Furthermore, as PPC is self-sustaining financially, there are some collaborative efforts that cannot be undertaken because of cost. Although there are some projects that proceed at a financial loss because of their importance, PPC must constantly weigh not only the worthiness of those efforts in fulfilling its mission but also the cost and projected revenue involved in doing so.

All the same, one area consistently emerging from interviews with PPC staff and from the General Assembly Mission Council (GAMC) staff that necessitates further study, collaboration, and implementation is the production of materials for congregations in languages other than English to reflect more fully the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A)’s commitment to multicultural ministry and growth. While this may not be immediately cost-effective, it is critical to the fulfillment of the church’s mission.

IV. Church Relatedness

The concluding segment of the work assigned the General Assembly Committee on Review focused on an assessment of church relatedness. The objective was to review how well PPC serves and supports the church’s mission and exhibits a continuous awareness of its servant role in the life of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.).

The self-study revealed that PPC has a well-thought-out plan of execution to fulfill its mandate to the constituency of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). The six agencies of the General Assembly collaborate to serve the congregations and middle governing bodies, as fully as resources allow, with theological stimuli and study aids for growth and development spiritually, intellectually and emotionally.

Interviews with board members and leadership teams revealed that PPC has the pool of talent, enthusiasm, and commitment necessary to provide resources for the church constituency. They are well aware of the task ahead of them with limited resources and the necessity to work with all agencies to get the job done.

The survey revealed the need for a stronger PPC identity in all groups surveyed. In five of the nine groups surveyed (customers, authors, agency leaders, MGB executives, youth & young adults, Presbyterian Leader users, Thoughtful Christian users, racial ethnic congregations, and congregations) only small majorities were “very familiar” or “familiar” with PPC: congregations (51 percent), racial ethnic congregations (52 percent), Presbyterian Leader users (54 percent), agency leaders (56 percent), and middle governing body executives (54 percent) (See Table 2. pg. 2 of Final Review). The majority of the remaining responders in each group were “somewhat familiar” except in the young adult group, where more were “not very familiar.”

The General Assembly Review Committee observed and commends the PPC for its strong commitment to the mission needs of the PC(USA). Commitment to providing more awareness of its books and resources to small congregations, seminaries, and lay leaders through workshops, training, and book table events is commendable.

The PPC annually offers the Robert W. Bohl Racial Ethnic Scholarship and Internship Program to a racial ethnic student or recent graduate from a PC(USA) seminary who is interested in considering religious publishing as a ministry option. The recipient works with both the Westminster John Knox (WJK) and Geneva imprints.
The PPC articulated the ongoing need for personnel and financial resources if it is to function as the sole publishing arm of the PC(USA). The leadership continues to partner with other agencies of the PC(USA) and outside agencies to provide individuals, congregations, and institutions with resources that they might better understand and be equipped to carry out their respective missions.

PPC COMMENT ON ITEM 20-10

Comment on Item 20-10—From the Presbyterian Publishing Corporation.

1. That the PPC consider hiring personnel to relate to middle governing bodies, being conscious of the importance of diversity in the hiring of staff.

Response: The PPC agrees that this is an important area of need to address. Executive Director of Church Relations Vince Patton’s transfer to GAMC in late 2010 was a loss to PPC and left a ‘service’ gap with this constituency. The Hymnal Marketing Advocate position is working in this capacity for the next two years for that important project. In light of financial constraints, PPC will plan for a permanent resource to address this need in 2013. In the short term, PPC will continue to participate at MGB events as possible and collaborate with Congregational Ministries Publishing to feature PPC resources at MGB events.

2. That the PPC be aware of the General Assembly mandate for cultural proficiency, especially in the hiring of senior staff.

Response: The PPC takes this mandate seriously and will continue to work conscientiously to address the need for diversity among senior staff. Given the current financial constraints related to the development and introduction of the new Presbyterian hymnal, we expect to recruit and select a racial ethnic member of senior staff no later than 2013.

3. That PPC continue and increase the publication of material that provides a platform for new voices, material that is important to the life of the church, and material that represents the diversity of the church, realizing, as they have stated in their self-study, that “some books, in fact, are accepted with PPC’s full expectation of break-even sales or, in a few cases, even losses.”

Response: The PPC has perhaps the most accomplished record of excellence among denominational publishers in this area and plans to continue that practice. Two new series, Belief and Beyond the Pale, are just two examples of our robust efforts in the progressive publishing of new and diverse voices.

4. That PPC initiate and continue collaboration with Congregational Ministries Publishing (CMP) on the development of cultural and linguistic resources that will develop discipleship and leadership for the whole church.

Response: The PPC initiated collaboration with Congregational Ministries Publishing and the Seminario Evangelico de Puerto Rico to both adapt studies and develop new studies in Spanish as a new offering on The Thoughtful Christian website. The PPC will continue this work and collaboration (within reasonable financial means) with other PC(USA) entities, especially for the resource programs like TheThoughtfulChristian.com and ThePresbyterianLeader.com.

5. That PPC continue and enhance the collaboration with all of the agencies of the GAMC in order to produce material that fulfills the mission of each of the agencies.

Response: The PPC is committed to this collaboration, particularly in partnership with the General Assembly Mission Council (GAMC) and the Office of the General Assembly (OGA). The PPC is working with the Office of Theology and Worship and PAM (Presbyterian Association of Musicians) on the development of the new hymnal and resources for Presbyterian Leader.com. The PPC is also in beginning stages of collaborative development for a new or revised Book of Common Worship. The PPC regularly discusses ideas for PC(USA) resources with various offices within the GAMC to ensure that efforts are aligning with the overall mission of the PC(USA).

6. That PPC continue to explore and develop ways to utilize current and emerging online and digital technologies, both as a delivery system and a resource to the whole church.

Response: The PPC is a leader among religious publishers in the effective utilization of emerging technology in publishing and in the delivery of resources, and will continue that leadership. The PPC is expanding the resources it has available... electronically and pursuing new models for these resources, such as new formats of leadership and worship resources on ThePresbyterianLeader.com and the new electronic hymnal resources to accompany the 2013 Presbyterian hymnal. In addition, PPC’s sales of eBooks increased by approximately fifteen times in 2011 compared to 2010.

7. That the PPC work with other agencies of the church to consolidate and leverage their marketing efforts, including electronic publishing, to facilitate a better understanding of and access to the resources available through the PCUSA.

Response: The PPC is represented with other PC(USA) entities in the further development of the PC(USA) web site and will continue to pursue collaborative opportunities for electronic resources and communication in the future, in addition to its proprietary efforts that serve Presbyterian and ecumenical audiences.

8. That a comprehensive and collaborative review be undertaken by all agencies involved in publishing to determine if there is duplication of services and resources that does not serve the mission of the church as effectively as possible, and that PPC initiate such a review.

Response: The PPC will initiate with other PC(USA) entities a collaborative review beginning in the fall of 2012 for publishing activities done within the PC(USA). The goal of this review will be to appropriately identify and reconcile duplication of publishing services among General Assembly entities. The PPC will report to the 221st General Assembly (2014) on the findings of the review and on any mutual actions taken by the entities to resolve ineffective duplication of services. In order for this to be an effective effort, it is advised that there be joint ownership and commitment of this review between GAMC, OGA, and PPC. It is advised that a committee of ten people be named as responsible for this review, including: the three entity heads for PPC, GAMC, and OGA; the chairs or another elected designate from the boards of PPC, GAMC, and OGA; one additional staff persons from each of the entities, designated by the agency head; and one person from the General Assembly Committee on Review of PPC, in order to help represent the review committee’s intent for this recommendation.

Item 20-11

[The assembly disapproved Item 20-11 with comment. See pp. 36, 37-38.]

The Presbytery of Stockton overtures the 220th General Assembly (2012) to direct the Stated Clerk to send the following proposed amendment to the presbyteries for their affirmative or negative votes:

Shall G-2.0804 be amended as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

“G-2.0804 Terms of Call

“The terms of call shall always meet or exceed any minimum requirement of the presbytery in effect when the call is made. The session shall review annually the minister’s terms of call and shall propose for congregational action (G-1.0501) such changes as the session deems appropriate, provided that they meet the presbytery’s minimum requirements. The call shall include participation in the Benefits Plan of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), including both pension and medical coverage, or any successor plan approved by the General Assembly. Any installed teaching elder or minister who objects on the theological grounds, as a matter of conscience, to provisions of the Benefits Plan of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) shall have the freedom to have the session reallocate the amount equivalent to the cost of participation in that benefits plan to provide for similar benefits through a third-party provider separate from the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.).”

[Comment: In response to the urging of the 219th General Assembly (2010), the Board of Pensions has been working to develop a relief of conscience mechanism related to benefits for the same gender domestic partners of plan members. The Board had a special committee that met for a year and has now communicated to plan members and employing organizations offering the opportunity to register an objection. We encourage them in this effort in the interest of maintaining the unity of the Body of Christ.]

Rationale

Although the current Form of Government of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) requires all installed teaching elders or ministers to participate in the denomination’s benefits plan, some individuals who serve Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) congregations object to the broadening of benefits to include services or persons whose beliefs or practices are theologicially incompatible with their own. In keeping with the new missional emphasis of PC(USA), permitting an individual to utilize a different benefits plan will allow that person to focus on furthering the work of the Church universal without penalty, specifically in cases in which that individual disagrees theologically with the Benefits Plan of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). A critical concern for individual teaching elders and ministers is that their theological beliefs continue to be respected by allowing a different benefits plan.

This amendment guarantees that individual will be permitted to exercise their freedom of conscience in considering their benefits plan with the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) or with a third-party provider.

Concurrence to Item 20-11 from the Presbytery of Santa Barbara.

ACC ADVICE ON ITEM 20-11

Advice on Item 20-11—From the Advisory Committee on the Constitution.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises the 220th General Assembly (2012) to disapprove Item 20-11.

Rationale

The overture would add a sentence to the current text of G-2.0804 permitting a teaching elder in an installed position to “have the session re-allocate” the cost of participation in the Board of Pensions Benefits Plan for the purchase of similar benefits from a third-party provider outside the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). There are multiple constitutional problems with this overture.

First, the proposed amendment would provide that the pastor can “have the session allocate” certain funds. A simple reading implies that the pastor can dictate the allocation of session funds set aside for the payment of Benefit Plan dues, under the terms of G-2.0804. This represents a significant misreading of the authority of the pastor as moderator of the session, and of the congregation’s right to determine the terms of the pastoral call (Book of Order, G-1.0503b and c). It is not clear whether the intent of “reallocation” is that the pastor and/or session might act without the knowledge and approval of the congregation as regards participation in the Board of Pensions, but if so the action would appear to contravene the right of the congregation to approve the terms of call.

Second, the overture undercuts the role of the presbytery in approving terms of call. Terms of call are not set at the sole discretion of sessions and/or congregations, but are also subject to the approval of the presbytery (see Book of Order, G-3.0301a: “establishing pastoral relationships and dissolving them; G-3.0307: “… presbytery’s oversight of … approval of calls for pastoral services and invitations for temporary pastoral services …”, and G-2.0502: “… no pastoral relationship may be established, changed, or dissolved without the approval of the presbytery”). It is not clear whether the intent of the overture is that the session might be empowered to reallocate funds solely at the request of the teaching elder in the installed relationship. If so, it contravenes the authority of the presbytery to approve such calls, including the requirement of the present paragraph (Book of Order, G-2.0804) that calls “shall always meet or exceed any minimum requirement of the presbytery.”

Third, the Benefits Plan already provides for “relief of conscience” around issues of abortion. Because calls are not merely the prerogative of the individual congregation, but also require the approval of the presbytery, obtaining this relief requires the approval of the presbytery, as well. The proposed language would circumvent presbytery’s approval, thereby undermining the shared nature of the call.

Fourth, by making participation in the Benefits Plan a matter of individual choice, the overture undercuts the role of the General Assembly. “The General Assembly is the council of the whole church, and it is representative of the unity of the synods, presbyteries, sessions, and congregations of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) …” (Book of Order, G-3.0501). This basic ecclesiological fact is the reason why the approval of the General Assembly is required on certain changes to the Benefits Plan offered through the Board of Pensions; such a plan is a plan for the whole church, and requires the participation of the whole church. Opting out of the plan on an individual basis places the choice of the individual teaching elder in a position of priority over the interests of the whole church as expressed through the actions of the General Assembly.

ACWC ADVICE AND COUNSEL ON ITEM 20-11

Advice and Counsel on Item 20-11—From the Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns (ACWC).

The Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns advises that the 220th General Assembly (2012) disapprove Item 20-11.

Rationale

The Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns (ACWC) concurs with the comments of the Advisory Committee on the Constitution on this item.
The ACWC also concurs with the comments of the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy, but sees the impact of the relief of conscience from coverage by the Board of Pensions Plan to be broader and less well-defined than the single issue of abortion coverage.

The ACWC objects to the overture because it is vague, unworkable, impractical, and discriminatory. The ACWC views the impact and extent of the ‘theological incompatibility’ as described in the rationale for the overture as limited only to the theology of an individual teaching elder. The theological objection is not limited to a certain procedure or type of medical procedure but is intended to include theological objections to ‘persons whose beliefs or practices are theologicially incompatible with those of’ the teaching elder seeking exemption from the Plan. We remind the commissioners that the Plan covers not only other teaching elders but also employees of churches, agencies, and programs of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) and their families without regard to the beliefs or practices of the program participants—many of whom are not Presbyterian.

BOP COMMENT ON ITEM 20-11

Comment on Item 20-11—From the Board of Pensions (BOP).

The Board of Pensions (the “Board”) advises that Item 20-11 be disapproved.

The overture would allow an exception to the participation mandate provision of the Book of Order, as a matter of conscience. In its consultation with representatives of the presbytery, the Board of Pensions heard that the intent of the overture is to reverse the effect of the action of the Board of Pensions to extend benefits for same-gender couples in response to the 219th General Assembly (2010) on Item 18-06 (see the Board of Pensions’ comment on Item 18-06 for more information, Minutes, 2010, Part I, pp. 1302–1303 of the electronic copy). The action of the Board of Pensions to extend benefits to same-gender spouses and domestic partners in legally sanctioned partnerships was taken in response to a direct urging by the General Assembly and consistent with earlier General Assembly actions that have, since the 1970s, called for equal civil rights for gays and lesbians. As early as the 190th General Assembly (1978), the UPCUSA called on “Presbyterians to work for the passage of laws that prohibit discrimination in the areas of employment, housing, and public accommodations based on the sexual orientation of a person” (Minutes, 1978, Part I, p. 266).

The Board of Pensions respects the views of persons whose conscience is offended by certain provisions of the Benefits Plan. In that regard, the Board of Pensions develops and maintains processes to protect the conscience of individuals who participate in the Benefits Plan. For example, the Board of Pensions has maintained the Relief of Conscience administrative process relating to the coverage of abortion-related procedures by the Medical Plan since 1995. The Board of Pensions’ comment on Item 18-06 (Minutes, 2010, Part I, pp. 1302–1303 of the electronic copy) regarding the extension of benefits to same-gender domestic partners of plan members includes a commitment to continue work on the development of a relief of conscience process as further financial information becomes available to the Board of Pensions.

The Board regrets that our members might be faced with a decision that pits their conscience against their own welfare and that of their families, but notes that the benefits provided are consistent in every respect with the urgings and policies of the denomination as expressed by its General Assemblies over the years.

While the Board recognizes that employee benefits are available in the commercial marketplace, the unique provisions of the Benefits Plan of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) are not available commercially.

The Board of Pensions supports disapproval of the overture for three overriding reasons:

• The mandate is an essential part of Presbyterian polity that defines the PC(USA) as a connectional denomination as distinguished from a congregational denomination.

• The overture is not in the best interests of the community of members of the Benefits Plan.

• The Board of Pensions continues to seek a relief of conscience mechanism related to benefits for the same-gender domestic partners of plan members.

The Board of Pensions wishes to remind the General Assembly that the current mandate has served both members and employing organizations well to several ends:

• The Benefits Plan provides a common level of benefits to called and installed clergy that is an integral part of their terms of call and total compensation package.

• The Benefits Plan is a portable benefits package that members take with them from call to call, often across state lines, without breaks in service or loss of benefits.
The Benefits Plan is grounded in “Call Neutrality” so that Plan members do not have to “negotiate” benefits for themselves or their family as they move to a new call. Call Neutrality also provides the same benefits for all members and their families regardless of the member’s marital status, gender, age, ethnicity, or any other basis for inappropriate discrimination.

The Benefits Plan reflects the connectional nature of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) through “The Community Nature of the Plan” so that benefits for the lower paid and higher paid are the same, and that the cost of benefits is borne in proportion to the effective salary of the participants. The Community Nature provides subsidized pension, death, and disability benefits to half of the Plan membership, and also provides excellent full family medical coverage to every Plan member at a price to employing organizations that is substantially discounted from premiums required by commercial insurers for equivalent coverage.

The Benefits Plan avoids adverse selection in the Medical Plan, thus contributing to the solvency and cost effectiveness of the Medical Plan. It is a fact that several denominational healthcare plans have become insolvent because of the high risks that result from adverse selection. One other denomination has recently adopted a mandate precisely to avoid the risk of insolvency. The constitutional mandate avoids this risk because the dues paid on account of healthy members help fund the claims of those needing medical care.

There is no equivalent Benefits Plan available in the commercial market.

The Pension Plan provides permanent increases in the pension credits of active members and the pensions of retired members when investment returns are sufficient to both safely fund the Pension Plan and share the gains with the membership.

The Benefits Plan provides generous survivor benefits to members at dues rates that are 1/3 the rates of similar commercial plans.

The Benefits Plan provides increases in payments to disabled members from time-to-time to take account of pay increases they may have earned had they not been disabled.

The Board of Pensions also reminds the General Assembly that consideration of this topic does not begin with this overture. Attempts to construe the language of the Book of Order that mandates participation in the Benefits Plan to permit the exclusion of dues payments by certain employing organizations were made in:

- 1985,
- 1990,
- 1991, and

The wisdom of the PC(USA) in approving mandated participation in the Benefits Plan for teaching elders in installed positions has been validated by the church time and again.

To permit members or sessions to opt out of participation in the Benefits Plan of the PC(USA) for any objection of theological grounds would

- be a dramatic change in the fundamental polity of the denomination,
- compromise and jeopardize the theological foundation of the community nature of the Benefits Plan,
- work against the interests of those Plan members who depart the Plan, imposing on them an extreme hardship because equivalent benefits are not otherwise available, and
- create the opportunity for significant adverse selection in the Medical Plan of the Board of Pensions.

Item 20-12

[The assembly approved Item 20-12. See pp. 36, 38.]

Commissioner Resolution. On Shared Benefits Plan.

The 220th General Assembly (2012) requests that the Stated Clerk do the following:

1. In consultation and with the support of the Board of Pensions, initiate conversations with the Evangelical Presbyterian Church (EPC), the Covenant Order of Evangelical Presbyterians (EC), and other possible partners for the purpose of sharing a benefits plan consistent with the values and principles of the present Board of Pensions Plan.
2. Report (within one year) to the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly the result of these conversations, specifically for the purpose of suggesting possible actions by the 221st General Assembly (2014) that would lead to such a shared benefits plan.

Rationale

The economic climate in the United States has caused the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) to rethink significant fiscal matters that lie ahead of us.

The Board of Pensions has identified the challenges of declining plan membership that threatens the future of the Plan viability as we have known it.

The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) finds itself in the context of significant changes in denominational relationships.

Divisions in the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) require us to consider reconciliatory initiatives that will give witness to the unity of the church across denominational lines.

ACSWP ADVICE AND COUNSEL ON ITEM 20-12

Advice and Counsel on Item 20-12—From the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP).

The ACSWP counsels the following considerations:

The continuing economic crisis is eroding the financial position of many churches. The Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP) is concerned that the church’s economic witness and equity among ministers be a part of any planning for the long-term benefit of its ministers.

Every institution with pension liabilities is doing future planning; we appreciate the strength of the Board of Pensions established to sustain the ministers and congregations of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). We also understand that in most cases when employees leave the service of a given employer, that employer ceases to contribute pension dues, and that this currently holds for pastors leaving the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) for other denominations.

The conversation proposed is about sharing (or extending) a benefits plan with two particular denominations composed in part of former PC(USA) congregations and ministers not in accord with some of “the values and principles” of the PC(USA) itself. Thus, if the conversation is worth having, it might conceivably also include other Presbyterian denominations composed partly of former PC(USA) members: the Orthodox Presbyterian Church and the Presbyterian Church in America. The broader question is whether this conversation is being proposed in order to open the door to detaching the Board of Pensions from the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) at some future point.

A different approach would look at pension fund planning with communion partner denominations; the Reformed Church in America, the United Church of Christ, and the Evangelical Lutheran Church in America. The Christian Church (Disciples of Christ) might also be considered.

At the time of reunion, the pension plans of both the former UPCUSA and PCUS were joined. Lessons from this process are certainly still relevant for future planning and consideration of any merger with less financially strong pension plans.

Item 20-13

[The assembly approved Item 20-13. See pp. 36, 38.]

2. 2010 Referral. Item 18-12. Recommendation that the Board of Pensions Develop a Plan to Ensure That Funds from Any Relief of Conscience Churches Do Not Go to Fund Abortions Through Any Avenue (Minutes, 2010, Part I, p. 1313 of the electronic version). [This referral was removed from the consent agenda and was sent to 20. Assembly Committee on Board of Pensions, Foundations, and Presbyterian Publishing Corporation as Item 20-13.]

Response: The scope of such a plan would be far beyond the reach of the Board of Pensions. As contemplated by the 219th General Assembly (2010), such a plan would require that any dollar that passed through a Relief of Conscience employing organization be insulated from paying for an abortion at any time in the future.

While the Board of Pensions is vigilant to ensure that claims that may be for the elective termination of a pregnancy are not paid from the dues remitted by Relief of Conscience employing organizations to the Board of Pensions, the Board of Pensions has no control over funds expended by Relief of Conscience employing organizations for anything other than those dues. Dollars spent by Relief of Conscience employing organizations to purchase goods and services as varied as insurance, utilities, music, and communion supplies may be expended by their next holder for any legal purpose. The Board of Pensions has no means to control these many avenues through which funds from Relief of Conscience employing organizations may go to fund abortions.

Item 20-14

[The assembly approved Item 20-14. See pp. 36, 38.]

Board of Pensions’ Response to 2010 Referral: Item 18-06: On Directing the Board of Pensions to Extend Benefits to Same-Gender Spouses and Domestic Partners.

In response to Item 18-06, the 219th General Assembly (2010) approved the following resolution:

1. Urge the Board of Pensions to adopt amendments to the Benefits Plan to extend eligibility for spousal and dependent benefits under the Plan to Benefits Plan members, their same-gender domestic partners, and the children of their same-gender domestic partners, on the same basis as, and equivalent to, benefits made available to Benefits Plan members, their spouses, and the children of their spouses.

2. Approve an increase in dues for the Benefits Plan of up to 1 percent, effective January 1, 2012, to be allocated among the plans of the Board of Pensions, including but not limited to the Pension Plan, as the Board, in its sole discretion, deems necessary to fund the cost of the additional benefits. Should the Board not implement these benefits for any reason, approval of the increase in dues is rescinded.

Comment: That the Board of Pensions be highly urged to provide relief of conscience, to be implemented simultaneously with these actions, for those congregations for whom these actions cause a moral dilemma.

In response to this referral, in October 2010, the chair of the Board of Pensions (the “Board”) appointed a Special Committe of the Board to consider the matter. Following consideration of comments solicited and received from individuals and churches within the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), consideration of financial issues, and consideration of the existing legal environment including both federal and state laws, the special committee reported to the Board in October 2011 and March 2012.

Upon receiving those reports, the Board, on March 3, 2012, acted to adopt amendments to the Benefits Plan of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) as follows:

A. Definition of Spouse

Current Definition: The Benefits Plan defines “Spouse” as follows: “an individual who is legally married to a Member.” Sec. 2.1” Proposed Amendment: “an individual who is legally married to a Member in a marriage that conforms to the definition of marriage in the Book of Order of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.).”

B. Definition of Qualified Domestic Partner

New Definition:

QUALIFIED DOMESTIC PARTNER” is an individual who is in a legally sanctioned same-gender union with a Member affording rights of inheritance under the laws of the jurisdiction where the union occurred.”

C. Definition of Covered Partner

New Definition:

COVERED PARTNER. A Spouse or a Qualified Domestic Partner

D. Definition of Children

Current Definition: “CHILDREN (OR CHILD). A Member’s children (natural children, legally adopted children or stepchildren) for each of whom the Member is providing at least fifty percent (50%) support. For purposes of eligibility for coverage as a dependent under the Medical Plan, the support requirement is not applicable, except in the case of extended coverage for an adult child with a total disability.” Sec. 2.1

Amendment: “CHILDREN (OR CHILD). A Member’s children (natural children, legally adopted children or stepchildren) for each of whom the Member is providing at least fifty percent (50%) support. Each child of a Qualified Domestic Partner for whom the Member is providing at least fifty percent (50%) support shall have the same rights and benefits as a child of the Member under the Plan. For purposes of eligibility for coverage as a dependent under the Medical Plan, the support requirement is not applicable, except in the case of extended coverage for an adult child with a total disability.”

E. Amendment to Definition of Surviving Spouse.

The Plan currently defines “Surviving Spouse” as “The Spouse of a member on the date of a Member’s death who survives the death of the Member.” The definition of Surviving Spouse would be deleted from the Plan and replaced with the following new definition:
New Definition: “SURVIVING COVERED PARTNER. The Covered Partner of a Member on the date of a Member’s death who survives the death of the Member.”

F. Definition of Covered Person

The Plan currently defines “Covered Member” as “A Member who is eligible for and currently enrolled in a designated Benefits Plan program or plan and whose dues for such coverage are not delinquent.” Based on this definition, we propose to add a definition to use when the entire family is covered.

New Definition: “COVERED PERSON. A Covered Member, a Covered Partner and their eligible Children and Surviving Covered Partner provided that each individual is enrolled in the Benefits Plan program or plan and the dues required for their coverage, if any, are not delinquent.”

The Board did not approve any increase in dues at this time with respect to this decision.

The Board carefully considered the issue of the “relief of conscience” that was raised in the comment to the General Assembly’s referral on Item 18-06. The Board will monitor the cost of coverage for same-gender domestic partners and their children and consider the relief of conscience issue if and when such costs are determinable.

In adopting these Plan Amendments, the Board believes that it is discharging appropriately its fiduciary duty to Plan members. The Plan Amendments do not risk Plan solvency or stability.

Item 20-A

[The assembly approved Item 20-A. See p. 38.]

The Board of Pensions recommends that the 220th General Assembly (2012) receive the following report regarding amendments to The Benefits Plan of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) (the “Plan”) and its Bylaws that the Board of Pensions adopted since the 219th General Assembly (2010).

Rationale

Report on Benefits Plan Amendments

1. Benefits Plan Amendments

The process for amending the Plan is established in the plan document (Article XIX). The Board has the sole discretion and authority to adopt amendments. Certain amendments to the Pension Plan are not effective until approved by the General Assembly; most amendments are effective on the date specified by the Board and need only be reported to the General Assembly.

- Amendments to the Pension Plan (Articles VI, VII, VIII, and IX) that are in the nature of a benefit reduction or a Pension Plan dues increase are only effective upon approval of the General Assembly. The Board must provide written notice of its intent to submit such Pension Plan amendments to the General Assembly and the Plan members, local churches, and presbyteries at least sixty (60) days prior to the commencement of the General Assembly.

- All other amendments to the Plan adopted by the Board must be reported to the next succeeding General Assembly and to the Members, local churches and presbyteries in a reasonable manner.

Since the 219th General Assembly (2010), the Board has not adopted any amendment to the Pension Plan that requires the approval of General Assembly prior to becoming effective.

Since the 219th General Assembly (2010), the Board granted a disability benefit increase for Plan Years 2010 and 2011 and adopted certain amendments to the Pension, Medical, and Retirement Savings Plans. A summary of the amendments to the Plan is provided below. The effective dates of the amendments are noted. The verbatim text of the Plan amendments is available from the corporate secretary of the Board of Pensions.

A letter advising the Benefits Plan members, local churches, and presbyteries of this report and the amendments was posted to the website of the Board of Pensions on April 16, 2012, and an email was directed to all of the email addresses in the Board of Pensions records advising of that posting. A complete copy of the Benefits Plan of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) (2012) is also available on the website of the Board at www.pensions.org or by calling 1-800-PRES-PPLAN (1-800-773-7752).
2. Eligibility Provisions

At its March 3, 2012, meeting, the Board of Directors approved, by more than a two-thirds majority of the members present, the following amendments to the eligibility provisions of the Pension, Death and Disability, and Medical Plans to extend coverage to legally sanctioned same-gender domestic partners, and the children of their same gender domestic partners, on as nearly as possible the same basis as, and equivalent to, benefits made available to members and their spouses and children, effective as of January 1, 2013:

a. An amendment to the definition of “Spouse” in Sec. 2.1 was adopted to conform the definition of the term “marriage” to the term as defined ecclesiastically in the Book of Order rather than “marriage” as defined civilly.

b. New definitions of a “Qualified Domestic Partner” and a “Covered Partner” were added to Sec. 2.1.

c. The definition of “Children” was amended to address coverage for children of Qualified Domestic Partners.

d. The term “Surviving Spouse” was changed to “Surviving Covered Partner.”

e. The term Covered Person was adopted to use throughout Plan documents when referring to a Member’s Covered Partner and their Eligible Family members.

3. Pension Plan Amendments

a. Experience Apportionment Grants. The Pension Plan provides in Sec. 7.3 that the Board may determine, in its sole discretion, that sufficient Pension Plan assets have accumulated, due to favorable investment and actuarial experience, over and above those required for actuarial reserves, general contingency reserves, and other special reserves, to grant an experience apportionment. Due to the impact of the 2008 economic recession, the Board of Pensions determined that there were not sufficient assets in hand at the end of Plan Years 2010 and 2011 as a result of cumulative favorable investment and actuarial experience to grant an experience apportionment in either year.

b. Other Pension Plan Amendments

   (1) Qualified Military Service Provisions: Secs. 2.1, 6.4, and 9.1 of the Pension Plan were amended effective January 1, 2011, to provide pension and death benefits equivalent to active Plan members in the event of the death of a member on leave to serve in qualified military service.

   (2) Joint and Survivor Options. Effective January 1, 2012, Secs. 9.1 and 9.4 of the Pension Plan were amended to clarify the benefits payable to a member’s surviving spouse, in the event that the spouse married to the member on the pension benefit commencement date predeceased the member, the member remarried thereafter and then predeceased the new spouse.

4. Death and Disability Plan Amendments

a. Disability Benefit Increase. The Death and Disability Plan provides in Sec. 11.3(h) that the Board may determine, in its sole discretion, that sufficient Death and Disability Plan assets have accumulated, due to favorable investment and actuarial experience, over and above those required for actuarial reserves, general contingency reserves and other special reserves, to grant a disability benefit increase. The Board of Directors determined that the Death and Disability Plan fund had sufficient Death and Disability Plan fund assets and reserves in hand at the conclusion of Plan Years 2010 and 2011 to grant a disability benefit increase each year. The Board approved a one and one-half percent (1.5 percent) increase in disability benefits for those receiving such benefits on December 31, 2010, beginning July 1, 2011, and a three percent (3.0 percent) increase in disability benefits for those receiving such benefits on December 31, 2011, beginning July 1, 2012.

b. Partial Return to Work. Beginning January 1, 2011, the Board of Directors adopted an amendment to the Death and Disability Plan, Sec. 11.3(f) and 11.7, to permit a disabled member to try to return to work without the loss of benefits.

c. Suspension or Termination of Benefits Rights Expanded. Effective January 1, 2011, the Board of Directors adopted an amendment to Sec. 11.9 of the Death and Disability Plan authorizing the Board to suspend benefit payments if the Disabled Member fails or refuses to provide documentation to substantiate his or her current medical or work status.

5. Medical Plan Amendments

Since the 219th General Assembly (2010), the Board adopted the following amendments to the Medical Plan provisions in response to changes in benefits, vendors and federal and other laws. The substantive amendments were:

a. Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act (“PPACA”) Reforms. While many of the coverage reforms in the federal health-care reform legislation do not begin until January 1, 2014, a number of the coverage reforms became effective... immediately (March 31, 2010) or the beginning of the first plan year thereafter (i.e., January 1, 2011, for the Medical Plan). The Board of Pensions adopted the following amendments necessary to comply with the federal health-care reform.

(1) Beginning as of January 1, 2011, Sec. 13.2(c), the Medical Plan eligibility provision was amended to continue coverage for the children of members up to attainment of age 26, regardless of dependency or student status.

(2) Effective January 1, 2011, Sec. 13.2 of the Plan provided that the Medical Plan was a grandfathered plan under PPACA and not required to adopt a number of the PPACA reforms. As of Plan Year 2012, the Board of Directors amended Sec. 13.2, to eliminate the Medical Plan’s grandfathered status and became subject to certain required PPACA reforms, including the appeals process described in (5) below.

(3) Beginning as of January 1, 2011, Sec. 13.3 was amended to eliminate the preexisting condition limitations on coverage for children under age 19.

(4) Beginning Plan Year 2011, Sec. 13.9 was amended to eliminate the lifetime maximum benefits provisions; adopt an annual minimum benefit of $3.5 million dollars, and eliminate the annual maximum benefit amounts for certain essential benefits.

(5) Effective January 1, 2012, the Board of Directors amended Administrative Rule 1201, relating to appeals, to adopt an external review process for the final appeal of Medical Plan claims.

b. Changes in Medical Plan Member Obligations

(1) Medical Plan Participation Basis. Effective January 1, 2012, the Board amended Sec. 2.1 to change definition of the Medical Plan participation basis to give the Board discretion to establish both a minimum and a maximum amount that were not based on a percentage of the median salary but were fixed amounts. For Plan Year 2012, the Board fixed the minimum and maximum at $38,000 and $117,000, respectively.

(2) Specialist Copayment. Sec. 13.4(a)(1)(A) was amended effective January 1, 2012, to raise the copayment from $35 dollars to $45 dollars for an office visit to a specialist physician.

(3) Annual Deductibles. Sec. 13.6(a)(2) was amended effective January 1, 2012, to raise the deductible for network and non-network medical costs from 1 percent to 1.25 percent and for out-of-network medical costs from 2 percent to 2.5 percent. The annual deductible is capped at 2.5 percent of medical costs and no more than 70 percent of the maximum Medical Participation Basis.

(4) Maximum Annual Out of Pocket Costs

Sec. 13.6 was amended to provide that

(a) Effective as of January 1, 2013, the annual copayment maximum for Network and Non-Network Medical Costs was changed to 5 percent of the lesser of the member’s Medical Participation Basis or 150 percent of the Pastors’ Median, and

(b) Effective as of January 1, 2013, the annual copayment maximum for Out-of-Network Medical Costs was changed to 15 percent of the lesser of the member’s Medical Participation Basis or 150 percent of the Pastors’ Median.

c. Invitrofertilization. Effective January 1, 2011, Sec. 13.1(l)(21) was amended to clarify that charges for advanced reproductive technology, including in-vitro fertilization (IVF), zygote intrafallopian transfer (ZIFT), gamete intrafallopian transfer (GIFT), cryopreserved embryo transfers, intracytoplasmic sperm injection (ICSI), or ovum microsurgery; and for the supplies and prescription drugs related to such therapies, are covered by the Medical Plan subject to the limitations in Sec. 13.9(b)(2).

d. Medicare Part D Plan. To maximize the federal subsidies available to employers offering retiree medical coverage, the Board contracted with Express Scripts to offer a Part D Prescription Drug Plan with wrap around benefits effective January 1, 2012. The Prescription Drug Program provisions of the Medicare Supplement Plan were amended accordingly.

6. Retirement Savings Plan

Under the authority granted in Article XVII of the Benefits Plan, the Board of Pensions administers an optional defined contribution known as the Retirement Savings Plan (“Savings Plan”).

a. The Plan was amended effective January 1, 2010, to clarify the administration of the in-service plan-to-plan transfer provision of the Savings Plan.
b. Required Minimum Distribution Relief. The Savings Plan was amended effective as of January 1, 2009, to provide required minimum distribution relief to participants for the 2009 calendar year, as permitted under the Worker, Retiree, and Employer Recovery Act of 2010.

Complete copies of the Savings documents, as well as the verbatim text of the amendment described above, are available from the Board’s website or upon request from the corporate secretary.

7. Report on Amendments to the Bylaws

The Board of Pensions reports that it adopted amendments to the bylaws to conform them to the new Form of Government and an amendment to the description of the Assistance Committee to delegate the authority to approve homes budgets to the committee.

Item 20-Info

A. Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) Foundation Agency Summary

1. Mission Statement

A vital part of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), the Foundation cultivates, attracts, and manages financial resources of individuals and institutions to serve Christ's mission.

2. Summary

The Presbyterian Foundation was established in 1799 to raise and safeguard funds for mission. We work with congregations, councils, agencies, and other entities to ensure that they have resources for mission today, tomorrow, and two hundred years from now.

From such humble beginnings more than 200 years ago, the Presbyterian Foundation has grown to become one of the nation’s largest religious foundations.

The Foundation is committed to strengthening congregations, presbyteries, synods, the General Assembly, seminaries, colleges and universities, retirement communities, and other agencies of the church by developing gifts and managing funds on their behalf. The Foundation is here to serve the church and its mission.

Our nationwide staff of ministry relationship officers works with pastors, ministry leaders, and individual donors to develop communities of Christian generosity in support of Christ’s mission in the world.

In countless ways, the Foundation offers charitable expertise and services that unite and empower Presbyterians and the ministries about which they are passionate. We strive to do so in a trustworthy, clear, and accessible manner that reflects the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.)’s faith-based values.

The Foundation has much to offer the church:

Stability. The Foundation has been bringing together people and mission for more than two centuries. One of six national agencies of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), the Foundation is composed of highly skilled officers and support staff trained in the area of gift administration and compliance, accounting, law, marketing, and a specialized group of ministry relationship officers located around the country to better serve the church.

Connection. We work in leadership and partnership with the whole denomination to fund its mission. The Foundation does not compete with local congregations or any other institution of the church for charitable gifts. To the contrary, we are committed to strengthening these entities by developing gifts and managing funds on their behalf.

Commitment. We provide all Presbyterians with an avenue to realize their philanthropic goals through a variety of giving options. We maintain a strong focus on the Presbyterian values and principles that drive our stewardship initiatives.

a. Ministry Relationships

The Foundation remains true to its original charge from the 1799 General Assembly to solicit from individuals and congregations “pious donations and bequests in order to supply the funds which are absolutely necessary to carry on with advantage the great and charitable work” of the church.

Our nationwide staff of ministry relationship officers works with pastors, ministry leaders, and individual donors to cultivate funds for mission and build communities of generosity throughout the church. Combining decades of pastoral and development experience, the officers help church leaders assess the financial health, generosity capacity, and stewardship practices of their congregations, then build on their strengths and address their weaknesses.

b. Project ReGeneration

Faithful stewardship of church resources always looks to the future because congregations go through life cycles. The closing of a church building can mean more than the end of a previously vibrant ministry. It can also mean the opportunity for the sale or transformation of that property into funds for new ministry. It can mean freeing an existing congregation from the burden of supporting a facility that no longer serves its mission needs.

The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) Foundation is partnering with churches and presbyteries across the denomination to discover and explore creative options for ministries that need adequate funding in order to grow and prosper. Endowment funds are among the many options available to leave a lasting legacy of the faith community by naming a ministry and specific purpose for the use of the fund and provide support in perpetuity.

c. Presbyterian Community

Presbyterians are generous by nature—we are passionate about mission and give joyfully to the projects, causes, and organizations that touch our hearts and engage our minds.

To help expedite that generosity, the Foundation has created The Presbyterian Community—a web-based giving hub with tools to facilitate easy online donations. We are excited about offering this important tool to our generous community.

Presbyterians can use the Community to discover and fund churches and charities that are sharing their gifts to heal the sick, feed the hungry, clothe and shelter the poor, educate and build up their communities, and promote the good news of Jesus Christ throughout the world.

d. Wills Emphasis

Annually, the Presbyterian Foundation offers a Wills Emphasis program to congregations throughout the denomination. At the program’s beginning in the 1950s, wills were the main focus of gift development. Currently, that focus has shifted to remembering the church in estate planning. While simple bequests in a will are still important, now the Foundation can provide guidance for complex estate plans in coordination with an individual’s tax and legal advisors.

To complement congregation-based bequest and planned giving efforts, available program resources include a leadership guide, bulletin inserts, bulletin covers, poster, and bookmarks. These materials are provided free of charge to any Presbyterian congregation—the only expenses are the shipping and handling costs.

e. A Change in Investment Management

Over the past two years, the Foundation leadership spent considerable time in congregations and middle governing bodies across the country asking how we might best serve our church and constituents. These conversations clearly indicated a desire for better church relations, investment performance, and more timely and high-quality reporting regarding investment performance and market conditions. Constituents also expressed a desire to see the Foundation focus on how it might best fulfill its mission to the church.

During that time, we carefully and comprehensively evaluated various investment-related approaches, and determined that the Foundation would do best to spend its time advancing the church’s mission while allowing trusted expert partners to manage the investments overseen by the Foundation.

To that end, the Foundation has partnered with Cambridge Associates, a world-class investment firm with expertise in managing foundation and endowment assets, to manage the permanent assets entrusted to us.

B. Report of the New Covenant Trust Company, N.A.

New Covenant Trust Company, N.A. (NCTC), a subsidiary of the Presbyterian Foundation, was chartered January 2, 1998. The company serves as trustee of various types of trust instruments in which there is a Presbyterian or Presbyterian-related beneficial interest and provides investment management services. The NCTC’s board has enacted policies and procedures to ensure compliance with banking laws and provides oversight of the delivery of services to the Presbyterian community.
Until February 22, 2012, NCTC, through its department, One Compass Advisors, served as the registered investment adviser to New Covenant Funds. On November 19, 2011, the New Covenant Funds board voted to select SEI Investments Management Corporation ("SIMC") to serve as the investment adviser to the Funds, subject to shareholder approval. The NCTC’s parent corporation, the Presbyterian Foundation, supported this change as part of its effort to listen to the feedback of its constituency and to simplify the Foundation’s structure. The NCTC will continue to provide shareholder services to New Covenant Funds, including providing social witness guidelines to SIMC so that the funds can continue to be invested according to Presbyterian principles. The NCTC and the Foundation remain committed to New Covenant Funds and the important purpose they serve. For additional information regarding the New Covenant Funds, please visit their website, www.newcovenantfunds.com.

The Foundation and NCTC consistently strive to deliver superior service to the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) and seek to enhance the vehicles available to Presbyterians to express their Christian faith and generous stewardship. We partner with Presbyterian and related organizations in the delivery of enhanced trust services, such as personal trusts, wholly charitable trusts, and charitable remainder trusts. The NCTC accepts IRA accounts and provides life and legacy financial planning. These estate-planning devices provide an opportunity to care for loved ones while providing for planned giving opportunities.

In response to changing needs, including a new business plan and reduced budget, in December 2011 the Foundation, as the majority shareholder of NCTC, reduced the size of NCTC’s board of directors and elected a new slate of directors.

C. The Board of Pensions of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) 2010–2011 Agency Summary

Marking the 295th Anniversary of the beginning of the work now carried on by this Board and presented to the 220th General Assembly (2012) meeting in Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, June 30–July 7, 2012.

The responsibilities assigned to the Board of Pensions by the General Assembly are

• the design and administration of a comprehensive program of retirement, death, disability, medical, and optional benefits for ministers, missionaries, and other church workers;
• the design and administration of a program of financial assistance to help meet needs that are beyond the scope of the pension and benefits program;
• the establishment and operation of a retirement housing program for eligible retirees and their spouses; and
• the receipt, investment, and disbursement of the funds required to support these plans and programs for the sole and exclusive benefit of members and beneficiaries of the Benefits Plan of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) and other beneficiaries of the assistance and retirement housing programs.

This report incorporates by reference the 2010 Annual Report and 2011 Annual Review of The Board of Pensions of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), in which the financial information for the Board of Pensions and the Plans and Programs it administers is presented.

1. The Benefits Plan of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.)

The Benefits Plan of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) provides pension benefits, death and disability benefits, medical benefits, optional benefits (supplemental death benefits, supplemental disability benefits, dental coverage, long-term care insurance, and a retirement savings plan), and a retirement and financial planning education program. The Book of Order (G-2.0804) mandates that all teaching elders (ministers of the Word and Sacrament) in installed positions must participate in the Benefits Plan. A particular church may also enroll other church employees in the Benefits Plan. Teaching elders in non-installed positions and employees of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) or affiliated organizations may also be enrolled in the Benefits Plan.

The Affiliated Benefits Program (ABP) offers the same benefits, including the Retirement Savings Plan but excluding the Pension Plan, to employing organizations for certain non-mandated employees of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) or affiliated organizations.

The 215th General Assembly (2003) approved changes to the Benefits Plan amendment process to accommodate biennial meetings of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). The right to amend the Benefits Plan is reserved solely to the Board of Pensions. Amendments to the Plan that constitute a reduction in Pension Plan benefits or an increase in Pension Plan dues are effective only upon approval by the General Assembly. The bylaws of the Board of Pensions require approval of a two-thirds majority of directors present at a duly constituted meeting to amend the Pension Plan except for a benefit reduction or a dues increase (which amendments require the approval of the General Assembly). The Board of Pensions must provide sixty days’ notice to the General Assembly, Plan members, local churches, and presbyteries of any amendment requiring General Assembly approval and reasonable notice of any other amendment to the Benefits Plan. These amendments are detailed in Item 20-A, Report on Benefits Plan Amendments.
2. The Community Nature of the Benefits Plan

The Benefits Plan of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), administered by the Board of Pensions, is designed to care for and protect the community of Benefits Plan members as a whole.

An employing organization’s cost of providing benefits for its employees enrolled for pension, medical, death, and disability benefits is not based on their marital status, gender, family size, or age. The dues contributed by the employing organization are instead based on a percentage of the participating members’ salaries and represent that organization’s share of the cost of protecting the entire community. The salaries used to determine the dues for the Pension Plan, the Death and Disability Plan, and the Medical Plan are subject to both minimum and maximum salary amounts.

In order to assist lower-paid employees, no employee accrues benefits at less than the median salary for his or her employment classification (i.e., teaching elder, lay exempt, lay nonexempt). Deductibles and copayment maximums are also set as a percentage of salary to lessen the impact on lower-paid members. In order to contain members’ out-of-pocket healthcare costs, there are caps on medical deductibles and copayment expenses for higher paid members.

Affiliated Benefits Program medical dues are uniformly determined based on the medical claims experience of the overall group. Dues for individual members are based on the specific cost-sharing policy of their employing organization and the participation levels selected by the member. Some members may choose employee-only coverage, while others may choose to cover an entire family. This flexibility is one of the key advantages of the Affiliated Benefits Program.

3. Pension Plan and Death and Disability Plan

Towers Watson, actuarial advisors for the Board of Pensions, reported that there continued to be sufficient funds on hand to meet the obligations to current and future retirees and disabled members as of December 31, 2011, the most recent valuation of the programs.

a. Pension Experience Apportionment and Disability Benefit Increases

Each year the directors of the Board of Pensions have the responsibility of determining whether the Pension Plan of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) should grant an experience apportionment. An experience apportionment is a permanent increase in the retirement benefits of all Plan members, including active, retired, and terminated vested members, and eligible survivors.

The decision to grant an apportionment is a way for the Pension Plan to share favorable actuarial and investment experience with Plan members. This sharing of experience is an unusual, if not unique, feature of the Pension Plan. It involves a balance between near-term benefit improvement and long-term security of future benefits.

The Board of Pensions has several overriding objectives in determining the experience apportionment:

• maintain the solvency of the Pension Plan,
• protect the benefits of both active and retired Pension Plan members against the impact of inflation, and
• achieve generational equity—meaning that, on a cumulative basis throughout its active and retirement years, one group of Pension Plan members should not fare materially better or worse in the granting of apportionments than any other group.

Unlike the Pension Plan experience apportionment, the disability benefit increase applies only to benefits currently being paid to disabled members. Most active members will not become disabled and will never receive disability benefits.

The purpose of granting a disability benefit increase is to protect the benefits paid to disabled members against the impact of inflation. Other than determining the adequacy of the contingency reserve to support the granting of an increase, the key considerations in arriving at an appropriate recommendation for a disability benefit increase are the annual change in cost of living and the rate at which the incomes of active church workers are increasing.

For descriptions of the processes used in determining whether to grant an experience apportionment or a disability benefit increase, see Item 20-A, Report on Benefits Plan Amendments of this report. The decisions made in 2010 and 2011 are described in detail there.

(2) Impact of Experience Apportionments

For the years 2002 through 2011, the following table shows the number of teaching elder plan members with at least fifteen years of service who retired at or after age sixty-five and the average annual amount of their pensions at the time of retirement. By applying the experience apportionments granted over the past ten years, the Pension Plan has been able to fulfill its intent to shelter both pension credits and retirement income from the inroads of inflation. The average pension with an inflationary increase based solely on the CPI is shown for comparison.

b. Other Changes to the Pension Plan, Death and Disability Plan, and Optional Programs

Details of other changes made to the Pension and Death and Disability Plans and various Optional Programs are offered in the Board of Pensions’ recommendation regarding the amendments to the Benefits Plan (Item 20-A, Report on Benefits Plan Amendments of this report).

4. Medical Plan

a. Plan Financing

Financially, 2010 was a pivotal year for the Medical Plan. For the first time in recent history, expenses, which include both claims and administrative expenses, exceeded dues income. In part, this reflected the intentional decision to hold dues to 19.5 percent of effective salary for the fourth consecutive year because of historically strong reserve levels. Rising medical trends, influenced by a higher number of catastrophic claims in 2010, contributed to a 5.8 percent increase in total expenses over the 2009 Plan Year. The 2010 claim expense included the cost of plan simplification, achieved by a series of plan changes, approved by the Board of Directors and detailed in the 2010 Report to the General Assembly, as well as the first year cost of the expanded habilitative service benefits for children with certain developmental disabilities. Similarly, in 2011, with modest provisional changes that were required under the Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act (PPACA), plan expenses increased another 4 percent. The dues percentage again remained flat, which contributed to a net loss of just over $12 million for the 2011 plan year.

Erosion of reserve levels, a shrinking dues base, an aging population, a volatile economic environment, and the uncertainty created by Healthcare Reform are some of the principal factors considered by the Board of Directors when they approved the first Traditional Medical Plan dues increase in five years, effective January 1, 2012. Dues for Active Medical Plan members were increased to 20.25 percent of effective salary, effective January 1, 2012, and will be increased to 21 percent of effective salary, effective January 1, 2013. The Minimum and Maximum Medical Plan dues basis increased as follows:
Concurrently, the Board of Directors approved increased member cost share through the following Medical Plan design changes:

It should be noted that, despite these economic results, the Book of Order participation mandate for those teaching elders in installed positions (G-2.0804) continues to play a significant role in the relative stability of plan cost through the avoidance of adverse selection by members who might otherwise pick and choose coverage, based on their individual health needs.

The enrollment flexibility that characterizes the Affiliated Benefits Program (ABP) as well as size of the covered population creates a bit more volatility for this self-supporting component of the Medical Plan. Annual dues increases were approved for this program in both 2010 and 2011 for the 2011 and 2012 plan years respectively. Specifically, the board of directors approved an increase of 4.4 percent, effective January 1, 2011, and an additional increase of just under 7 percent, effective January 1, 2012. Affected employing organizations largely reported, though, that these increases were more modest than those imposed by insurance carriers on other small employers in their geographical markets, making this a reliable and stable plan choice for them. Enrollment in this program, which now stands at approximately 2,400 members, has been steadily increasing for the past several years.

The Medicare Supplement Dues have been modestly increased in each of the past three years—2.6 percent effective January 1, 2010; 3 percent, effective January 1, 2011; and 4.9 percent, effective January 1, 2012. Contributing to the ability to hold these costs at a relatively stable level, despite the erosion of vacancy dues and investment earnings, were decreasing prescription drug trends and continued qualification for federal subsidies.

Coverage costs for members who retire before achieving Medicare eligibility and rely on the Medical Continuation program increased by 7 percent each year during this same period.

b. Healthcare Reform

The Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act (PPACA), signed into law in March 2010, has resulted in both incremental design and administrative changes for the Medical Plan and has raised some practical and philosophical questions about the plan’s future. Better known as Healthcare Reform, the act ushered in many changes that will take place over the next decade. At its foundation, the law was designed to provide all Americans with access to affordable quality health care, but in its final form, is likely to alter—in some cases significantly—the current employer-based system. Unlike predecessor laws affecting benefit programs, Healthcare Reform did not include any exemptions or exceptions for church plans. Regulations, which have been issued incrementally, required action by the board of directors at several of its meetings in 2010 and 2011. The specific regulations that have affected the plan are summarized below:

</table>
Pre-Existing Condition Exclusion

No pre-existing condition limitation may be imposed on dependent children under the age of 19.

Effective January 1, 2011. Plan amended and Board assumed additional liability with no corresponding dues adjustment.

Prohibition on Lifetime Dollar Maximums

A plan may not have lifetime limits on the dollar value of any benefits for any participant.

Effective January 1, 2011. Plan amended to remove the $3.5 million lifetime limit. Corresponding liability insignificant.

Rescission of Coverage

Coverage may only be retroactively terminated under very restrictive circumstances.

Preventive Care Standards

Plan must provide 100% coverage for prescribed preventive care services.

Effective January 1, 2011, for non-grandfathered plans; effective January 1, 2013, for all plans, coupled with expanded definition of preventive care services for women. Board’s historical commitment to preventive care resulted in early compliance and no additional risk.

Appeals Process

Plan must have an internal claims appeal process that complies with Section 503 of ERISA and a federal external review process.

Effective January 1, 2011 with a no-enforcement grace period until July 1, 2011, for non-grandfathered plans. January 1, 2012, compliance date for Board.

Grandfather Status

Plans in effect on March 23, 2010, had option to establish grandfather status with more limited compliance obligations on a temporary basis.

In light of the impact of Healthcare Reform on Medicare and Medicare Part D (prescription drug benefits), the board of directors also approved the implementation of an Employer Group Waiver Program, effective January 1, 2012, with Express Scripts. Under this arrangement, which essentially establishes the prescription drug coverage offered as part of the Medicare Supplement as its own qualified Medicare Part D plan, the Board of Pensions is entitled to significantly higher federal subsidies. The estimated 2012 subsidy gain of approximately $3 million was used as a direct offset in the dues calculation for the Medicare Supplement Program.

As the regulatory process continues to evolve, the focus of the Board of Pensions will be on both the additional incremental requirements and the longer term impact of a reformed healthcare system on the Benefits Plan. Staff will work collaboratively with other major denominational medical plans to develop and implement work plans, policies, procedures, and communication approaches that respond appropriately to the evolving rules and regulations. At the same time, the Board of Pensions will respond to the ongoing development of state-based health insurance exchanges by exploring the ways in which plan members might maximize the value of individual income-based subsidies.

Because communication with both members and employing organizations about the actual and potential impact of Healthcare Reform is so critical, the Board of Pensions has designed, developed, and launched a resource section on Pensions.org devoted exclusively to this topic. The communication challenge inherent in this period of uncertainty is exacerbated by both the political and judicial environment. A ruling from the U.S. Supreme Court on the constitutionality of the law—expected in late June 2012—and the outcome of the November elections will likely have some ultimate impact on the work of the Board of Pensions.

c. Third Party Vendor Management

The continued reliance of the Board of Pensions on Third Party Administrators (TPAs) to deliver an integrated benefit program to employing organizations and plan members makes it essential that rigorous performance standards for these vendors are contractually established and consistently measured. The internal audit team of the Board of Pensions, working in concert with specialized independent auditors, schedules regular audits for each of the TPAs to ensure their adherence to these standards. Annual vendor summits, held each summer since 2008 in the Philadelphia offices of the Board of Pensions, are designed to reinforce expectations about excellence of seamless service delivery that is entirely member focused. The 2010 summit concluded with a shared commitment by all Medical Plan third party partners to improve integration, which included, among other things:

- cross vendor training to ensure more complete knowledge of each others’ capabilities;
• more intentional warm transferring from vendor-to-vendor, where a representative of one vendor who is transferring a call from a member to another vendor will stay on the line until the second vendor answers to facilitate a smooth transition;

• shared communications and common messaging; and

• scheduled webinars and teleconferences for information sharing throughout the year.

The 2010 work on vendor integration culminated in the gathering of the vendors of the Board of Pensions at the Church Benefits Association’s annual conference in Austin, Texas, where they served as panel participants in a discussion on the benefits of clinical and service delivery integration. Led by an outside consultant, they individually and collectively acknowledged the leadership role of the Board of Pensions in creating a best practice model for high-quality and cost-effective service to members.

While much attention has been given to seamless and integrated service delivery, the protection of member data has remained a critical vendor management responsibility for the Board of Pensions. As relationships with business partners have expanded, the Board of Pensions has focused considerable attention on vendor adherence to and documentation of their data protection practices. In addition to requiring written documentation of data security protection practices, the Board of Pensions made this a central focus of the 2011 Vendor Summit, seeking information about the practical ways in which each business partner ensures the safety and security of plan members’ personal health information. All agreed that this topic should be a permanent agenda item for all future summits.

To ensure relative economic and administrative stability for the plan, the Board of Pensions seeks multiyear contractual relationships with these key business partners. The status and performance highlights of these contracts are summarized below.

• Highmark Blue Cross Blue Shield, with responsibility for adjudication of all medical claims (with the exception of behavioral health and prescription drug expenses), is operating under a three-year contract, scheduled to expire at the end of 2012. The efficacy of negotiated administrative fees is enhanced by the participation (and leadership) of the Board of Pensions in a purchasing coalition with other major denominations linked by their membership to the Church Benefit Association (CBA). As the host “Blue Card” plan, Highmark has consistently provided plan members with access to a high-quality and cost-effective national network of physician and hospital providers. The breadth and depth of the Blue Cross/Blue Shield network has resulted in an in-network utilization rate of over 97 percent and discount savings more than 58 percent in each of the last two years.

• Express Scripts, the Benefits Plan’s Pharmacy Benefit Manager, offered new pricing terms to the CBA coalition, extending their contract through the end of 2013. These pricing terms have already resulted in reduced prescription drug cost trends, driven primarily by further discounts in generic drug ingredient cost and more aggressively negotiated manufacturer rebates. Plan members’ increasing use of generic alternatives, deliberately driven through plan design, and their consistent use of the preferred home delivery distribution channel has contributed to more moderate trend increases for both the Traditional and Medicare Supplement prescription drug plans.

• Cigna Behavioral Health (CBH) has responsibility for managing and adjudicating behavioral health claims and for providing active plan members with an employee assistance plan (EAP). In concert with other CBA–member denominations, the Board of Pensions renegotiated its contract with CBH for two years, effective January 1, 2012, through December 31, 2013. This contract essentially represented an extension of a three-year contract that expired at the end of 2011. It included no increase to the in-force administrative fees, despite a rather substantial increase in utilization of behavioral health services in 2011, and an in-network paid claim rate of just over 56 percent.

• ActiveHealth Management (AHM), the health management partner of the Board of Pensions, is in the final year of a three-year contract. It is expected that a new multiyear contract will be negotiated and executed, effective January 1, 2013. In addition to providing disease and condition management support to the plan’s most at-risk members, AHM clinicians provide case management services to the critically ill and are responsible for pre-certifying certain high-cost tests and screenings to ensure their clinical appropriateness. The AHM contract specifically ties a significant portion of their administrative fees to the achievement of clinical improvements by plan members who actively engage in health-improvement programs with AHM nurse coaches. A close look at the clinical impact of the ActiveHealth disease management program revealed that between 2010 and 2011 three clinical measures, including blood pressure, cholesterol, and blood sugar levels, improved significantly among program participants. Because these results underscore the importance of member engagement, communication efforts have been and will continue to be targeted at building member understanding of health improvement opportunities and their value. The 2010 communications campaign focused on having members complete an online health assessment, which was designed to help AHM identify members who may benefit from one or more of their clinical support programs. While all communication materials included reminders about the importance of preventive care, claim data continued to reveal lower than expected rates of compliance with well-established standards of disease prevention. Consequently, the 2011 communication campaign, executed through a series of videos, was on the importance of routine care to overall health. The Board of Pensions will continue to monitor and measure the effectiveness of this messaging.
Adding to its already comprehensive array of fully covered preventive care services, the Benefits Plan was amended on January 1, 2011, to provide coverage to active plan members for routine eye exams. Through the execution of a four-year fully insured contract with VSP (Vision Service Plan), the plan now covers 100 percent of an in-network annual eye exam, subject to a $25 co-pay.

The commitment of the Board of Pensions to member health, to service excellence, and to the financial stability of the Medical Plan will continue to drive and shape emerging priorities, even as the complexities of the full implementation of Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act (PPACA) evolve.

5. Assistance Program

a. Overview

The Assistance Program of the Board of Pensions values the commitment and sacrifice of the men and women who are called to serve the church. The program acts as a safety net to meet the urgent and emergency financial needs of church workers and their families, consistent with the mission of the Board of Pensions in support of the ministry of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.).

The Assistance Program is designed to help address the financial needs of employees and retirees of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) that are beyond the scope of the Benefits Plan.

No Benefits Plan dues are used for the Assistance Program. Support for this program includes gifts, legacies directed to the Board of Pensions, endowment income, and half of the Christmas Joy Offering.

The Assistance Program consists of several financial assistance programs and a small retirement housing program.

b. Retirement Housing Program

The Retirement Housing Program was initiated in 1883 to provide housing for eligible ministers. This program consists of the Homes Program, which offers affordable housing in properties owned by the Board of Pensions, and the Housing Supplement Program, which gives financial assistance to help retirees maintain their own homes or move to retirement communities.

(1) The Homes Program

Persons who have served in the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) for twenty years or more are eligible for the Homes Program, which presently consists of twenty-two houses in a cluster called El Sombroso Oaks in Los Gatos, California. The amounts individuals pay in this program are structured so that residents pay according to their ability, contributing the lesser of:

- thirty percent of their total annual income, excluding post-retirement earned income or
- an appraised fair rental value of the home.

(2) Transition to the Housing Supplement Program

In recent years, more ministers have purchased homes during the course of their ministry than in earlier generations. This reality has lowered the demand for church-related retirement housing. Recognizing this shift, the Board of Pensions requested permission from the 200th General Assembly (1988) to change the Homes Program from one based solely on homes owned by the Board of Pensions to one based on housing assistance supplements. The General Assembly approved this change in strategic direction and authorized the sale of properties then owned and received thereafter, with the proceeds going to the Housing Supplement Program. The General Assembly withheld approval for the sale of two housing communities operated by the Board of Pensions and instructed it to continue its “ownership and management of the clusters at Morganwood in Swarthmore, Pennsylvania, and El Sombroso Oaks in Los Gatos, California, with no further sale of these clusters without General Assembly Approval” (Minutes, 1988, Part I, p. 97).

The 214th General Assembly (2002) approved the sale of Morganwood, a cluster of twenty-nine housing units. On October 29, 2003, an agreement of sale for Morganwood was signed with Swarthmore College, a Quaker-affiliated institution adjacent to the Morganwood property. The proceeds from the sale are used to support the Retirement Housing Program and to provide subsidies to current Morganwood residents. Under the agreement of sale, the current residents are entitled to continue living in their units until they choose to vacate them or at the expiration of twenty years from the closing date (January 14, 2004), whichever is earlier. The Board of Pensions provides subsidies to the continuing Presbyterian residents of Morganwood who are related to the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) and the Board of Pensions. These subsidies totaled approximately $122,000 for 2010 and $107,000 for 2011. Each year, the Board of Pensions reviews the subsidies with the residents to determine their future needs.
Similarly, the 215th General Assembly (2003) approved an affiliation agreement between Southern California Presbyterian Homes (SCPH) and Westminster Gardens. The agreement was signed by all parties, and the certificate of authority was received from the Department of Social Services in California, effective May 4, 2004.

Westminster Gardens, Duarte, California, was established in 1949, by the Board of Foreign Missions of the Presbyterian Church in the U.S.A., to care for retired missionaries. Since its founding, this retirement community has been available for retired church workers and their spouses. The denomination assigned responsibility for the oversight of the affairs of Westminster Gardens to the Board of Pensions in 1972.

Under the terms of the affiliation agreement, the Board of Pensions is providing rent subsidies to residents who are related to the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) and the Board of Pensions. The total amount of the subsidy was $98,000 in 2010 and $65,000 in 2011. These payments were in addition to the direct assistance provided to qualifying residents under the Board of Pensions Income and Housing Supplements Programs.

c. Financial Assistance Programs

The financial assistance programs go to the heart of Christian discipleship: serving people in need in the name of Jesus Christ. They provide emergency and on-going financial aid for members of the pension and healthcare plans and, for some programs, other employees of Presbyterian churches. They also work to strengthen future leadership for the church by providing strategic assistance and support to pastors.

In recent years, the Board of Pensions has introduced a number of pilot programs as it seeks to be more proactive in addressing the needs of church workers. These pilot programs are intended to complement the traditional assistance programs.

The financial assistance programs have been organized under three overarching categories:

1. Caring for Church Workers: Urgent Financial Needs

   a. Shared Grants: These grants are designed to meet the financial needs that an active or retired church worker is unable to afford. The objective is to help the person who has a financial problem with everyday needs or medical/dental costs not covered by the Benefits Plan or insurance. A grant is shared by a council and/or an employing organization and the Board of Pensions. Annual Shared Grants are usually approved for a calendar year but are disbursed monthly. Other Shared Grants are approved for a one-time payment or can be a monthly disbursement for a period of less than a calendar year.

   b. Emergency Assistance Grants: These grants are provided for one-time, special needs when no other financial resources are available. At times, members may have special needs that are beyond the scope of the Benefits Plan. Occasionally, councils and employing organizations are unable to participate in a Shared Grant because of insufficient funds.

   c. Adoption Assistance Grants: These grants are distributed to members of the Benefits Plan who adopted a child (under age 21) on or after January 1, 2006. One grant of $3,000 is given for each eligible adopted child to help defray the cost of the adoption. The monies for these grants come from gifts to the Assistance Program and the receipts from the Relief of Conscience Program.

   d. Transition-to-College Assistance Grants: These grants are distributed to eligible members of the traditional Benefits Plan who have a child enrolled as a full-time freshman at an accredited college or university and whose adjusted gross income is below twice the churchwide median salary. The grants are meant to help mitigate transitional, one-time expenses, such as the purchase of a computer, dorm room furnishings, and other expenses that are not covered by traditional financial aid.

2. Caring for Retired Church Workers: Financial and Housing Needs

   a. Income Supplements: These supplements are designed to raise the monthly income of retired church workers and their surviving spouses whose total annual income from all sources is below levels established by the Board of Pensions. The guidelines for the Income Supplement program are reviewed each year. The guideline levels for 2010 were $26,760 for a single person and $32,700 for a married couple. The guidelines were not increased in 2011 due to a reduction in Christmas Joy Offering receipts and adverse financial market returns.

   b. Housing Supplements: These supplements provide financial assistance to help eligible retirees and their surviving spouses remain in their own homes or move to a retirement facility in a location of their choice. Each year the guideline for the Housing Supplements program is reviewed. The maximum annual income level guideline for Housing Supplement eligibility in 2010 was $39,450. This program is the financial assistance component of the Retirement Housing Program. The guidelines were not increased in 2011 due to a reduction in Christmas Joy Offering receipts and adverse financial market returns.
Caring for Pastoral Leadership: Leadership and Retention

(a) Seminary Debt Assistance Grants: These grants are provided to teaching elders who have graduated from seminary or theological school and are serving in the first seven years of ministry after ordination. To be eligible, a teaching elder must be in a full-time, called, pastoral position in a PC(USA) church of fewer than 150 members. An eligible teaching elder may receive a grant of up to $1,500 per year for up to four years to help repay loans incurred while pursuing education leading to a Master of Divinity degree.

(b) Sabbath Sabbatical Support Grants: These grants are designed to help pastors serving congregations of fewer than 200 members take sabbaticals that will strengthen their skills and renew their ministries. The grants are for $3,000. This program is administered in cooperation with mid councils.

(c) Presbyterian CREDO: This program is modeled after a very successful program of the Church Pension Fund of the Episcopal Church. Its mission is to provide opportunities for clergy to examine significant areas of their lives and to prayerfully discern the future direction of their vocation as they respond to God’s call in a lifelong process of practice and transformation. A Presbyterian CREDO conference provides time for clergy to step back from the non-stop pace of ordained ministry. It provides a foundation for participants to embrace wellness and prayerfully discern the direction of their personal and professional lives. Each participant commits to extensive reflection through pre-conference instruments and surveys that focus on personal and professional wellness. The eight-day curriculum is designed to trigger personal discovery through guided reflection, introspection, and dialogue. Thirty-three conferences have been held in the seven-year history of the program and more than 890 individuals have benefited from the experience of attending a CREDO conference.

(d) Financial Considerations

The downturn in the financial and investment markets in recent years has had an adverse effect on the Assistance Program assets and spending formula. In addition, the Board of Pensions has also experienced a decline in Christmas Joy Offering receipts. In response to this situation, the Board of Pensions has evaluated and repositioned its programs in order to ensure the long-term financial health of the Assistance Program. Primary consideration has been given to maintaining the need-based (safety net) programs. Other programs will be evaluated based on the stated mission of the Assistance Program, the individual benefit to eligible participants, and the overall benefit to the mission and ministry of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.).

In addition, a number of specific cost reduction actions were taken: The Income and Housing Supplement guidelines were not increased in 2011, the Middle Governing Body Grant Program was discontinued, and the Presbyterian CREDO program postponed a planned expansion of the program until a future date.

e. Funds Development

In response to the continuing and emerging needs of ministry and the challenges facing those who serve the church, the Board of Pensions has begun a more deliberate phase in its funds development effort.

The Christmas Joy Offering remains a vital financial support to the Assistance Program, and the Board of Pensions continues to work with the Racial Ethnic Schools and Colleges and the General Assembly Mission Council staff to promote this denomination-wide offering. However, since the receipts from the offering have declined over recent years and Benefits Plan dues are not used for the Assistance Program, the Board of Pensions has determined that additional financial support, beyond half of the Christmas Joy Offering, is required to meet the increasing demands on existing programs and to fund new programs to meet emerging needs.

To ensure communication with other national entities of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) that are also seeking contributions, the Board of Pensions and the other national agencies developed the “Principles of Funds Development.” In 2003, the agency heads agreed to use these principles as a basis for coordinating their efforts.

The Board of Pensions has selected a theme for funds development communications (“Keeping Our Promises”) and established the online capability for contributions through the Board of Pensions Web site, Pensions.org. It also established a planned giving initiative to encourage deferred gifts. A Gift Acceptance Policy has been approved.

A major new initiative in this arena was undertaken in 2011. The Board of Pensions entered into a collaborative funds development relationship with the Presbyterian Foundation, which will allow the two organizations to take advantage of complementary synergies. The Board of Pensions’ Chief Development Officer will commit part of his time to working with the Foundation to develop and train their Ministerial Relations Officers (MROs), communicate a vision, and implement the strategy for the MROs. It is envisioned that the Foundation’s MROs will work with the Board’s Regional Representatives to develop relationships and promote funds development in the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). The Board of Pensions’ Chief Development Officer will also be the Chief Ministerial Relations Officer of the Presbyterian Foundation. This collaboration will help avoid unnecessary duplication of expenses. The purpose of this initiative by the Board of Pensions and the Foundation is to work collaboratively on areas of common interest. It is anticipated that this collaboration will expand in the future to include other agencies of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.).
Through these efforts, the Board of Pensions’ Assistance Program hopes to ensure that there will be sufficient resources in the future to “keep our promises” to provide assistance and leadership training to the men and women who have faithfully served the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.).
Item 21-01

[In response to Item 21-01, the assembly approved an alternate resolution. See p. 64.]

On Instructing MRTI to Study and Report Corporate Practices of Health Insurance Companies and Possible Divestment of Same—From the Presbytery of Mid-Kentucky.

The Presbytery of Mid-Kentucky respectfully overtures the 220th General Assembly (2012) to instruct Mission Responsibility Through Investment (MRTI) to report to the General Assembly Mission Council on the corporate practices of Cigna, Aetna, Humana, WellPoint, United Health Care health insurance companies—in particular as such practices compare with and relate to previous General Assembly actions relative to health care. The General Assembly Mission Council is authorized and encouraged to act on this information, and, as it deems appropriate, implement divestment procedures as well as encourage individual Presbyterians and congregations to divest of holdings in the said companies; and, in view of the urgency of the ongoing health-care crisis, to take action within six months of the approval of this recommendation. The General Assembly Mission Council is to report to the 221st General Assembly (2014) on divestment actions.

1. The MRTI Committee is instructed to request information and explanations of health insurance company policy and practice on: state and federal lobbying expenditures and political/campaign contributions, government subsidies and profit margins related to provisions of the healthcare ‘reform’ legislation, aggregate data on increases in premiums and deductibles over the past ten years, categories and percentages of claims denied, and percentages of profits used in compensating top executives in comparison with return to shareholders.

2. The MRTI Committee is instructed to be in conversation with the PC(USA) Board of Pensions to ensure the PC(USA) health plan submits to the same standards that PC(USA), through MRTI, asks of other insurers.

3. Based on this corporate engagement and analysis, a summary of which shall be posted, MRTI is asked to evaluate the variance between church principles of universal access and affordability and corporate objectives, to assess the likelihood of significant change in corporate behavior, and to recommend to the GAMC and General Assembly measures, including possible divestment, that would strengthen the integrity of the church’s practice.

4. The GAMC, the Presbyterian Foundation, and the Board of Pensions, in turn, are requested to report on their actions (or request guidance) to the 221st and 222nd General Assembly (2014 and 2016), with an eye to guiding individual Presbyterians, congregations, and mid councils in relation to their own investment holdings in this major part of the economy.

5. The Office of Public Witness and other Presbyterian bodies are encouraged to continue to support cost-effective health coverage for all through the single payer (or expanded Medicare) model common elsewhere in the developed world, and, to support making health care affordable and transparent.

Rationale

The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) has consistently called for fundamental reform of United States healthcare systems and in 2008 “endorse[d] in principle the provision of single-payer universal health care reform … as the program that best responds to the moral imperative of the gospel” (Minutes, 2008, Part I, p. 1133).

The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) and its predecessors have long concerned itself with national health-care policy, seeking to promote healthier individuals in a healthier society. “For over 60 years, Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) General Assemblies have been calling for reform of the U.S. health system, urging the establishment of a national medical plan that will ensure health coverage for all persons residing in the United States.”—2009 Communication of the PC(USA) Washington Office.

The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), in its healthcare policy statements, has repeatedly pointed to issues of quality, equity, and accessibility.

These statements are based on several crucial theological points; and implicit in these is the conviction that health care is a human right—a conviction that is voiced in the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, in the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights, and in the World Religious Summit meeting in Winnipeg, Manitoba, in June 2010.

Such statements, including the endorsement of the 218th General Assembly (2008) of a single-payer policy, are meant to inform and guide its total mission, and are meant to be reflected in the actions and pronouncements of the constituent parts of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.).

One instrument for implementation of its mission is church investment policy with the corresponding option to divest from those companies that actively oppose its mission goals.
Violation of a basic human right, such as the right to health care, is one of several criteria by which corporate behavior may be evaluated. [See MRTI priority issues work plan and historical involvements relative to both health care and human rights at its web page—http://gamc.pcusa.org/ministries/mrti/]

Since the primary mission of for-profit insurance companies is to make a profit for their investors and since they are not themselves providers, by definition they decrease rather than increase access to health care.

For-profit health insurance companies consciously and deliberately oppose the above health-care principles and policy goals of the PC(USA) in order to fulfill their for-profit mission.

The actions of for-profit health insurance companies have brought untold suffering and hardship in both the private and public spheres, and have obstructed the development of healthier individuals in a healthier society.

Health-care reform legislation enacted by the U.S. Congress in 2010 only strengthens the decision-making role of for-profit health insurance companies in matters affecting individuals’ access to health care.

The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) has no obligation to support such companies through investment but, to the contrary, has a moral obligation to withdraw financially from them to the extent that they are detrimental to the goal of equal access to health care.

For-profit health insurance companies produce no product for the public good but instead increase exposure to the financial ruin of individuals and the society as a whole.

Full text of the 218th General Assembly (2008) resolution:

The Presbytery of Pittsburgh overtures the 218th General Assembly (2008) to do the following:

1. Endorse in principle the provision of single-payer universal health care reform in which health care services are privately provided and publicly financed.

2. Direct the General Assembly Council, through appropriate offices including the National Health Ministries, the Washington Office, and the Presbyterian Health, Education, and Welfare Association (PHEWA), to advocate for, educate about, and otherwise pursue the goal of obtaining legislation that enacts single-payer, universal national health insurance as the program that best responds to the moral imperative of the gospel; monitoring progress toward this goal and reporting back to the next two General Assemblies (2010 and 2012).

3. Direct the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly to send a copy of this resolution to the appropriate committee chairs of the U.S. Congress and to the Washington and United Nations offices of the PC(USA).

4. Direct that $25,000 from the Mission budget of the PC(USA) be sent to the PACT Network of PHEWA for the purpose of holding ten regional, one-day seminars supporting single payer universal healthcare reform, moneys to be allocated on a first-come, first-served basis. (Minutes, 2008, Part I, pp. 1133–34)

Accessibility: We believe that all people possess inherent worth as children of God, and that God’s promise extends to all. Health coverage must be available to all persons living in the United States, “regardless of income, race or ethnicity, geography, age, gender, [employment status,] or health status (Minutes, 1994, Part I, p. 574; cf. Minutes, 2002, Part I, p. 634).

Equity: “Because the right to acquire adequate health care springs out of our worth as living human beings, rather than out of any particular merit or achievement belonging to some but not to others, ‘adequate’ health care should be defined equally for all people” (Minutes, PCUS, 1976, Part I, p. 203, cf. pp. 203–207).

Responsible Financing: “Since society has an interest in the health of its people, those individuals and organizations who can pay should help to finance the care of those individuals and families who cannot pay” (Minutes, 1991, Part I, p. 817). While concerns for the costs of health care are appropriate, these concerns must continually be balanced against the objectives of adequate, quality care for all. The sacrifice of access and quality at the shrine of cost containment is too high a price to pay and should not be tolerated” (Minutes, 1988, Part I, p. 525.)

In August, 2009, the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly, responding to #3 (above), wrote: “Jesus Christ, who has reconciled us to God, healed all kinds of sickness (Mt. 4:23) as a sign of God’s rule. Isaiah speaks God’s word to say ‘No more shall there be … “an infant that lives but a few days, or an old person who does not live out a lifetime”’(Isa. 65:20a). We, as Reformed Christians, witness to Jesus Christ in word, but also in deed. As followers of our Great Physician Jesus, we have a moral imperative to work to assure that everyone has full access to health care. … The U.S. spends nearly twice as much per capita than any other country on health care, but we rank poorly in the thirty-seven categories of health status measured by the World Health Organization. The rise in childhood obesity, asthma, diabetes, and other chronic diseases indicates that the overall health status of people of this country is declining. We are warned by the prophets not to heal the wounds of God’s people lightly; yet in 2006 the aggregate profits of the health insurance companies in the United States were $68 billion. During that same year more than 15,000 families were forced into bankruptcy because of medical expenses. …
“Our federal government already operates efficiently and with low overhead the health delivery programs of Medicare and Medicaid; and yet at the same time insurance companies spend nearly one-third of every premium dollar on marketing and other administrative costs and in fact, several such companies spend less than 60 percent of premium dollars they receive on health services. The American College of Physicians, the nation’s second largest physician group, has endorsed a single-payer healthcare system. Only a single-payer system of national health care coverage (privately provided; publicly financed; not socialized medicine) can save what is estimated to be $350 billion wasted annually on medical bureaucracy and redirect those funds to expanded coverage.”

In support of the above resolution at the 218th General Assembly (2008), our denomination’s Advisory Council on Social Witness Policy stated: “Commissioners may wish to reflect on whether the highest ever numbers of uninsured Americans (not including undocumented immigrants) and the data on increasing life expectancy among Americans confirm the need for a forthright new advocacy by the church.”

From The Universal Declaration of Human Rights, Article 25: (1) Everyone has the right to a standard of living adequate for the health and well-being of himself and of his family, including food, clothing, housing and medical care and necessary social services, and the right to security in the event of unemployment, sickness, disability, widowhood, old age or other lack of livelihood in circumstances beyond his control. (2) Motherhood and childhood are entitled to special care and assistance. All children, whether born in or out of wedlock, shall enjoy and same social protection.” From the Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights, Article 12: “The States Parties to the present Covenant recognize the right of everyone to the enjoyment of the highest attainable standard of physical and mental health.” From the report of the World Religious Summit (June, 2010): “All countries must to their part…and put in place poverty reduction policies that ensure everyone has access to basic rights such as nutritious food, safe water, health care, education and economic opportunity.”

‘The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) believes that church investment is more that a practical question. It is also ‘an instrument of mission and includes theological, social and economic considerations.’ This belief flows from our understanding of the stewardship of God’s resources entrusted to the church. Thus, ‘we confess that the Lord is really the acknowledged Master of our entire life—moral, physical and material’” (MRTI, A Christian Call to Faith-Based Investing).

For-profit health insurance companies opposition to health care as a human right:

Vis-à-vis patients:

By company policies and positions designed to support shareholder profits and exorbitant salaries of management personnel through denying coverage or denying funding of the treatment of patients, and by providing financial incentives to their employees to do so.

Vis-à-vis providers and patients:

By interfering in the doctor-patient relationship and preventing providers from treating patients on the basis of their informed clinical judgment through denial of treatment as well as the application of financial penalty and censure for “excessive-treatment.”

By constant upward pressure on patient premiums, deductibles and co-pays while applying downward pressure on provider reimbursement. (See Secretary Sebellius’ February, 2010 report, “Insurance Companies Prosper, Families Suffer – Our Broken Health Insurance System”).

Vis-à-vis legislation:

By spending hundreds of millions of patient and taxpayer generated dollars to lobby in Washington and in state capitals, effectively buying unrepresentative power and influence to thwart efforts toward making affordable, comprehensive access for all a reality.

By donating directly and indirectly additional hundreds of millions of patient premium and taxpayer generated dollars to the election campaigns of candidates of both political parties in order to assure that legislators support maintenance of their power.

By undermining democratic processes through the infusion of billions of dollars into the deliberative process at every turn to override the well-documented majorities of citizens, physicians and nurses that prefer an improved “Medicare for all” solution to our health care crisis.

Vis-à-vis insurance company employees and investors:

By putting them in the morally and ethically untenable position of making the viability of their employment and investment dependent on subordinating the health care of millions to the profit-making of a few.

Vis-à-vis employers and their employees:

By making them less competitive in the global market place by the addition of exorbitant employee health care costs (that also discourage entrepreneurial initiatives on their part).

By being forced to reduce coverage for employees and their families in order to remain competitive in the domestic market as well.

By reducing the motivation to bring on new hires even when it would be advantageous to do so because of associated health care costs.
Untold suffering:

- In the form of tens of thousands of deaths annually due to lack of accessibility to adequate health care.
- In the form of workers inability to change jobs or move to jobs in other locations due to lack of portability of coverage.
- In the form of pressure to under staff hospitals due to the instability of hospital revenue from for-profit insurance payments and forced early discharges, making those institutions themselves an increased threat to the health of patients from medical mistakes, increased infection rates and unmet patient needs.
- In the form of lack of quality in overall health system performance

According to the World Health Organization the U.S. is ranked #37 in the world. In WHO’s 2000 report, the U.S. ranked 30th in preventable deaths before age five – a terrible testimony to how poor the quality of our health system is. In the form of driving patients, both insured and uninsured, into bankruptcy and poverty due to health care costs.

In the form of fear, demoralization and distraction in the hearts and minds of millions of Americans due to financial ruin if they become injured or ill; suffering from untreated preventable diseases; suffering from diseases diagnosed too late; needless premature death and disability with all its pernicious effects on not just individuals but families, communities and our entire population.

Recently passed health care reform legislation:

Until the 1990s the U.S. health insurance market was dominated by nonprofit companies with essentially charitable missions. From 1990–2005 the industry underwent major consolidation and the near-eliminating of not-for-profits. This trend will continue under the Affordable Care Act. No other country has for-profit health insurance companies like the U.S. The only way for these companies to make a profit for their shareholders is to find ways not to pay for the care of the sick. This is the basic flaw in for-profit health insurance. Nor do they further medical research or innovation. They add no social value to justify their profits and the negative effects they inflict on the entire medical system.

Concurrence to Item 21-01 from the Presbyteries of Long Island, New York City, and West Jersey.

Concurrence to Item 21-01 from the Presbytery of Albany (With Additional Rationale)

Rationale

It is important that the PC(USA)’s practical response to significant social issues be consistent with our statements and positions on those issues. The Presbytery of Mid-Kentucky has provided ample background to demonstrate that our denomination’s prior General Assemblies have been very clear on several points: (a) endorsement of a single-payer universal health-care reform; (b) the conviction that access to health care is a basic right and not a privilege reserved for the wealthy; and (c) that the for-profit health insurance industry impedes the provision of health care to all citizens by denying coverage and/or care to patients and by interfering in the doctor patient relationship. One of the ways in which the PC(USA) can stand against the injustices perpetrated by the for-profit health insurance industry is to refuse to participate financially in that system, which may include divestment from such companies and the encouragement to individuals and congregations to follow suit. This is consistent with practices of past General Assemblies in seeking to redress unjust situations.

ACSWP ADVICE AND COUNSEL ON ITEM 21-01

Advice and Counsel on Item 21-01—From the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP).

Item 21-01 calls for instructing MRTI to study and report corporate practices of health insurance companies and possible divestment of same.

The Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP) advises the approval of an alternate resolution, to read as follows:

“1. The MRTI Committee is instructed to request information and explanations of health insurance company policy and practice on: state and federal lobbying expenditures and political/campaign contributions, government subsidies and profit margins related to provisions of the healthcare “reform” legislation, aggregate data on increases in premiums and deductibles over the past ten years, categories and percentages of claims denied, and percentages of profits used in compensating top executives in comparison with return to shareholders.

“2. Based on this corporate engagement and analysis, a summary of which shall be posted, MRTI is asked to evaluate the variance between church principles of universal access and affordability and corporate objectives, to assess the likelihood of significant change in corporate behavior, and to recommend to the GAMC and General Assembly measures, including possible divestment and possible change of Board of Pensions providers, that would strengthen the integrity of the church’s practice.
“3. The GAMC, the Presbyterian Foundation, and the Board of Pensions, in turn, are requested to report on their actions (or request guidance) to the 221st and 222nd General Assembly (2014) and (2016), with an eye to guiding individual Presbyterians and congregations in relation to their own investment holdings in this major part of the economy.

“4. The Office of Public Witness and other Presbyterian bodies are encouraged to continue to support cost-effective health coverage for all through the single payer (or expanded Medicare) model common elsewhere in the developed world, and, particularly if provisions of the new healthcare legislation are struck down by the Supreme Court, to support a ‘public option’ and other measures to increase competitiveness, affordability, and transparency in health-insurance coverage.”

Rationale

The proposed alternate resolution rewords the overture in a manner consistent with the corporate engagement process outlined in the General Assembly comment. The categories for inquiry in Recommendation 1 are derived from the rationale to the overture itself and would overlap with information provided state insurance commissioners. The fourth recommendation reflects the public debate over healthcare, which represents more than an eighth of the U.S. economy.

Given the low cost-effectiveness of U.S. healthcare among developed nations and the likelihood of an ongoing healthcare crisis for millions of U.S. citizens, this resolution reaffirms the economic logic of the single payer system recognized by the 218th General Assembly (2008) and encourages informed, prompt, and forthright action by the church as an ethical investor. A recent article describes the continuing struggle of Americans with costs and coverage: http://www.mcclatchydc.com/2012/05/07/147985/health-care-increasingly-out-of.html.

ACREC ADVICE AND COUNSEL ON ITEM 21-01

Advice and Counsel on Overture 21-01—From the Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns (ACREC).

The Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns advises that the 220th General Assembly (2012) approve Item 21-01.

Rationale

The Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns believes that access to healthcare is a human right and that every individual should have access to affordable healthcare. Because the level of profits of healthcare insurance companies are not regulated, profits from what we consider a human right are currently at record levels.

With today’s high level of profits and executive pay at these insurance companies, the group at the bottom of the ladder are finding it more and more difficult to purchase and maintain healthcare, which has led to close to fifty million Americans without healthcare insurance. The lion’s share of this fifty million are people from across the spectrum of the racial ethnic community who out of desperation, end up getting their healthcare needs met at hospital emergency rooms.

In today’s environment of gridlock in our government, ACREC believes that unless these corporations are pressured by shareholders to make available more affordable healthcare options, the current inefficient and inequitable system will not only persist, but will grow, especially in racial ethnic communities.

ACWC ADVICE AND COUNSEL ON ITEM 21-01

Advice and Counsel on Item 21-01—From the Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns (ACWC).

The Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns advises that the 220th General Assembly (2012) approve Item 21-01.

Rationale

The United States is suffering through an extended and deplorable crisis in health care that is inequitable and contentious. The 218th General Assembly (2008) recognized this crisis when it agreed that the single-payer system is the way to provide all residents with health care as a human right. Unfortunately, the for-profit health-care system that exists currently allows insurance companies to benefit financially from denying and dropping coverage for people. Profits are placed before people, and women typically bear the heaviest burden of this practice.

While the Affordable Care Act has and will continue to keep in check some of the unethical practices of insurance providers, those providers are and will continue to be making a profit off a basic human right—access to affordable health care. Further, the new law is ineffective in preventing certain industry practices, such as rescission, which allows insurance companies to systematically drop coverage of patients shortly after they are diagnosed with life-threatening conditions. One example of this odious practice was reported in April of 2010 after federal investigators exposed the fact that WellPoint specifically targeted women with breast cancer “for aggressive investigation with the intent to cancel their policies.” The practice of rescission is not uncommon among insurance companies. Unfortunately, many experts note that the new health-care legislation does not provide for enforcement or regulatory powers to substantially reduce or stop the practice.

The continuation of this for-profit system ensures the continuation of high costs for medical care. Premiums have increased 50 percent in the past seven years, and more than six out of ten Americans currently live in states where their premiums use up a fifth or more of median earnings. Women, who are more often unemployed, underemployed, and supporting children, are clearly most heavily affected by this.

As those who believe that health care is a basic human right and that providing universal access to such is the best response to the moral imperative of the gospel, we cannot continue to invest our money in places where practices such as those mentioned above go unchallenged. It is our responsibility as those who have been given much to see to it that our investments are not supporting practices that are in contradiction with what we believe as followers of Christ. Given the evidence we’ve seen that suggests unethical and immoral practices by insurance providers combined with our call to be faithful to the gospel, we agree that the corporate practices of health insurance companies in which the PC(USA) is invested should be studied.

GAMC COMMENT ON ITEM 21-01

Comment on Item 21-01—From the General Assembly Mission Council.

By its very nature, the corporate engagement process takes time, often years, and works well the vast majority of the time without ever reaching the final step, which is divestment. In the opinion of the GAMC and MRTI, the customary corporate engagement process works best when given adequate time (that is, usually more than six months) and flexibility to achieve its primary goal—a change in corporate practices. We suggest that if the assembly wishes to lift up the issue raised in the overture, it would be preferable to commend them to MRTI for its work through the customary corporate engagement process.

This overture, if approved, would “instruct Mission Responsibility Through Investment (MRTI) to report to the GAMC on the corporate practices of” five named health insurance companies as those practices “compare with and relate to previous General Assembly actions relative to health care.” The General Assembly is requested to authorize and encourage the GAMC to act upon the MRTI’s report as it deems appropriate, including initiating divestment procedures, within six months, and report to the 221st General Assembly (2014) on divestment actions.

The GAMC notes that the 116th General Assembly (1976) of the Presbyterian Church in the U.S. (Minutes, PCUS, 1976, Part I, pp. 513–18) adopted a policy on Social Responsibility and Investments that listed eight investor actions, including divestment that can be utilized to assess corporate practices, and if appropriate, promote a change in those practices. The 196th General Assembly (1984) (Minutes, 1984, Part I, pp. 193–94) affirmed the use of divestment as an ethical strategy for socially responsible investment, and outlined principles and criteria for its use. The following year, the 197th General Assembly (1985) (Minutes, 1985, Part I, pp. 282–32) adopted a process of “selective, phased divestment” built around a corporate engagement process of careful research, interaction with identified corporations, use of engagement tools available to shareholders (correspondence, dialogues, proxy voting, posing questions at corporate annual meetings, and filing of shareholder resolutions that may lead to further dialogue), and ecumenical consultation whenever possible. As a last resort, divestment may be recommended to the General Assembly if corporate engagement has not succeeded, and is unlikely to succeed in the future in changing corporate practices.

Item 21-02

[The assembly approved Item 21-02 with amendment. See pp. 64, 65.]

On Instructing the General Assembly to Take Action to Implement the PC(USA)’s Policy on Inclusion of People with Disabilities—From the Presbytery of the Twin Cities Area.

The Presbytery of the Twin Cities Area respectfully overtures the 220th General Assembly (2012) to take the following actions to implement Living into the Body of Christ: Towards Full Inclusion of People with Disabilities, the policy approved by the 217th General Assembly (2006) (Minutes, 2006, Part I, p. 919ff):
1. Affirm that persons with disabilities are distinct cultures within the rich multicultural makeup of the PC(USA).

[2. Direct the General Assembly Mission Council (GAMC), the Office of the General Assembly, the Presbyterian Foundation, the Presbyterian Investment and Loan Program, Inc., the Presbyterian Publishing Corporation, and the Board of Pensions to form a working group that includes human resources staff from each entity and representatives from Presbyterians for Disability Concerns (PDC) and the disability consultants in order to develop a plan for training all entity staff, commissioners to GAMC, and all commissioners to General Assembly in disability awareness and inclusion. The working group will meet three times before the 221st General Assembly (2014) and report back its plan at the 221st General Assembly (2014). The plan may include contracting with a third party if agreed to and approved by PDC and the disability consultants.]

3. [Direct the GAMC to fund, with new money, the disability consultants at a level that includes travel expenses and to fund, with new money, disability consultants and PDC volunteers for travel expenses for consulting with PC(USA) staff in developing the new training plan.] [Fund the working group with new financial resources of $10,060 in 2013 and $6,360 in 2014 to be designated as directed by the working group.]

4. [Direct the Stated Clerk to form a working group that includes human resources staff from General Assembly Mission Council (GAMC), the Office of the General Assembly, the Presbyterian Foundation, the Presbyterian Investment and Loan Program, Inc., the Presbyterian Publishing Corporation, and the Board of Pensions to form a working group that includes human resources staff from each entity and representatives from Presbyterians for Disability Concerns (PDC) and the disability consultants in order to develop cost-effective training materials (web-based or otherwise) and to develop a plan for training all entity staff, commissioners to GAMC, and all commissioners to General Assembly in disability awareness and inclusion. In turn, advise and commend mid council staff and commissioners to take these training materials back to their presbyteries for use and implementation by each presbytery and its councils and mission entities. The working group will meet three times before the 221st General Assembly (2014) and report back its plan at the 221st General Assembly (2014). The plan may include contracting with a third party if agreed to and approved by PDC and the disability consultants.]

5. [Direct the appropriate GAMC entity to place a link on the homepage of the PC(USA) to the policy of ‘Living Into the Body of Christ: Towards Full Inclusion of People with Disabilities’ and to encourage church-wide study and implementation of the policy.]

6. Direct PC(USA) entities to report back to the 221st General Assembly (2014) the progress that has been made since the 220th General Assembly (2012) and the plan that fulfills the recommendations in this overture.

7. Ask the General Assembly to provide the necessary equipment for all disabled commissioners and delegates with disabilities for full participation.

Rationale

All members of the body of Christ, including people who live with disabilities, have been given gifts for service and are called to share them with the church for the glory of God. The Old Testament prophets called God’s people to “do justice” and included people with disabilities in the gathered people of God. Jesus called all people, including the marginalized of his society, to share in God’s great banquet. Jesus’ ministry of healing was ministry of inclusion that restored persons to their communities. Persons who live with disabilities have gifts of inclusion, knowledge, and insight that have come out of their own faith experience as they have faced barriers and exclusion, and as the church is poorer without these gifts. Including people with disabilities in leadership, including worship, is a powerful and visible witness to God’s love for all persons and God’s gifts to all persons.

The PC(USA) is called to be a prophetic witness and to model justice for all people in our society. Persons with disabilities are a minority culture within church and society and have in common the experience of facing barriers and exclusion in both church and society.
The Constitution of the PC(USA) instructs the church to “hear the voices of people long silenced,” and the voices of people who live with disabilities are not being heard in the church.

Living into the Body of Christ: Towards Full Inclusion of People with Disabilities calls the church to do justice for people with disabilities and offers a vision of God’s dream for the world and for Christ’s church.

Person-first language affirms that persons with disabilities are created in the image of God and are persons first, not defined by their disabilities.

Living into the Body of Christ: Towards Full Inclusion of People with Disabilities includes no call for disability inclusion training for staff of the six entities of the PC(USA), for members of the General Assembly Mission Council, or for commissioners to General Assembly.

Resources are available within the PC(USA) to work with human resources staff in developing a plan for training.

It is now time, in 2012, for the 220th General Assembly (2012) to follow the words of Scripture, the instruction in the Constitution of PC(USA), and the policy approved by the 217th General Assembly (2006) in order to move the church forward toward full inclusion of people with disabilities.

Endnotes

i. “Now there are varieties of gifts, but the same Spirit; and there are varieties of services, but the same Lord; and there are varieties of activities, but it is the same God who activates all of them in everyone. To each is given the manifestation of the Spirit for the common good.” (1 Cor. 12:4-7)

ii. “… we are all called, regardless of our abilities or limitations, to grow and live into the body of Christ, with Christ as the head of the body of which we are members. No one is excused from this gladsome task of discipleship, being and becoming a disciple of Christ. We must all, individually and communally, ‘… grow up in every way into him who is the head, into Christ … [promoting] the body’s growth in building itself up in love’” (Eph. 4:15–16, NRSV). “(Living into the Body of Christ: Towards Full Inclusion of People with Disabilities, Minutes, 2006, Part I, p. 927)

iii. “He has told you, O mortal, what is good; and what does the Lord require of you but to do justice, and to love kindness, and to walk humbly with your God?” (Mic. 6:8)

iv. “See, I am going to bring them from the land of the north, and gather them from the farthest parts of the earth, among them the blind and the lame, those with child and those in labor, together; a great company, they shall return here.” (Jer. 31:8)

v. “Then the owner of the house …. said to his slave, ‘Go out at once into the streets and lanes of the town and bring in the poor, the crippled, the blind, and the lame.’” (Lk. 14:21)

“For first century people, it was one’s sense of being in the community that was most crucial …”

vii. Sarah is a young woman who lives with disabilities. She “speaks” through assistive technology and needs accommodations because of her multiple disabilities. When she was a child, she could never learn to ride a bicycle. She could not believe that God really loved her. Finally as a young teenager, she saw and heard a person with a visible disability leading worship at a church-wide service. By seeing a person with disabilities leading worship, she discovered and understood what years of Sunday school had not demonstrated—that she is a beloved child of God, created in the Image of God.

viii. “Give prophetic witness regarding issues related to people with disabilities, recognizing that disability concerns are a matter of social justice.” (Minutes, 2006, Part I, p. 921; Living into the Body of Christ: Towards Full Inclusion of People with Disabilities, II. 2, b, (1))

ix. “Persons with disabilities are a diverse group of individuals who have a physical or mental impairment that substantially limits one or more major life activities, such as relating, caring for one’s self, performing manual tasks, walking, seeing, hearing, speaking, breathing, learning, and working.” (This was the PC(USA) definition in 1990 and consistent with the ADA of 1990. In 2008, ADA was amended to cover a broader category of disabilities.)

x. According to ADA, people with disabilities are “a distinct and insular minority who have been faced with restrictions and limitations and subjected to a history of purposeful, unequal treatment, and relegated to a position of political powerlessness in our society …” (This is a citation from ADA 1990. The 2008 law reaffirmed that people with disabilities continue to face barriers and discrimination.)

xi. It is estimated that at least 20 percent of the general population has some form of disability and that as many as 90 percent of this group are unchurched.

xiii. “As the body of Christ, we are to welcome everyone to the banquet Feast of God’s love in this world. The feast of God’s love is open to all and fully inclusive of people from all pathways of life.

“We envision a church in which the designation or naming of a person’s disability is less important than who that person is as one of God’s people.

“We envision a church in which everyone welcomes and reflects diversity and inclusiveness in worship, education, fellowship, service, justice, leadership, and evangelism.
“We envision a church in which all the members of the body of Christ honor, respect, nurture, and support the gifts, talents, and services of every other member.

“We envision a church in which every child of God can realize her/his full potential and through which society is consistently engaged and challenged to become more inclusive.

“We envision a church that embodies the creative movement from awareness, through accessibility and integration, to full inclusion, and thus bears healing witness to the world.

“We envision the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) as a leader in promoting and manifesting this vision of a just world, serving with and empowering people with disabilities to engage in this ongoing work.

“This vision of living into a fuller experience of the Body of Christ illuminates the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.)’s commitment to the full inclusion of people with disabilities in every aspect of life; living into this vision draws us closer to the fulfillment of God’s redemptive will ‘on earth as in heaven’.” (Minutes, 2006, Part I, pp. 920; Living into the Body of Christ: Towards Full Inclusion of People with Disabilities, II)

xiv. Examples of Person First Language: The Power of Words (excerpts from the Policy on Disabilities, Presbytery of the Twin Cities Area)

In describing a person who lives with a disability, name the person first, not the disability. Using words that give dignity affirms our belief that all people are created in the Image of God.

xv. The PC(USA) has disability consultants in the following areas: mobility, vision loss, hearing loss, and developmental disabilities. Consultants respond to questions and concerns across the denomination. In addition they work with Presbyterians for Disability Concerns (PDC) as advisors and they cooperate with PDC in developing print and on-line resources for the denomination. Their combined compensation is $800 per month and includes no travel expenses. This funding will end in 2012.

The PDC is a network of Presbyterian Health Education and Welfare Association. Members of the leadership team are chosen for their experience and knowledge of disability issues. During the past year, mid 2010—mid 2011, team members reported six hundred volunteer hours of service directly related to their work as members of PDC/PHEWA.

ACSWP ADVICE AND COUNSEL ON ITEM 21-02

Advice and Counsel on Item 21-02—From the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP).

Item 21-02 calls for the full implementation of the PC(USA)’s Policy on Inclusion of People with Disabilities as expressed, in part in Living into the Body of Christ: Towards Full Inclusion of People with Disabilities (approved by the 217th General Assembly [2006]).

The Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP) advises that Item 21-02 be approved.
Rationale

The recommendations of this overture are both consistent with that policy and appropriately call for a fuller implementation of the policy.

ACREC ADVICE AND COUNSEL ON ITEM 21-02

Advice and Counsel on Item 21-02—From the Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns (ACREC).

The Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns advises that the 220th General Assembly (2012) approve Item 21-02.

Rationale

The ACREC approves this overture that identifies persons with disabilities as a cultural minority and establishes a working group that will provide training in disability awareness to all six agencies, GAMC commissioners, and to commissioners to the General Assembly. During the 219th General Assembly (2010), ACREC was directed by the General Assembly to obtain statistical information regarding the hiring of persons with disabilities in the Climate for Change assessment for cultural proficiency. The ACREC was later advised that collection of data in this manner may have been unlawful. The ACREC welcomes this overture as a means of addressing the concerns of representation of persons with disabilities in the PC(USA).

ACWC ADVICE AND COUNSEL ON OVERTURE 21-02

Advice and Counsel on Overture 21-02—From the Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns (ACWC).

The Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns advises that the 220th General Assembly (2012) approve this item.

Rationale

In all governing bodies of the PC(USA) the voice, rights, and vote of the minority are valued and protected, and people who live with disabilities are, indeed, in most gatherings, a minority. This is one reason why as a denomination it is important that we are intentional about not only being inclusive of persons with disabilities, but also affirming and celebrating the distinct gifts and culture brought to the body of Christ by these sisters and brothers. The PC(USA) has a responsibility to make clear that we value persons with disabilities both within and outside the church, making obvious our witness to God’s love for all persons. The church has a role in helping society recognize persons with disabilities for the gifts they bring to the body of Christ.

COGA COMMENT ON ITEM 21-02

Comment on Item 21-02—From the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly.

The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly respectfully advises the 220th General Assembly (2012) to approve Item 21-02 after amending Recommendation 2 to make clear that the responsibility for planning a General Assembly and decisions related to carrying out the assembly lies with the Stated Clerk.

Rationale

The issues of disability awareness and inclusion at meetings of the General Assembly are fundamental to the mission and ministry of the PC(USA) and we enthusiastically endorse anything that enables the meetings of the assembly to be greater witnesses of this vision. Recommendation 2 outlines a process for developing a “plan for training all … commissioners to General Assembly in disability awareness and inclusion.” The plan will be presented to the 221st General Assembly (2014).

The Manual of the General Assembly including the Standing Rules, identifies the Stated Clerk as “responsible for all matters related to the sessions of the General Assembly and all other matters relative to and arising from the General Assembly …” (Standing Rule H.2.a.(3)). As currently stated, Recommendation 2 may be interpreted as giving a separate working group, PDC and disability consultants, authority that supersedes that of the Stated Clerk and that requires the Stated Clerk to distribute the time and resources of the assembly at their discretion and not the discretion of the Stated Clerk.

Instead of creating a plan binding the work of the meetings of the General Assembly, Recommendation 2 might be amended to instruct the working group to bring to the 221st General Assembly (2014), for their approval, an authoritative list of goals and objectives for ensuring disability awareness and inclusion, a list of best practices or other appropriate resources.

The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly (COGA) is a committee of fifteen persons, elected by the General Assembly from across the church, made up of ruling elders and teaching elders who supervise the work of the Office of the General Assembly.
Comment on Item 21-02—From the General Assembly Committee on Representation.

The General Assembly Committee on Representation (GACOR) respectfully advises that Item 21-02 be approved by the 220th General Assembly (2012) and offers this comment:

Persons with disabilities are underserved and underrepresented in the church’s life, leadership, and ministries. This overture will provide helpful steps toward greater inclusion and involvement of persons with disabilities and their gifts. Some might argue that we all will be persons with disabilities if we are blessed to live long enough, that life stages and events may change our physical, mental, and/or emotional realities, sometimes in an instant. The work we do as a church to honor all persons with dignity and love is not wasted or extra. It is essential. The barriers that people with disabilities experience are profound and they often result in them being missing, tucked away from the gathered community, or invisible. When persons with disabilities are tenacious enough to gather with us, we often still create and maintain barriers to their full participation and silence their voices and gifts. This is an injustice to the church, to our own lived and expressed faith, and to those we fail to love in their fullness.

Rationale

People with Disabilities are an important part of God’s family. The larger church in general and individuals in particular, exclude people with disabilities out of fear, lack of knowledge, and often lack of thought. People with disabilities have much to offer, have a wide variety of skills, gifts, and education, and are here waiting to have the opportunity to serve God in various ways.

Plans are in place to help the wider church learn more about various racial ethnic groups, about women and their needs and abilities. Such plans have helped the church grow in its rich diversity. Similar plans must be in place for people with disabilities to strengthen their position in the church and to increase the awareness of the entire membership of the church as to those gifts. People with Disabilities do not appear in large numbers in the leadership of our congregations, committees, councils, or at large events like the assembly. Therefore, a plan must be in place to move awareness of people with disabilities and their gifts to the forefront.

The Disability Consultants have long been an important part of the church, helping both councils and congregations address concerns raised and directly help people with disabilities and their families to overcome various hurdles placed before them by the church. The consultants should receive funding at a level that respects all they do, as should PDC volunteers who travel to help develop a plan to enrich the church with information and education concerning people with disabilities. This work has been tirelessly performed in the past and should be expanded to help both (1) people already in the church who have disabilities and (2) assist evangelism efforts to people outside the church who are seekers and are people with disabilities to find a place within the church to call home where they are genuinely loved and accepted for the people they are, complete with their gifts, talents, skills, and other offerings.

Updating internal and external communications standards to include “people first” language serves the entire church more faithfully by modeling inclusive expressions, influencing behaviors, and holding up the dignity of all persons as fellow children of God, created in love for love and service.

As an adviser to the General Assembly, GACOR welcomes this overture’s support and advocacy for active leadership at General Assembly to include people with visible disabilities as embodied, non-verbal (and verbal) witness to the church’s expression of Christ’s love. We hope its leadership support of persons with disabilities will be included in the resources offered to support committees on local arrangements for host councils. We advocate for the inclusion of interpretation materials for General Assembly leadership so that leaders are prepared to facilitate the participation of persons with disabilities in every General Assembly. This content may be easily included in the Leader Briefing provided by the Office of the General Assembly for preparing the appointed commissioner leaders and volunteers that make up the assembly committee leadership teams. The GACOR reminds the assembly of its advisory and advocacy roles and offers its assistance to make these shifts and improve the access persons with disabilities have to an assembly and its leadership.

The General Assembly Committee on Representation is made up of sixteen persons, elected by the General Assembly, who are drawn from ruling and teaching elders from across the church. Its mandate and functions are described in G-3.0103 of the Book of Order (Form of Government).

GAMC COMMENT ON ITEM 21-02

Comment on Item 21-02—From the General Assembly Mission Council.

The General Assembly Mission Council (GAMC) recognizes and affirms the continued importance of working towards full inclusion and accessibility for persons with disabilities in the church. Additionally, the GAMC commends to the attention of the church, the document, Living into the Body of Christ: Towards Full Inclusion of People with Disabilities, as approved by the General Assembly in 2006.

The GAMC suggests that the current training offered to its employees, with some adjustments, will be adequate to make staff cognizant of disability awareness and inclusion without the need and additional costs associated with a working group. Further, the current budget proposal is adequate to fund disability consultants through 2014. As such, the GAMC urges disapproval of paragraphs 2 and 3 of Item 21-02.

Staff members of the GAMC are required to attend a mandatory training session on the GAMC’s anti-harassment and anti-discrimination policies each year. That training is also offered throughout the year. A segment of the training touches on the Americans with Disabilities (ADA) Act and teaches employees not to harass co-workers with disabilities or to intermeddle about health conditions or accommodations granted to employees entitled to the protections of the ADA. Additional training on disability awareness and inclusion could be added. Staff trainers are working on training by video and computer training to reduce staff time and costs dedicated to training sessions.

The (GAMC) currently provides $10,000 annually to support four disability consultants (http://gamc.pcusa.org/ministries/phewa/disability-concerns-consultants/). These consultants respond to requests for guidance and support from individuals, congregations, mid councils, and General Assembly agencies in the areas of developmental, hearing, mobility, and visual disabilities. Additionally, the GAMC currently provides $2,500 annually to Presbyterians for Disability Concerns (PDC), one of ten Presbyterian Health, Education and Welfare Association networks to support their work. The PDC “welcomes those who affirm, support and advocate for the gifts, rights and responsibilities of persons with disabilities in the total life of the church.” The PDC develops a resource packet for Disability/Inclusion Awareness Sunday, commemorated in June each year. The packet is distributed through the GAMC Social Witness Ministries Office and is available on the GAMC website for download (http://www.pcusa.org/media/uploads/phewa/pdfs/disability-inclusion-packet-2011.pdf). The PDC and the Disability Consultants provide expertise, coaching, and opportunities for networking to those within our church seeking to be more welcoming of people with disabilities and support for those seeking guidance on engaging in ministry with, caring for and addressing the needs of people with disabilities and their families.

In terms of financial implications, there is funding to continue to support the consultants and PDC at its current level until 2014, but no new funds are available.

On Providing Just Access to Reproductive Health Care—From the Presbytery of Albany.

[Recognizing that women and men deserve full access to health care as a basic human right, whether or not medical insurance is available,] [The Presbytery of Albany respectfully overtures] the 220th General Assembly (2012) of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) [seeks] to protect all women’s and [men’s] access to comprehensive health care, including access to health services that enable responsible family planning and honor the exercise of individual conscience [and the gift of human life], by

1. encouraging the church, its members and councils, and directing the Office of Public Witness to [advocate for] [support] full access to reproductive health care for both women and men in both private and public health plans; [including, but not limited to, breast cancer screening, infertility testing, medically approved contraception methods (including ‘Plan B’ or ‘morning after’ medication), pap and HPV tests, prostate and testicular cancer screening, pre and postnatal care and, in the case of problem pregnancies, adequate and legal access to abortion services when necessary] and directing the Presbyterian Ministry at the United Nations to support similar access through international aid organizations and programs;

2. protecting the integrity of individual conscience by affirming the ability of women and men to make good moral decisions in matters of reproductive health, including decisions about infertility, parenthood, and responses to problem pregnancies, in consultation with their families, pastors, health-care professionals, and scientifically accurate medical information;

3. opposing state and federal efforts to add coercive or demeaning language in regard to family planning or to defund or criminalize present laws for the purpose of denying or delaying access to family planning services, including abortion services;

(a) The state has a limited legitimate interest in regulating abortions and in restricting abortions and in restricting abortions in certain circumstances.
(b) Within this context of the state’s limited legitimate interest, no law should impose criminal penalties against any woman who chooses or physician who performs a medically safe abortion.

(c) Within this same context of the state’s limited legitimate interest, no law should deny access to safe and affordable services for the persons seeking to terminate a problem pregnancy.

(d) No law or administrative decision should provide for a complete ban on abortion.

(e) No law or administrative decision should
   (i) limit access to abortions;
   (ii) limit information and counseling concerning abortions; or
   (iii) limit or prohibit public funding for necessary abortions for the socially and economically disadvantaged.

(f) No law should prohibit access to, nor the practice of contraceptive measures.

(g) No law should sanction any action intended to harm or harass those persons contemplating or deciding to have an abortion.

(h) No law should condone mandatory or forced abortion or sterilization. Such laws should be abolished where they do exist;”

[And further affirming that no state or federal law should be enacted to defund or criminalize family planning for the purpose of denying or delaying access to family planning services;]

[4. supporting effective public disclosure by “crisis pregnancy centers” of their affiliation with anti-contraception and/or anti-abortion religious or partisan groups, the ending of any public funding for such enterprises, and appropriate licensing and regulation to prevent deceptive practices and non-factual information being provided in the guise of education and support;]

[4. supporting effective and full public disclosure of information regarding reproductive health care and opposing public funding of any organizations shown to provide misinformation concerning reproductive health issues;]

5. encouraging the church, its members and councils, and directing the Office of Public Witness to advocate for more generous paid family and medical leave policies and corresponding policies that provide quality childcare and preschool programs in order to strengthen the family life of working parents and promote the development of children.

6. encouraging the church, its members and councils, and directing the Office of Public Witness to identify and support programs that research shows to be effective in reducing unintended pregnancies and teenage pregnancy, thereby reducing the number of abortions in the U.S.

[Comment: The 220th General Assembly (2012) expresses its appreciation to the Presbytery of Albany for raising this matter in such a thorough and compassionate manner.]

Rationale

Women’s access to health care, generally, and to reproductive health care in particular, is one of the bases of women’s equality, especially as women have entered the workforce. Since the 1970s, equal and adequate access to reproductive health care has been repeatedly supported by Presbyterian General Assemblies as essential to the exercise of our God-given responsibilities for family life. The church has encouraged marriage and parenthood as part of God’s covenant of life and family planning as integral to family wellbeing. It has understood that couples are better prepared and more likely to choose parenthood when there are adequate medical and economic bases for family life.

The PC(USA) has consistently sought the reduction of unplanned pregnancies and unmarried and often underage pregnancies because they too often result in abortion or child poverty, undermine women’s life opportunities and create additional family stress. The fact that the U.S. has the highest rates of abortion and child poverty of all modern nations is connected to the fact that almost half of the pregnancies in the U.S. are unintended and over 40 percent of them end in abortion.

However, the challenge of unplanned pregnancies and the difficult circumstances that may lead to consideration of ending a pregnancy are not experienced in the same way by all women. The rate of unintended pregnancies has plummeted for higher income women who are college educated and married: from 34 per 1,000 women in 1994 to 24 per 1,000 women in 2006. However, the rate of unintended pregnancies has skyrocketed for poor and low-income women: from 88 per 1,000 women in 1994 to 132 per 1,000 women in 2006. Among the factors accounting for this tragic escalation is poor women’s unequal access to health care.
In recent years, increased legislative action at both the federal and state levels has restricted women’s access, especially that of poor women, to comprehensive reproductive health care. Most of this legislation intends to limit women’s access to abortion. However, since almost all abortion providers also provide family planning and contraception education, the result is an attack on women’s and men’s access to a full range of reproductive health care. Such recent legislation includes:

- Laws dictating women’s medical treatment in order to alter her decision to terminate her pregnancy or to delay its implementation, such as lengthening mandated waiting periods, requiring expanded medical counseling, and requiring a woman to undergo ultrasound;
- Laws treating health-care clinics that also provide abortions as surgery centers, requiring expensive reconstruction and surgical equipment;
- Laws denying coverage of abortion services in either private or public insurance plans, including through the state health exchanges anticipated under the 2010 Affordable Care Act, unless the woman’s life is at stake;
- Laws to exclude emergency contraception from Medicaid coverage;
- Laws permitting pharmacies to refuse emergency contraception to women; and
- Laws to restrict state and federal monies from funding reproductive health providers if they also provide separately funded abortion services.

At the national level, legislation was introduced to simply end Title X funding—the federal program that serves more than five million low-income women and men with annual exams, cancer screenings, and contraception. This was followed by the attempt to specifically defund Planned Parenthood, half of whose patients are Medicaid patients receiving annual physicals, mammograms, pap tests, family planning information and contraception, and cancer screenings.

The PC(USA) has wisely recognized that people of good faith can differ in their interpretation of Scripture, their understanding of when human life begins, and their decision about the morality of abortion. It has called upon Presbyterians to seek to decrease the number of unplanned pregnancies and, thus, to decrease the number of abortions through effective access to contraception for women and men and through medically accurate sex education that includes education about contraception. And it has opposed efforts to criminalize those seeking or providing abortions. Understanding the tragic dimensions that can accompany our reproductive lives, the church has stood for the freedom of adults to choose among hard choices with the best possible information and support. To restrict access to reproductive health care for individuals and families, especially to target the most vulnerable women and families, is an unjust exercise of governmental coercion. Such actions unjustly expose poor women and men and their families to a greater likelihood of unplanned pregnancies, serious illness detected too late, increased suffering, and earlier loss of life.

ACSWP ADVICE AND COUNSEL ON ITEM 21-03

Advice and Counsel on Item 21-03—From the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP).

Item 21-03 requests that the 220th General Assembly (2012) protect all women’s access to comprehensive health care, including access to health services that enable responsible family planning and honor the exercise of individual conscience.

The Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP) advises that the 220th General Assembly (2012) approve Item 21-03 with the following amendment to Recommendation 1: [Text to be deleted is shown with brackets and with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown with brackets and with an underline.]

“1. encouraging the church, its members and councils, and directing the Office of Public Witness to advocate for full access to reproductive health care for both women and men in both private and public health plans, including, but not limited to, breast cancer screening, infertility testing, medically approved contraception methods (including “Plan B” or “morning after” medication); pap[and] HPV[STD, and HIV/AIDS tests] prostate and testicular cancer screening, pre-and-post natal care and, in the case of problem pregnancies, adequate[affordable] and legal access to abortion services when necessary, and directing the Presbyterian Ministry at the United Nations to support similar access through international aid organizations and programs;”
Rationale

The ACSWP commends the Presbytery of Albany for their careful attention and response to the current threats to women’s reproductive health (For an analysis of the proposed restrictions, see ACSWP Human Rights Update (https://www.pc-biz.org/Explorer.aspx?id=3989&promoID=244) report to the 220th General Assembly [2012]). We advise that the STD, HIV/AIDS tests be added in order to complete the customary panel of tests that are administered.

ACWC ADVICE AND COUNSEL ON ITEM 21-03

Advice and Counsel on Item 21-03—From the Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns (ACWC).

The Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns advises that the 220th General Assembly (2012) approve Item 21-03.

Rationale

The ACWC is grateful for the work of the Presbytery of Albany in lifting up the issue of Just Access to Reproductive Health Care. This overture reinforces and promulgates the range of health-care issues and services addressed by the various reproductive health policies of the PC(USA). The ACWC is concerned that access to legal health-care services is being restricted by making the services inaccessible, unaffordable, misleading, and overly burdensome, in particular for poor, young, single, and marginalized women and girls. Reproductive health-care information should be factual, available, understandable, comprehensive, and reliable. Recognizing that Presbyterians of good conscience may disagree about when, if at all, certain health-care decisions are ethical and moral should not prevent the church from advocating for resources and services to be available so that opportunities for informed decision making exist without arbitrary barriers for all.

Item 21-04

[The assembly approved Item 21-04 with amendment. See pp. 64, 67.]

Commissioners’ Resolution. On Compassionate Treatment of Veterans Suffering from PTSD, TBI, and/or Other Mental Afflictions Rising from Military Service.

The 220th General Assembly (2012) does the following:

1. Instructs the Office of the General Assembly (OGA) to urge that all presbyteries [provide] [offer] training to [facilitate] ministers [of their respective] [and] churches [to identify active or veteran military members of their churches who are at risk due to disorders resulting from injuries, visible and invisible, including Post Traumatic Stress (PTS) or Traumatic Brain Injury (TBI)] [to recognize and intervene pastorally in instances of veteran military-related Post-Traumatic Stress (PTS)/Traumatic Brain Injury (TBI)], and to be informed about [community and Veterans Administration] resources that are available to help these members and to urge all ministers of particular churches to participate in this training. [To urge presbyteries to draw upon the resources of the Presbyterian Council on Military Chaplains in the provision of training to presbyteries, pastors, and particular churches.]

2. Urges that in this training, pastors be instructed to reach out, not only to the members who are at risk, but to the family members as well as they are also greatly at risk to violence, mood swings, depression, and other symptoms of these combat-induced illnesses.

3. Asks that the OGA instruct both the Office of Public Witness in Washington, D.C., and presbyteries to advocate for rights for veterans returning from Iraq/Afghanistan in their respective states. Specific advocacy should include but not be limited to

• Judicial/Legal Structures
  [•—]—establishing veterans courts in the various jurisdictions throughout the country;
  [•—]—mandating sentencing guidelines requiring judges to incorporate treatment as part of the sentencing for veterans that suffer from these disabilities;

• Psychiatric/Mental Health Structures
  [•—]—requesting that military and veterans receive [early intervention] treatment for mental afflictions [at the earliest possible time] since it will be most effective if done early and not delayed;
  [•—]—holistic early intervention strategies that include veterans’ families;[}
[•—][—strengthening PTSDF/TBI-related transitional care military-to-civilian and hospital-to-community structures.]

Retraining/Employment Transitional Structures

[•—][—increasing funding for work programs to retrain vets as many of them are trained in skills that don’t readily translate into a civilian workforce.

[•—][—increase funding for retraining and employment transitional counseling structures.]

With these items we hope to promote a welcoming home of our wounded veterans, helping them to connect or re-unite with their families, adapting to their challenges through prayer, pastoral counseling, and church support; and to help them reintegrate as happy members of church life and society.

Rationale

“… to release from the dungeon those who sit in darkness …” (Isa. 42:7 NIV). The darkness can be in the mind and spirit as well as in the environment.

In a 2008 Rand report for the Veterans Administration they estimated that around 20 percent of the veterans returning from service in Iraq and Afghanistan suffered from PTSD, TBI, and other mental health issues. This meant that from 2001 to 2007 more than 300,000 vets were such inflicted. A large number of these veterans then became entangled in legal issues, often directly associated with these mental illnesses.

The Veterans Administration, in recognition of the seriousness of this, in 2009 established Veterans Justice Outreach (VJO) at many of the VA offices to assist vets who get in legal trouble but only after the legal issues are resolved. The VA, in the last few weeks, has also committed to the hiring of more than 19,000 mental health workers to cope with the influx of returning Afghan veterans as the war winds down.

California and Minnesota are the only states in the nation that have sentencing guidelines to provide assistance to veterans that meet the above service-related illnesses. Atlanta (Fulton County) has set up a special wing of the county prison to segregate vets so that they can receive mental health treatment. This is only a very limited response to an issue that poses large consequences to our country and these soldiers deserve better.

ACSWP ADVICE AND COUNSEL ON ITEM CR 21-04

Advice and Counsel on Item 21-04—From the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP).

The Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP) advises that Item 21-04 be approved with the following amendments: [Text to be deleted is shown with brackets and with strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown with brackets and underline.]

“The 220th General Assembly (2012) does the following:

1. Instructs the Office of the General Assembly (OGA) to urge that all presbyteries [provide] [offer] training to [facilitate] ministers [of their respective] [and] churches [to identify active or veteran military members of their churches who are at risk due to disorders resulting from injuries, visible and invisible, including Post- Traumatic Stress (PTS) or Traumatic Brain Injury (TBI)] [to recognize and intervene pastorally in instances of veteran military-related Post-Traumatic Stress (PTS)/Traumatic Brain Injury (TBI)], and to be informed about [community and Veterans Administration] resources that are available to help these members and to urge all ministers of particular churches to participate in this training. [It is further urged that pastoral and congregational informational resources be developed by PHEWA, in conjunction with the Mental Health Network, Presbyterian Council on Military Chaplains, and other appropriate agencies and entities of the PC(USA) to supplement the existing liturgical resources. To urge presbyteries to draw upon the resources of the Presbyterian Council on Military Chaplains in the provision of training to presbyteries, pastors, and particular churches.]

2. [Recommendation 2 remains the same.]

3. Asks that the OGA instruct both the Office of Public Witness in Washington, D.C., and presbyteries to advocate for rights for veterans returning from Iraq/Afghanistan in their respective states. Specific advocacy should include but not be limited to

“[• Judicial/Legal Structures]
“—establishing veterans courts in the various jurisdictions throughout the country;

“—mandating sentencing guidelines requiring judges to incorporate treatment as part of the sentencing for veterans that suffer from these disabilities;

“[Psychiatric/Mental Health Structures]

“—requesting that military and veterans receive [early intervention] treatment for mental afflictions [at the earliest possible time] since it will be most effective if done early and not delayed;

“[—holistic early intervention strategies that include veterans’ families;]

“[—strengthening PTSDF/TBI-related transitional care military-to-civilian and hospital-to-community structures.]

“[Retraining/Employment Transitional Structures]

“—increasing funding for work programs to retrain vets as many of them are trained in skills that don’t readily translate into a civilian workforce.

“—Increase funding for retraining and employment transitional counseling structures.

“With these items we hope to promote a welcoming home of our wounded veterans, helping them to connect or reunite with their families, adapting to their challenges through prayer, pastoral counseling, and church support; and to help them reintegrate as happy members of church life and society.”

Rationale

Existing resources should be drawn upon but need to be supplemented by pastorally and congregationally oriented education materials not currently available through the PC(USA).

The Presbyterian Council on Military Chaplains has expertise and resources that can be drawn upon by presbyteries and pastors.

While some structures are in place, in some states, to assist veterans with PTSD or TBI and their families, veterans have expressed fear of reprisal or labeling in using these resources, some veterans are going undiagnosed, intervention is not always early or timely, attention to families of affected veterans needs to be increased, transition to civilian life and community/family re-integration must be facilitated in ways that are comprehensive, coherent, consistent, compassionate and timely.

Item 21-05

[The assembly approved Item 21-05 with amendment. See pp. 64, 68.]

Commissioners’ Resolution. On Funding for Presbyterian AIDS Network (PAN) for AIDS Competency Training.

The 220th General Assembly (2012) of the PC(USA) does the following:

2. Commends the Presbyterian AIDS Network (PAN), a member network of the Presbyterian Health, Education and Welfare Association (PHEWA), for their continued prophetic witness on issues of HIV and AIDS, and, encourages PAN to work in partnership with Johnson C. Smith and other theological institutions to resource the PC(USA) to become an HIV and AIDS competent church.
3. [Provides $25,000 to the Presbyterian AIDS Network (PAN) to be utilized to support the development of and expand participation in certification of AIDS competent church and church leaders programs.] [Create an Extra Commitment Opportunity Account to support the AIDS ministry, to be utilized to support the development of and expand participation in certification of AIDS competent church and church leaders programs and distribute information to the mid councils and congregations that better educate the church to the existence of this opportunity.]

Rationale

General Assembly reports often end up on dusty shelves, forgotten by the church. In contrast, students, staff, and faculty at Johnson C. Smith Seminary have taken seriously the 219th General Assembly (2010) charge to create HIV/AIDS competent churches. Located in a zip code with the fourth highest incidence of HIV infection in Georgia, their community is immediately impacted by this pandemic. The presence of the International AIDS Conference in the United States in July offers the PC(USA) an appropriate time to again lift up and recommit ourselves to equipping church leaders and congregations to respond to the pandemic.

The 219th General Assembly (2010) of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) approved the document “Becoming an HIV, AIDS, Hepatitis B, and Hepatitis C Competent Church: Prophetic Witness and Compassionate Action” in response to HIV and AIDS pandemic. Included in that document were the following actions:

- Challenge the PC(USA) to become an HIV and AIDS competent denomination at all levels of the church and in all its ministries.
- Call upon congregations to accept the challenge to become an HIV and AIDS competent church by studying the HIV and AIDS related policies and resources of the PC(USA).
- Develop denominational standards defining the marks of HIV and AIDS competent congregations and ministries, in accordance with PC(USA) policies and in collaboration with ecumenical partners in HIV and AIDS ministries.
- Call upon presbyteries to include pastoral training related to HIV and AIDS competency as part of a qualified candidate’s preparation for ministry.
- Commend Presbyterian theological seminaries that have incorporated HIV and AIDS education into their community life.

In response to this action by the 219th General Assembly (2010) and the release in 2010 of a new National HIV/AIDS Strategy for the United States, Johnson C. Smith Seminary has created as a two-year mission program: A Program of Certification of AIDS Competent Church and Church Leaders.

The purpose of this program is to gather, equip, and mobilize church leaders to develop the skills and resources for creating AIDS competent congregations. Without advancing a particular biblical or theological position, the goal is to work with church leaders to formulate and articulate biblical, theological, pastoral, and moral/ethical foundations, which are consistent with each church’s mission/vision. Throughout the two years, participants will actively work with their congregations to address HIV and AIDS systematically and to integrate the foundations from the program into the life and ministry of their congregations.

The Presbyterian AIDS Network (PAN) looks forward to working closely with Johnson C. Smith Seminary to strengthen program participation and involve the whole church building an HIV and AIDS competent church.

ACREC ADVICE AND COUNSEL ON ITEM 21-05

Advice and Counsel on Item 21-05—From the Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns (ACREC).

The Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns advises that the 220th General Assembly (2012) approve Item 21-05.

Rationale

The 219th General Assembly (2010) approved this report and recommended that our churches develop ways to implement programs in our communities that helped in nurturing congregations and leaders in skills development in response to this pandemic health concern.

Both Johnson C. Smith Theological Seminary and PAN should be commended for the development of leaders, and this work should be supported and shared with the whole church as a start in the Presbyterian response.
This is a continuation of work that ACREC has done in this area and our recommendations to the 219th General Assembly (2010).

ACSWP ADVICE AND COUNSEL ON ITEM 21-05

Advice and Counsel on Item 21-05—From the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP).

The Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy commends the potential implementation of the PC(USA) policy, “Becoming an HIV and AIDS Competent Church: Prophetic Witness and Compassionate Action.” The expansion of a Program of Certification of AIDS Competent Church and Church Leaders should be encouraged and supported, if fiscally possible, as a component of PC(USA) domestic mission.

Advice and Counsel on Item 21-05—From the Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns (ACWC).

The Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns concurs with the Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns (ACREC) rationale for approving Item 21-05 with additional rationale below.

Rationale

HIV AIDS is the leading cause of death for African American Women age 25–34. American Psychological Association: (apa.org/about/gr/issues/hiv/women.aspx)

GAMC COMMENT ON ITEM 21-05

Comment on Item 21-05—From the General Assembly Mission Council (GAMC).

The General Assembly Mission Council affirms Johnson C. Smith Seminary for creating the “Certification of AIDS Competent Church and Church Leaders” and appreciates the work of the Presbyterian AIDS Network for its faithful witness on HIV and AIDS.

However, the General Assembly Mission Council does not have adequate financial resources to provide a $25,000 grant to Presbyterian AIDS Network. An Extra Commitment Opportunity account could be established to accept monetary gifts to support the General Assembly Mission Council’s ministry efforts related to AIDS.

Item 21-06

[The assembly disapproved Item 21-06 with comment. See pp. 64, 68.]

Commissioners’ Resolution. On Calling the Church to a New Way Forward on the Issue of Pregnancies and Abortion.

The 220th General Assembly (2012), recognizing the deep and long-standing division in the church concerning crisis pregnancies and abortion, longing for a way the church can better reflect the love of God and caring concern of the church for women and their unborn children, and believing there is a better way forward with great hope for the unity of the church, does the following:

1. Directs the General Assembly Mission Council, through Theology and Worship, to do the following:
   a. Conduct a study of Scripture and The Book of Confessions.
   b. Write a foundational paper that includes
      (1) the meaning and implications of being ‘created in God’s image’;
      (2) implications of Christ’s sacrificial death for humankind for how we love one another;
      (3) implications of the biblical prohibition against the taking of human life in our cultural context;
      (4) how the church might live out an understanding of children as a blessing from God as part of our participation in the baptismal covenant;
      (5) the role of the church’s ministry in caring for the vulnerable; and
(6) suggestions for congregational ministry that extends care for women and their unborn children.

c. Bring the foundational paper back to the 221st General Assembly (2014) for approval

2. Requests PC(USA) Research Services to conduct a new Presbyterian Panel survey on crisis pregnancies and abortion, in order to accurately reveal the current opinions of Presbyterians on these matters.

   a. Questions shall be carefully crafted to avoid bias.

   b. Since abortion is legal in the U.S.A., questions should assume legality and focus instead on the morality of abortion.

   c. Questions should also ask about the church’s role to counsel regarding abortion and to offer ministry and support for women who are pregnant in difficult circumstances.

3. Calls upon the Office of Public Witness, Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy, Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns, and Presbyterians Affirming Reproductive Options to adopt

   a. a framework for advocacy that includes empowering the voice of the church in areas of essential unity but leaves to individual advocacy areas of division;

   b. a plan to empower our global mission partners to provide education, prenatal care, and healthcare for women that seeks the well-being of both mother and child, born and unborn.

[Comment: Item 21-06 calls for “A New Way forward on the issue of pregnancies and abortion.” Considering this resolution invited the committee to consider the 1992 report of the Special Committee on Problem Pregnancies and Abortion. This noteworthy study brought twenty years of relative peace on a matter that has been a source of intense conflict in the PC(USA) for many years prior to the study. The study accomplished no mean feat in setting forth common ground that Presbyterian can gather around; common ground that eschews partisanship on either side of the cultural divide. We found insight and guidance in this document that was both eloquent and relevant to our work; therefore we do not see the need for a new study but rather commend the existing study to our church.]

Rationale

In 1992, the PC(USA) approved the Report of the Special Committee on Problem Pregnancies and Abortion. In its opening pages, it talks about why this study was being undertaken. One of those reasons was to “be an agent of healing in the life of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.).” In fact the special committee found that struggle in their own deliberations: “Our committee was faced with a diversity of passionately held views on problem pregnancies and abortion both without our group and in the church at large. In fact, the struggles of our church over these issues have been reflected in the struggles in our committee.”

The turmoil in the church between 1983 and 1988 that prompted the study that resulted in “Problem Pregnancies and Abortion,” adopted in 1992 continues after twenty years. The 1992 policy and statements since that time have not moved us forward in united mission to provide solutions that reduce the high numbers of abortions in our society.

Our disagreement in this part of the Body of Christ over whether abortion is morally acceptable and therefore a choice a woman may make in certain circumstances, or whether the life of the unborn child must be valued and protected as a separate individual created in God’s image and one for whom Christ died, has continued to be politicized. There is little hope that a new social witness policy would resolve our differences. At the same time the current policy is outdated and in some ways embarrassing to those among us with scientific and medical education. It does not seem good to us to suggest a new social witness policy for several reasons:

1. Our divisions are long-standing and our rhetoric entrenched. It does not seem likely or helpful to the church to enter a process of dialogue with a goal of establishing a platform from which to advocate.

2. Our advocacy, empowered by majority vote, only serves to divide us further.

We need a new way to address crisis pregnancy and abortion and we need a new result. We need a statement that is based in Scripture and provides a foundation for cherishing the life of mother and child equally. We need plans for ministry that flow out of those things we can say and do together. There is much “in the middle” that fits that category, if we are willing to lay down our rhetoric and explore the possibilities together.

A new poll will help us to find that place of common ground and areas of ministry we can initiate as a whole denomination. Since 1992, there have been many advances in technology, shedding new light on the development of the unborn baby. Ultrasound technology leaves no doubt that the life developing in the womb of a woman from the earliest days of pregnancy is alive and is a small and developing human being. New studies also offer new information and a greater understanding of the physical and emotional impact of abortion on women and men and their families.
Many of us are experiencing a yearning to move past the entrenched debate and find what we can say and do together. It is a compelling motive for our younger generation and there is much compassionate ministry the church can engage in together to help women and their unborn babies live and thrive.

We are a people of God and so the place to begin to do things differently as a people seems to logically point toward a foundational theological statement about human life that guides our decision-making as individuals. We have too long focused on advocacy. It is time to plan and move toward compassionate ministry that helps women make good decisions that affirm God’s best for their lives and the lives of their children.

ACSWP ADVICE AND COUNSEL ON ITEM 21-06

Advice and Counsel on Item 21-06—From the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP).

The Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy advises that Item 21-06 be disapproved.

Rationale

The 1992 Report of the Special Committee on Problem Pregnancies and Abortion is a comprehensive policy that includes an extensive study of Scripture and Reformed Theology. The members of the committee found themselves in substantial agreement with regard to “biblical and theological foundations”—such as those listed in Item 21-06—even as they found differences in the ways that Presbyterians interpret Scripture (I.D.6). Item 21-06 appears to believe that another study of Scripture and The Book of Confessions would result in agreement on the part of all Presbyterians that human life begins at the moment of conception, thus making abortion for any reason, or at any point in fetal development, immoral. This approach contradicts the body of PC(USA) policy developed over the past thirty years regarding problem pregnancies and abortion.

In contrast, the 1992 policy honors the diverse opinions of Presbyterians on this matter and urges respect for women and their capacity as individuals to make faithful moral decisions in complex situations involving crisis pregnancies.

c. We affirm the ability and responsibility of women, guided by the Scriptures and the Holy Spirit, in the context of their communities of faith, to make good moral choices in regard to problem pregnancies.

To preserve women’s capacity to make such decisions, the policy calls for the church to advocate for keeping access to legal and medically safe abortions, as well as to all forms of effective contraception, available. It calls for support of adoption and for churches to develop support centers for women facing unintended pregnancies.

In contrast, Item 21-06 would deny that an action of the General Assembly represents the “voice of the church” for public advocacy whenever some Presbyterians disagree with that action. This position would essentially silence the church’s public witness on many issues. Without such advocacy, as we have witnessed recently, attacks on women’s access to contraception and abortion could severely limit women’s actual choices.

In addition, Item 21-06 would limit the church’s support of global partners to only those organizations that agree with the resolution’s belief that human life begins at the moment of conception. It would, in essence, deny resources to those organizations whose services include providing women with knowledge of and access to abortion services.

Contrary to bringing healing and unity to the church, Item 21-06 would eliminate the church’s consistent advocacy for women’s access to a full range of reproductive medical care.

ACWC ADVICE AND COUNSEL ON ITEM 21-06

Advice and Counsel on Item 21-06—From the Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns (ACWC)

The Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns concurs with the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP) in disapproving Item 21-06 with additional rationale below.

Rationale

The ACWC supports the current PC(USA) policy that states we trust women and their medical and spiritual advisors on issues related to problem pregnancies. The church is called to be an advocate for women who face these circumstances.

Although more study of uterine transplants, in vitro fertilization, stem cell research, and so forth would be helpful, it would not deviate from our current positions.
There are neither the funds nor the necessity for a new theological study nor a Presbyterian Panel on the topic.

GAMC COMMENT ON ITEM 21-06

Comment on Item 21-06—From the General Assembly Mission Council (GAMC).

1. Comment on Recommendation 1.b.(6):

Recommendation 1.b.(6) asks the General Assembly to direct the General Assembly Mission Council to write resources with “suggestions for congregational ministry that extends care for women and their unborn children.” The General Assembly Mission Council has recently published resources with suggestions for congregational ministry that extends care for women and their unborn children.

The 218th General Assembly (2008) directed the GAMC to develop congregational resources on problem pregnancy. The GAMC reported to the 220th General Assembly (2010) that four problem pregnancy resources were created:

- When You Need Wisdom: Helping Others Face Problem Pregnancies, PDS# 27-526-10-004,
- When No Choice is Easy: For the Pregnant Woman, PDS# 27-526-10-001,
- When Pregnancy Involves Loss: Helping Others Face Pregnancy Loss, PDS# 27-526-10-003, and
- There’s Always A Father: Does the Father Have a Problem, Too?, PDS# 27-526-10-002.

Page 1 of When You Need Wisdom: Helping Others Face Problem Pregnancies reads: “Pastors are called upon to be informed, compassionate, sensitive, and helpful when it comes to counseling. This is a major challenge, yet all of these skills are needed when it comes to dealing with a problem pregnancy.”

Page 12 of When Pregnancy Involves Loss: Helping Others Face Pregnancy Loss references a statement from the 217th General Assembly (2006), which reads, “Pastors have a duty to counsel with and pray for those who face decisions about problem pregnancies. Congregations have a duty to pray for and support those who face these choices, to offer support for women and families to help make unwanted pregnancies less likely to occur, and to provide practical support for those facing the birth of a child with medical anomalies, birth after rape or infest, or those who face health, economic, or other stresses.”

The General Assembly Mission Council refers commissioners to the problem pregnancy resources referenced above, as well as the policy statement and study paper, The Covenant of Life and the Caring Community and Covenant Creation: Theological Reflections on Contraception and Abortion (PDS# OGA-88-109), the Report of the Special Committee on Problem Pregnancies and Abortion: Do Justice, Love Mercy, Walk Humbly (Micah 6:8) (PDS# OGA-92-017), and the 2006 policy statement of the General Assembly, Item 10-01, On Late-Term Pregnancy.

2. Comment on Recommendation 3.b.:

Prophetic and biblical advocacy speaks truth in love to power. In many cases, this does not create the type of unity called for in this commissioners’ resolution. Biblical prophecy is not comfortable. A major concern for the Office of Public Witness (OPW) is the extreme level of compromise that would be imposed on advocacy mandated by this and previous General Assemblies. Given the overall purpose of the work of the OPW, it must necessarily take up controversial issues in some instances in order to be effective and to faithfully respond to the Gospel of Jesus Christ. In addition, the question of defining “essential unity” is problematic. At what point does the church define “essential unity”? If “essential unity” requires unanimity, this commissioners’ resolution will fundamentally change the way the PC(USA) engages in all public witness.

   c. Existing General Assembly Policy
   d. May Not Amend Book of Order
   e. Already Before Assembly
   f. Same Issues as Previous Assembly
   g. Referral
   h. Referral Declined

1. Papers in General
   a. The General Assembly shall consider only those papers delivered to the Stated Clerk in compliance with Standing Rule A and any other papers whatsoever that have been delivered to the Stated Clerk. Ordinarily, such papers shall have been forwarded to the Stated Clerk postmarked no later than sixty days prior to the convening of the General Assembly.

   b. All papers intended for consideration by the General Assembly that are forwarded to the Stated Clerk and postmarked less than sixty days, but no later than forty-five days prior to the convening of the General Assembly, shall be reviewed by the Stated Clerk, who shall determine whether or not to refer them to the Assembly Committee on Business Referral. The Stated Clerk shall report to the committee regarding those papers not referred.
2. Reports of Entities, Commissions, and Committees

a. All reports from entities, commissions, and committees of the General Assembly shall be delivered to the Stated Clerk on or before 120 days prior to the convening of the General Assembly. The Stated Clerk shall publish these reports (print or electronic) and distribute them so that they shall reach the commissioners thirty days before the convening of the General Assembly.

b. An entity, commission, or committee submitting a report with a recommendation that affects the work or budget of another entity(ies) shall submit evidence that a consultation has been held with the affected entity(ies).

c. Committees, agencies, or corporations presenting reports shall provide the appropriate background information necessary to interpret or understand the recommendations or responses to referrals to the members of the General Assembly committees to which the business is referred. Any and all documents or publications referred to in these reports that require approval by the assembly for publication and distribution to the church, including but not limited to curriculum, study papers/guides, position papers, and program resources, shall be made available to commissioners at the time the reports are published.

d. All reports shall be limited to ten thousand words except the report of the General Assembly Mission Council, the length of which shall be determined by the Stated Clerk and the Executive Director of the General Assembly Mission Council. A request for an exception to the length of a report shall be submitted to the Stated Clerk no later than forty-five days prior to the deadline for the submission of the report and shall include the anticipated length of the report. The Stated Clerk may assess a fee of the entity or committee whose report exceeds ten thousand words for the costs incurred in printing and distributing the excess pages. Payment of the fee shall be submitted to the treasurer of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), A Corporation. If the Stated Clerk and the representatives of any body are unable to agree, the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly shall determine the length of the report.

3. Overtures

a. Overtures are items of business that must have been approved by a presbytery or a synod and shall request the General Assembly to take a particular action, or approve or endorse a particular statement or resolution. (See Book of Order, G-3.0302d.)

b. The stated clerk of a presbytery or synod considering an overture to the General Assembly shall:

      (1) Examine the most recently published Minutes of the General Assembly to determine if a similar overture has already been passed.

      (2) Consult with the Office of the General Assembly to determine whether the desired action has been voted by any previous General Assembly.

      (3) Consult with the Office of the General Assembly to determine whether a similar overture has already been proposed in order that the presbytery or synod may concur with the existing overture.

      (4) Draft the overture in the following form:

      “The Presbytery of ________________ overtures the [# of the assembly] General Assembly [(year)] of the PC(USA) to [state the specific action the General Assembly is asked to take].”

To this shall be appended a rationale, stating the reasons for submitting the overture.
A.3.c.–A.4.a.

Submiting Overtures

c. Submitting Overtures

(1) Overtures proposing an amendment to the Constitution or requiring an interpretation by the General Assembly of the Book of Order (see Book of Order, G-6.04a and G-6.02) must be delivered in writing to the Stated Clerk postmarked no later than 120 days prior to the convening of the General Assembly, and shall be promptly referred to the Advisory Committee on the Constitution (see Book of Order, G-6.02 and G-6.04).

(2) All overtures that have financial implications for current or future years’ budgets must be delivered in writing to the Stated Clerk postmarked no later than sixty days prior to the convening of the General Assembly. Overtures with financial implications not received within the designated time limit shall not be considered, but shall be returned to the originating council.

(3) All other overtures intended for consideration by the General Assembly shall be forwarded to the Stated Clerk, postmarked no later than forty-five days before the convening of the General Assembly.

(4) Overtures not received within the designated time limits shall not be considered, but shall be returned to the originating council for reconsideration.

(5) Presbyteries or synods submitting overtures with a recommendation(s) that affects the work or budget of a General Assembly entity(ies) shall submit evidence that the affected entity(ies) has (have) been consulted. If such evidence is not submitted, the Stated Clerk shall recommend that the overture be received and referred to a future session of the General Assembly so that consultation may take place.

(6) In the event that the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly receives an overture similar to one already proposed (excluding the rationale), she or he shall inquire of the presbytery or synod in question whether it would be willing to concur with that existing overture or desires to withdraw the overture. A presbytery or synod concurring with an overture may submit additional rationale for its action, provided that it does not duplicate the rationale provided by the overturing body. The concurrence and any additional rationale will be printed with the original overture in the Reports to the General Assembly. Concurrences to any overture shall be received up to 45 days prior to the convening of the next session of the General Assembly. Concurrences to any overture with constitutional implications shall be received up to 120 days prior to the convening of the next session of the General Assembly.

Distributing Overtures

d. Overtures that do not propose constitutional amendment or interpretation, and that are postmarked at least sixty days prior to the convening of the General Assembly, shall be published (print or electronic) in the reports distributed by the Stated Clerk. Overtures received in the same manner, postmarked no later than forty-five days prior to the convening of the General Assembly, shall be distributed to the commissioners before the convening of the General Assembly.

e. Overture Advocate

(1) Each presbytery or synod that submits an overture shall notify the Stated Clerk of the name of a commissioner or some other person in attendance at the General Assembly who has been designated as the advocate for the overture. The overture advocate shall be available to provide information on the background and intent of the overture to any assembly committee to which the overture may be referred. (See Standing Rule E.2.)

(2) In the event that the assembly refers an overture to a General Assembly entity for further consideration (and not simply for implementation), the presbytery or synod submitting the overture shall be invited by the Stated Clerk to designate an overture advocate for the assembly meeting at which the entity’s response to the overture is presented. The overture advocate shall be available to provide information on the background and intent of the overture to any assembly committee to which the overture may be referred. (See Standing Rule E.2.)

4. Communications and Resource Material

a. Communications and resource material provide comment or advice on business already under consideration by the assembly and shall neither contain nor constitute business to be considered by the assembly. Communications may be directed to the General Assembly
1. Forty-five Day Deadline

b. All communications intended for consideration by the General Assembly shall be forwarded to the Stated Clerk, postmarked no later than forty-five days before the convening of the General Assembly.

2. Resource Materials
c. Resource material (except for previously published books), including advice and counsel memoranda from advocacy and advisory committees, shall be prepared as necessary by entities of the General Assembly and shall not exceed 1,000 words on each item of business referred. This material shall be submitted to the Stated Clerk, postmarked no later than forty-five days before the convening of the assembly meeting, who shall then publish (print or electronic) and distribute the material to all commissioners prior to the assembly.

d. Advice and counsel memoranda are resources prepared by the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy, Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns, and the Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns for the purpose of providing information about existing policy, current work on specific topics, recent developments, and other factors useful to commissioners as they consider issues before the assembly.

3. Advisory Committee on the Constitution Report

a. The Advisory Committee on the Constitution shall report to the General Assembly its findings along with its recommendations on all questions requiring an interpretation by the General Assembly of the Book of Order, including proposals for constitutional change. The General Assembly shall vote on the recommendations, and may amend or decline to approve them (Book of Order, G-6.02). The Advisory Committee on the Constitution shall report any editorial changes made to the Book of Order since its last report to the General Assembly.

b. The report of the committee shall be presented directly to the General Assembly. The General Assembly may take action on the recommendations immediately, or it may refer them to an assembly committee for consideration by that committee and report to the General Assembly for action later during the same session of the General Assembly.

4. Entity and Synod Minutes

a. Entities and synods required to submit minutes for review by the General Assembly shall submit such minutes on a calendar year basis so as to present minutes of all meetings for the calendar year (from January 1 through December 31) preceding the year in which is held the session of the General Assembly to which such minutes are submitted. The minutes shall contain the attestation that they have been approved by the entity or synod submitting them in the manner regularly in use within that body.

b. Minutes of General Assembly entities will be reviewed in accordance with the “Guidelines for Preparation of Minutes of Agencies” as printed in the Manual of the General Assembly. Minutes of the synods will be reviewed in accordance with “Guidelines for Reviewing Synod Records” as printed in the Manual of the General Assembly.

5. Presbytery Reports

Each presbytery shall act upon all papers sent to the presbytery to be voted upon in ample time to permit the stated clerk of the presbytery to mail the results to the Stated Clerk so that they are received no later than two weeks before the convening of the General Assembly. The response of the presbytery shall be mailed to the Stated Clerk by certified mail.
8. Commissioners’ Resolutions

Who May Propose

a. An item of new business, in the form of a commissioners’ resolution, must be signed by commissioners representing at least one other presbytery. Such resolutions must be delivered in writing to the Stated Clerk or the Stated Clerk’s designee. No commissioner may sign more than two such resolutions.

Deadline

b. The Stated Clerk shall determine and announce at the first meeting at which business is conducted the deadline for receipt of commissioners’ resolutions. The deadline shall not be earlier than twenty-four hours after the assembly has convened.

Existing GA Policies

c. In the preparation of a resolution, commissioners are urged to be aware of existing General Assembly policies relevant to their proposal and, where appropriate, to make reference to these policies.

May Not Amend Book of Order

May Not Amend Book of Order

d. Commissioners’ resolutions shall not contain business that requires an amendment to or interpretation of the Constitution (see Book of Order, G-6.04a).

Already Before Assembly

e. The Stated Clerk shall not transmit as new business any resolution that deals with matters of business already before the General Assembly, nor transmit any resolution whose purpose can be achieved by the regular process of amendment and debate.

Same Issues as Previous Assembly

f. Should the commissioners’ resolution deal with substantially the same issue considered by one of the two previous sessions of the General Assembly, the Stated Clerk shall recommend that the Assembly Committee on Bills and Overtures take one of the following actions on the commissioners’ resolution: “refer to a subsequent assembly,” “decline for consideration,” or “take no action.”

Referral

g. If the proposed resolution does deal with new business, the Stated Clerk shall transmit it to the Assembly Committee on Bills and Overtures with a recommendation for its referral.

Referral Declined

h. The Assembly Committee on Bills and Overtures may decline to refer proposed items of new business if it decides that the matters proposed are already before the assembly or that the purpose of the proposals can be reached by the process of amendment and debate. Proposed items of business not referred, whether declined by the Stated Clerk or the Assembly Committee on Bills and Overtures, shall be identified in the first report of the Assembly Committee on Bills and Overtures distributed to commissioners after the period docketed for committee meetings, with a brief description of the content and a statement of the reasons for declining the proposed business. Twenty-five percent of commissioners present and voting is required to overturn action of the Assembly Committee on Bills and Overtures to decline, take no action, or refer a commissioners’ resolution to a subsequent assembly. If a commissioners’ resolution affects a substantial change in an existing social witness policy, the Stated Clerk should recommend to the Assembly Committee on Bills and Overtures that it be referred to the next General Assembly.

6. List of Participants

1. Commissioners
   a. Each presbytery shall elect commissioners to the General Assembly in accordance with Book of Order, G-3.0501. The number of commissioners attending General Assembly will be based on the number of active members, including resident clergy members of presbytery. The figures for active members will be taken from the information recorded in Minutes of the General Assembly, Part II, Statistics of the year in which per capita apportionment is assessed for the year in which General Assembly meets.
   b. Presbyteries shall elect commissioners in sufficient time to permit the list of commissioners to be delivered to the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly 120 days prior to the convening of the session of the General Assembly to which they are commissioned.
   c. Teaching elders and ruling elders considered for election as commissioners must be able to be in attendance for the duration of the General Assembly.
   d. Commissioners shall be entitled to speak under the rules, and to vote and present motions in meetings of the General Assembly and of assembly committees to which they are assigned. Commissioners shall be reimbursed for approved expenses.
   e. In the case of a newly created presbytery, the presbytery shall be entitled to elect commissioners to the General Assembly if the qualifying enrollment of teaching elders and congregations in that presbytery shall have been completed by December 31 of the year preceding the assembly meeting (see Book of Order, G-3.0501).
Alternates

Presbyteries may elect alternates in number up to, but not exceeding, the number of commissioners to which the presbytery may be entitled. Such alternates shall be seated with other visitors to the assembly.

2. Advisory Delegates

Definition

a. Advisory delegates are persons who are active members in one of the constituent churches or councils of the General Assembly (or, in the case of ecumenical advisory delegates, of a denomination of Christians designated by the General Assembly) who are selected to attend the meeting of the General Assembly in an advisory role so that the assembly may be assured of hearing and taking cognizance of their special viewpoints.

Categories

b. There shall be four categories of advisory delegates: youth, theological student; missionary, and ecumenical. The expenses of each advisory delegate shall be paid by the General Assembly (see Standing Rule I.3.) on the same basis as the expenses of commissioners (see Standing Rule B.2.f.(2) below for exception).

Voting Privileges

c. Advisory delegates shall be assigned to assembly committees as voting members and shall have the privilege of the floor of the General Assembly without vote. Only voting members shall have the privilege of proposing or seconding a motion. When certain issues come before a plenary session of the General Assembly, the advisory delegates may be polled prior to the vote of commissioners to determine their advice.

Young Adult Advisory Delegates

(1) Each presbytery shall appoint an active member of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), who shall be between the ages of seventeen and twenty-three years on the date the General Assembly convenes, to be a young adult advisory delegate.

(2) Each presbytery will request each candidate for young adult advisory delegate to submit an application/questionnaire and be interviewed by an appropriate presbytery committee in order to ensure the selection of the best qualified person to serve as young adult advisory delegate. The youth ministries staff shall prepare and distribute to each presbytery a sample/suggested questionnaire for use in reviewing candidates for election as young adult advisory delegates.

(3) Presbyteries shall elect young adult advisory delegates in sufficient time to permit the list of advisory delegates to be delivered to the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly 120 days prior to the convening of the session of the General Assembly to which they are elected.

e. Theological Student Advisory Delegates

There shall be a delegation of theological student advisory delegates each year: two from each of the theological institutions of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.); one from each of the theological institutions in a covenant relationship with the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.); and one each from three selected other theological seminaries. The selection process for these delegates is as follows:

(1) Each theological institution of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) shall nominate three students who, at the time of the General Assembly, will have at least one year of study remaining in their degree program. Two of these students shall be designated by the institution as delegates and the other student shall be designated as the alternate. Such a student must be either an inquirer or a candidate in preparation for ministry under care of a presbytery, or a student nominated by the Presbyterian School of Christian Education. These nominations shall be forwarded to the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly 120 days prior to the convening of the session of the General Assembly to which they are elected, who shall transmit the names of the two students to be delegates to the presbytery of jurisdiction for election. The presbyteries shall then certify the election to the Stated Clerk when completed.

(2) Each theological institution in covenant relationship with the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) shall nominate two students who, at the time of the General Assembly, will have at least one year of study remaining in their degree program. One of these students shall be designated by the institution as the delegate and the other student as the alternate. Such a student must be either an inquirer or a candidate in preparation for ministry under care of a presbytery. These nominations shall be forwarded to the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly 120 days prior to the convening of the session of the General Assembly to which they are elected, who shall transmit the name of the delegate to the presbytery of jurisdiction for election. The presbyteries shall then certify the election to the Stated Clerk when completed.

(3) All non-Presbyterian theological schools represented by corresponding members on the Committee on Theological Education and one additional non-Presbyterian theological seminary shall be asked to nominate one theological student advisory delegate and one alternate. The additional non-Presbyterian seminary shall be chosen on a rotating basis, descending alphabetically, from those that have at least twelve Presbyterian enrollees (either inquirers or candidates under the care of a presbytery) as of October 1 in the year preceding the assembly. These nominations shall be forwarded to the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly 120 days prior to the convening of the session of the General Assembly to which they are elected, who shall transmit the name of the delegate to the presbytery of jurisdiction for election. The presbyteries shall then certify the election to the Stated Clerk when completed.

(4) Nominated students shall have at least one more year of study following the assembly remaining in their degree program. The Stated Clerk shall forward the name of the nominated students to the presbyteries of jurisdiction for election and confirmation.

f. Missionary Advisory Delegates

(1) There shall be eight missionary advisory delegates who shall be chosen by the Worldwide Ministries Division from persons who are members of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) and mission personnel assigned by the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) in another country in which this church is engaged in mission. To the degree possible, the selection shall provide a global geographical representation with no two delegates representing the same country or geographical area and rotating the geographical representation. The Worldwide Ministries Division shall notify the Stated Clerk at the time these persons are named.

(2) The expenses to the General Assembly of each missionary advisory delegate shall include transportation only from the point of entry or domicile of the delegate in the United States and return.

g. Ecumenical Advisory Delegates

There shall be up to fifteen ecumenical advisory delegates. Ten of these delegates shall be from churches outside of the United States. No more than five shall be from member churches of the World Alliance of Reformed Churches. Ecumenical advisory delegates shall be selected by the highest ecclesiastical authorities of their churches, in response to the invitation of a previous General Assembly. The assembly shall extend such invitations at the recommendation of the General Assembly Mission Council upon nomination by the General Assembly Committee on Ecumenical Relations.

3. Corresponding Members

a. The following persons shall be corresponding members: Moderators of earlier General Assemblies; the Stated Clerk, Associate and Assistant Stated Clerks, and other members of the staff of the Office of the General Assembly as designated by the Stated Clerk; the members of the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly; the members of the GAMC Executive Committee and staff of the General Assembly Mission Council, and of the divisions and related entities designated by the council; all members of the Advisory Committee on the Constitution; the executives of synods; one person designated by each entity reporting directly to the General Assembly, including permanent, special, and advisory committees (additional persons may be designated by such bodies if authorized by the Moderator of the preceding General Assembly in consultation with the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly); and the presidents (or their designee) of the theological institutions of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), and seminaries related by covenant agreement.
Entitled to Speak, Not Vote

b. Corresponding members shall be entitled to speak, under the rules, in meetings of the General Assembly and of assembly committees on matters related to the work of the body represented, but they may neither vote nor present motions.

4. Advisory Committee on the Constitution

During the General Assembly, three or more members of the Advisory Committee on the Constitution [this committee] shall be present at the session of the General Assembly to advise the General Assembly and its Moderator on constitutional matters.

5. Other Participants

a. The assembly, out of honor, courtesy, recognition, and the need for information and resource material, may recognize other persons as guests or observers. As such, they may be invited by the General Assembly to speak to the assembly for the purpose of conveying greetings or messages, or bringing enlightenment or information germane to the decision-making process. An assembly committee may extend a similar invitation at its own meeting.

b. Ecumenical representatives are individuals sent at the initiative of another church to be the official representative of that church. The Stated Clerk shall announce to member churches of the World Alliance of Reformed Churches the date and place of the next meeting of the General Assembly. When officially certified through appropriate ecclesiastical channels at least forty-five days prior to the convening of the General Assembly, these persons shall be welcomed as guests of the General Assembly and introduced to the council through the report of the assembly committee addressing ecumenism. The assembly shall assume the expense and housing of such guests on the same basis as the expense of commissioners, but shall not reimburse any travel expenses to the assembly site.

c. The assembly may welcome persons invited by the General Assembly Mission Council or another entity of the General Assembly for the purpose of establishing or affirming particular ecumenical, mission, or program relationships, or assisting the entity in the presentation of particular items of business. Any expense reimbursement shall be the responsibility of the inviting entity.

d. The presbytery’s executive staff person (or designee) and the presbytery’s stated clerk shall be supplied with all reports and materials related to the General Assembly, but shall not be entitled to speak in plenary meetings or in meetings of assembly committees unless called upon by a moderator to provide information.

e. Ecumenical visitors are individuals attending a session of the General Assembly at their own initiative. These persons are welcomed to the assembly as unofficial visitors. The assembly shall assume no expenses for these ecumenical visitors.

f. Interfaith Representatives—Three observers of other faiths or religious traditions, who shall be representatives chosen by recognized religious bodies of non-Christian religious traditions and/or faith communities shall be present at the assembly at the invitation of the General Assembly Committee on Ecumenical Relations. The interfaith representatives shall be present with the church in its deliberations, and to speak to the assembly for the purpose of conveying greetings or messages, or bringing information germane to the decision-making process. The assembly shall assume the expense of housing and on the same basis as the expense of commissioners, but shall not reimburse any travel expenses to the assembly site.

6. List of Participants

Upon request, the Stated Clerk shall make available the list of participants registered for a session of the General Assembly to entities of the General Assembly, councils of the denomination, educational institutions, teaching elders, ruling elders, and independent organizations composed primarily of members of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). A fee will be charged for lists or mailing labels to cover the costs incurred for printing, postage, and handling.

4. Tentative Docket

1. Assembly Committee Structure
   a. The Stated Clerk shall propose the number and designation of assembly committees to the General Assembly. The Stated Clerk shall present the proposed committee structure to the General Assembly for consideration and ratification at the first assembly meeting at which business is transacted. In making these proposals, the Stated Clerk shall consult with the appropriate General Assembly entity or entities, and may consult with other persons.

   b. The Stated Clerk shall propose to the General Assembly for appointment the names of persons to serve as committee assistants for the duration of the General Assembly. The Stated Clerk shall consult with the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly before recommending persons to serve as committee assistants. Persons proposed shall not be commissioners to the General Assembly or staff members of entities of the General Assembly or any person who is a member of the General Assembly Mission Council or any person who is a member of any other entity of the General Assembly. A committee assistant shall be appointed to provide staff services to each assembly committee. The appointments shall be made in accordance with Book of Order, F-1.0401.

   c. The Moderator of the preceding General Assembly shall appoint a commissioner to be moderator and a second to be vice moderator of each committee. Final appointment shall be made only after consultation with the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly, and then also with representatives of the General Assembly Committee on Representation regarding the inclusivity mandated in the Book of Order, F-1.0403 and G-3.0103. The moderators of at least one-half of the assembly committees, including any committees dealing with finance and budgets, shall be ruling elders. The moderators of at least one-half of the assembly committees should be women. No more than one person from any one presbytery may be appointed to serve as a moderator or vice moderator. All synods shall be equitably represented.

   d. The moderators and vice moderators of the assembly committees, as a group, shall function as the Assembly Committee on Business Referral. The moderator and vice moderator of the Assembly Committee on Bills and Overtures shall function as the moderator and vice moderator of this committee as well. This committee shall report to the assembly for its action at the first meeting of the General Assembly for the transaction of business.
Orientation

e. The Stated Clerk shall conduct an orientation for moderators, vice moderators, and committee assistants of assembly committees no less than three weeks prior to the convening of the General Assembly. The orientation shall include information regarding business likely to be referred to each committee; suggested procedures for dealing with business referred to committees, especially the use of Robert’s Rules of Order, Newly Revised; utilization of available resources, both persons and materials; and preparation and presentation of assembly committee reports. The Stated Clerk, following consultation with the General Assembly Mission Council, may invite persons designated by the council as General Assembly resource coordinators to participate in the orientation. During this orientation, the Assembly Committee on Business Referral shall meet and carry out the duties given it by these rules. The Assembly Committee on Business Referral shall also meet, if necessary, just prior to the convening of the assembly and its function shall end at the convening of the assembly.

2. Assigning Commissioners to Assembly Committees

   a. Forty-five days before the convening of the General Assembly, the Stated Clerk shall assign each commissioner and advisory delegate to one of the assembly committees by the random selection process described in this standing rule.

   b. No later than thirty days before the convening of the assembly, commissioners shall receive the number and designation of committees. At the same time that the number and designation of committees is communicated, the Stated Clerk shall notify each person of the assignment, the time of their first meeting, and the necessity to confirm appropriate housing and travel arrangements.

   c. The Stated Clerk shall provide a list of the assignments to those who need it to facilitate the work of the General Assembly.

   d. Commissioners and advisory delegates shall be assigned to assembly committees by random selection as follows:

      (1) The Stated Clerk shall divide the presbyteries into six regional districts. Each district shall be composed of one or more presbyteries so arranged that, insofar as possible, the presbyteries in the district have contiguous boundaries and the numbers of commissioners in the several districts are approximately equal. Within each district the presbyteries shall be arranged alphabetically. The commissioners from each presbytery shall be listed alphabetically in two parallel lists: the first containing the names of the teaching elders; the second, the ruling elders. In those cases where the presbytery has not designated commissioners, the position shall be listed as vacant so that the name may be inserted later when the Stated Clerk is notified. The names of moderators and vice moderators of assembly committees shall be removed from the list and the names below them shall be moved up to fill the vacated positions. The teaching elder commissioners and vacant positions for teaching elder commissioners shall be numbered in sequence. The list of ruling elder commissioners in each district shall be rotated downward so that no ruling elder commissioner is opposite a teaching elder commissioner from the same presbytery. Separate lists of groups identified in Book of Order, F-1.0403, shall be prepared, insofar as it may be practical, to assure the most equitable distribution of such commissioners to the various committees in accordance with Book of Order, F-1.0403.

      (2) The Stated Clerk shall list the young adult advisory delegates in one list arranged in the alphabetical order of the presbyteries that designated the delegates. In any case where the presbytery has not designated a young adult advisory delegate, the position shall be listed as vacant so that the name may be inserted later when the Stated Clerk is notified.

      (3) The Moderator shall pick by lot a number from one to ten. This number shall identify the number of the name in the first column of names in each district in which the assignment will begin. It will also identify the number of the young adult advisory delegates in which assignment will begin.
(4) The Moderator shall then pick by lot a second number equal from one to the number equaling the total number of committees. This number shall identify the assembly committee in the order in which the committees are arranged in the standing rules to which the first assignment of members shall be made.

(5) The assignment of members of the assembly committees shall then proceed in sequence. When initial assignments have been made to all committees in sequence so that the committees with the fewest number of commissioners are full, additional assignment shall be made to the other committees in the same manner, until all commissioners and young adult advisory delegates have been assigned to committees.

(6) The Stated Clerk shall assign missionary advisory delegates and ecumenical advisory delegates to assembly committees in consultation with those delegates. Ordinarily not more than two persons in each of these categories shall be assigned to any one assembly committee.

(7) Theological student advisory delegates will be assigned to committees at the same time and in the same way as are commissioners to ensure their full participation and attendance.

(8) Names of commissioners and advisory delegates received after these assignments have been made shall be inserted in the appropriate position in the original list and assigned to the committee to which that position was assigned.

3. Referring Business

Recommendation for Referral of Business

a. The Stated Clerk shall submit to the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly a recommendation for the referral of all items of business coming before the General Assembly.

General Assembly Action on Referrals

b. After making any necessary changes, this committee shall present the prepared referrals to the Assembly Committee on Business Referral so that it may recommend referrals to the first meeting of the General Assembly for the transaction of business. Ordinarily, this committee shall recommend referrals to the General Assembly for its action. When the General Assembly is not scheduled to meet in time to act on its recommendation, the committee may refer business. Such referrals shall be reported to the General Assembly at its next business meeting.

How Referred

c. Items of business to be considered by the General Assembly shall be referred in one of the following ways:

(1) for consideration by an assembly committee and recommendation for action by the General Assembly;

(2) for consideration and action by an assembly committee with a report of the action to the General Assembly;

(3) for consideration by the General Assembly through its inclusion in a consent agenda;

(4) for consideration by the General Assembly in a plenary business session.

Referral Considered by One Committee
d. Each item of business referred to a committee shall ordinarily be considered by only one assembly committee, but in no case should there be more than one committee making a recommendation on an item of business. Business of a related nature shall be assigned to a single committee insofar as possible.

Referring Overtures to Committees
e. The Stated Clerk shall present such items of business to the Assembly Committee on Business Referral, along with a recommendation for their referral. In the event that the presbytery or synod disagrees with the referral recommendation, this procedure shall be followed: The presbytery or synod shall be entitled to submit a written statement regarding the background and intent of the overture at the time the overture is initially being considered for referral by the Assembly Committee on Business Referral. If, after that committee makes its recommendation, the presbytery or synod still disagrees with the referral recommendation, the presbytery or synod shall notify the Stated Clerk, in writing, of its disagreement. The overture advocate will then be entitled to speak to the background and intent of the overture at a special meeting of the Assembly Committee on Business Referral that shall be held no more than twenty-four (24) hours prior to the convening of the assembly.

4. Tentative Docket

   a. The Stated Clerk shall submit to the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly a tentative docket. After making any necessary adjustments, this committee shall present a proposed docket to the Assembly Committee on Business Referral so that it may recommend the docket to the first meeting of the General Assembly for the transaction of business.

   b. The reports and recommendations of the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly regarding the initial docket of the General Assembly and referrals of business shall be referred to the Assembly Committee on Business Referral, along with any items of business not included in them (see Standing Rules I.4.b.(3) and I.4.b.(4)). Review of the minutes of the synods pursuant to G-3.0502c and of statement(s) of compliance with decisions of the General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission by councils, reported by the Stated Clerk pursuant to IV.B.2.d. of the Organization for Mission, shall be assigned to the same assembly committee. Following the convening of the assembly, such matters shall be directed to the Assembly Committee on Bills and Overtures.

A commissioner certified by his or her presbytery as having a disability warranting assistance shall be entitled to designate a person to function as an assistant without vote during all proceedings of the General Assembly, including executive sessions and committee meetings, in order that the commissioner may fully participate in those proceedings. The expenses of the assistant shall be paid for by the General Assembly on the same basis as expenses of commissioners. The Stated Clerk shall also enroll assistants to commissioners who have been certified by his or her presbytery as having a disability warranting assistance.</td>

g. The only persons who shall be permitted access to the commissioner and advisory delegate seating area during plenary sessions are commissioners, advisory delegates, assistants enrolled by the Stated Clerk to assist commissioners having a disability warranting assistance, the Stated Clerk, Associate and Assistant Stated Clerks, and other staff and assembly assistants who are assigned responsibilities that require access to this area, including assisting at the floor microphones, delivery of official messages to commissioner and advisory delegates, and locating commissioners who are needed on the platform. The Stated Clerk will provide special credentials for the particular staff and assembly assistants who are authorized to enter the commissioner/advisory delegate seating area. Registered presbytery staff may have access to the seating area to contact their commissioners and advisory delegates during breaks in business.

2. Quorum

At the first meeting of the General Assembly for the transaction of business, the Stated Clerk shall recommend to the General Assembly that the roll call of commissioners be established by registration. Alternately, the Stated Clerk may call the roll of commissioners and advisory delegates by calling the names of absentees as they appear on the roll. After any needed corrections have been made, the Stated Clerk shall announce whether or not a quorum is present (see Book of Order, G-3.0503). When commissioners and advisory delegates subsequently register, they shall be seated by the General Assembly. A commissioner who has not registered may not be seated and may not vote.

3. Committee Moderators and Overture Advocates Meeting

The Office of the General Assembly shall, on the first business day of the assembly, before committees meet to consider business, organize a forum where assembly committee moderators shall meet with overture advocates to discuss procedures for participation in committee discussion of business related to the overture that they are advocating.

1. Committee Leadership and Support

   a. The moderator shall preside over the committee’s deliberations. The moderator may request the vice moderator to preside and to assist in the work of the committee.

   b. Each committee shall have available to assist in its work a recorder appointed by the Stated Clerk. The recorder shall be appointed from a pool of individuals who will already be attending the General Assembly, including staff members, local volunteers, and others. The recorder shall keep an accurate record of the actions of the committee with the votes on each indicating the number of committee members voting in the affirmative, or negative, or those abstaining; and shall assist in drafting the committee report.

   c. Each committee shall have available to assist in its work a committee assistant. The committee assistant may address the committee offering suggestions regarding procedure, but shall not participate in its deliberations on any issue before the committee as an advocate of one position or view regarding its action. The committee assistant shall assist the committee in securing desired resources.
2. Procedures for Assembly Committee Meetings

Open Meetings

a. Meetings of assembly committees shall be open to the public (as space permits) provided, however, that the committee may go into executive session at any time in accordance with the Open Meeting Policy, printed in the Manual of the General Assembly. Ordinarily, the committee assistant will be expected to remain with the committee in executive session.

Parliamentary Procedure

b. The deliberations of the committee shall be conducted in accordance with Robert’s Rules of Order, Newly Revised.

Use of Resources
c. Each committee shall determine the use to be made of the resource material or resource persons available to assembly committees. Each assembly committee shall determine whether or not to permit the distribution of particular materials to the committee members.

d. Resource material (except for previously published books or interpretive brochures), including advice and counsel memoranda, that provides background or advice on items of new business, including commissioners’ resolutions, shall be prepared as necessary by entities of the General Assembly and shall not exceed 1,000 words on each item of business referred. This material shall be submitted to the assembly committee leadership team prior to presentation to the assembly committee to which the business has been referred. A hard copy of this resource material, accompanied by a disk copy, shall be submitted to the Stated Clerk. The Assembly Committee on Bills and Overtures shall consider any request that is made to distribute this resource material to the full assembly.

Privilege to Speak
e. During the deliberations of the committee, in contrast to public hearings, only the following persons, having been recognized by the moderator, may speak:

(1) Members of the committee;

(2) Committee assistant;

(3) Persons with special expertise, including elected members or staff members of General Assembly entities;

(4) Overture advocates and signers of commissioners’ resolutions;

(5) Persons invited by the committee through a majority vote of the committee; and

(6) Representatives of the Advisory Committee on the Constitution, who may speak to overtures, commissioners’ resolutions, or other business on which the Advisory Committee on the Constitution has presented advice or recommendations, or matters that propose amendments to the Constitution, or that affect compatibility with other provisions of the Constitution.

(7) In the event that business being considered by an assembly committee has been referred to the Advisory Committee on the Constitution for advice, representatives of the Advisory Committee on the Constitution shall be entitled to speak.

(8) The committee moderator shall provide that the total time allotted to persons, other than members of the committee, who speak for or against a recommendation be equal so far as possible.

Overture Advocates/Signer of Commissioners’ Resolution

f. Overture advocates and one signer of each commissioners’ resolution shall be responsible for being available at the time selected by any assembly committee considering the matter. The overture advocate or one of the signers of a commissioners’ resolution shall be entitled to speak, as an individual (or in cooperation with other overture advocates in a pre-arranged presentation), to the background and intent of the overture or resolution immediately after the motion is made and seconded, placing the overture or resolution on the floor of the committee or subcommittee.
Responsibilities of Overture Advocate

g. Overture advocates who have been designated by their presbytery or synod to speak to the response from a General Assembly entity to a referral of an overture shall be responsible for being available at the time selected by the assembly committee considering the response. The overture advocate shall be entitled to speak to the background and intent of the overture or as asked for clarification by the committee concerning the original intent of the overture.

3. New Business

a. Each assembly committee shall consider only matters referred to it by the General Assembly. No assembly committee may initiate new business except as it relates to the business of the particular assembly committee.

b. New business initiated in an assembly committee proposing an amendment to the Constitution or requiring an interpretation of the Constitution by the General Assembly (Book of Order, G-6.04b and G-6.02) shall be referred to the Advisory Committee on the Constitution, which shall report its findings and recommendations to the General Assembly.

c. Any other new business initiated in an assembly committee that touches upon constitutional matters shall be communicated in writing to the Advisory Committee on the Constitution and the Stated Clerk. The Advisory Committee on the Constitution shall consider each matter so referred and report its findings and recommendations, which may include proposals for constitutional change, to the assembly committee and the Stated Clerk. The assembly committee shall vote on the recommendations and may amend or decline to approve them. The advice of the Advisory Committee on the Constitution on these matters shall be transmitted to the General Assembly with the report of the assembly committee.

d. Recommendations and reports to the assembly regarding such new business must be approved in assembly committees by three-fourths of the committee members voting on the matter.

e. New business, other than that described in this standing rule, must be presented in accordance with Standing Rule A.8.

f. New business initiated in an assembly committee proposing an amendment to the Constitution (Book of Order, G-6.04) or requiring an interpretation of the Constitution by the General Assembly (Book of Order, G-6.02) shall be referred to the Advisory Committee on the Constitution, which shall report its findings and recommendations to the General Assembly. Any other new business initiated in an assembly committee that touches upon constitutional matters shall be communicated in writing to the Advisory Committee on the Constitution and the Stated Clerk. The Advisory Committee on the Constitution shall consider each matter referred and report its findings and recommendations (which may include proposals for constitutional change) to the assembly committee and the Stated Clerk. The advice of the Advisory Committee on the Constitution on these matters shall be transmitted to the General Assembly with the report of the assembly committee.

4. Organizational Meeting

a. Ordinarily, the initial meeting of each assembly committee shall be an organizational meeting in private session for up to one hour for the purpose of developing intergroup dynamics and determining procedural matters, such as approval of the committee’s agenda and consideration of the style in which the committee plans to operate.

b. During this executive session, business items before the committee shall not be discussed or acted upon.
5. Public Hearings

Schedule

a. Each committee, with the exception of the Assembly Committee on Bills and Overtures, shall schedule at its convenience one or more public hearings on matters before it.

Time Limits for Presentations

b. The committee may limit the time for the presentation by any person during a public hearing, including an elected member or staff member of an entity of the General Assembly. If the time allotted for the public hearing is not sufficient to accommodate all the persons wishing to speak, a method shall be approved by the assembly committee that ensures that an equal number of persons on each side of an issue have an opportunity to speak. Any person denied the right to speak at the hearing may appeal to the Assembly Committee on Bills and Overtures on the basis that the method employed in selecting speakers was not fair.

Hearing Form

c. Any person who wishes to be heard in a public hearing shall sign up on a hearing form, posted in a public place in the building in which the assembly is being held, no later than the close of business on the second day of the General Assembly or one hour after the subsequent referral of business to the committee by the General Assembly. The location of hearing forms shall be announced during the first session of the assembly. In the event that an issue is expected to be controversial, those wishing to speak shall be asked to indicate whether they wish to speak for or against the recommendation.

6. Assembly Committee on Bills and Overtures

Responsible for Referral of Business

a. This committee shall neither retain any items of business for its own consideration, nor suppress any matter that comes before it. However, business that substantially duplicates matters already before the assembly may be declined by this committee and reported to the assembly with a statement of the committee’s action.

Coordination Between Committees

b. This committee shall keep itself informed of the subjects being considered by the other assembly committees, and, when any subject is taken up by more than one committee, this committee shall advise the moderators of those committees regarding ways to avoid redundant or inconsistent recommendations.

Distribution of Materials

c. This committee shall determine whether or not particular materials may be distributed to the commissioners and delegates to the General Assembly, and specify the time and manner of distribution of any authorized by it. Particular materials distributed in assembly committees shall not be distributed to the full assembly without the approval of the Assembly Committee on Bills and Overtures, including the time and manner of distribution.

Requests to Schedule Event

d. The committee shall review requests from entities of the General Assembly, councils, other entities related to the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) in any way, or coalitions in which this denomination or any of its entities participate, to schedule meetings, briefings, hearings, or other events of any kind during those hours when the General Assembly or its committees are in session.

7. Reports of Assembly Committees

Writing the Report

a. The moderator, vice moderator, committee assistant, and recorder, together with such other persons as the moderator may designate, shall draft the report of the committee following the sample form provided by the Stated Clerk.

Content

b. The reports of assembly committees shall contain only (1) the recommendations to be submitted to the General Assembly, and, where necessary, a brief statement of the committee’s reasons for such recommendations, and (2) the actions taken by the committee on items referred to the committee for action. Material necessary to identify the item of business and brief explanations may be included in the report. Extensive background information and detail contained in other documents in the hands of the commissioners shall not be included.

Fiscal Implications

c. Each assembly committee shall include with each recommendation or action in its report statements advising the General Assembly whether or not the recommendation or action has fiscal implications affecting any budget under consideration by the assembly.

Identify Entity

d. Recommendation for assembly action, or action taken by the committee, shall identify the entity that is directed to carry out and report back to the General Assembly regarding the matter dealt with by the recommendation or action.

GAMC to Determine Entity

e. When the entity to which an assembly action is directed is a part of the General Assembly Mission Council, such as a division or related entity, the Stated Clerk shall automatically amend the language so that the action is directed to the General Assembly Mission Council. The council shall determine which entity shall carry out the responsibility and report to the assembly on the matter.

Votes Recorded

f. The votes recorded in the assembly committee on each recommendation or action shall be included in the report for the information of the commissioners, but shall be omitted from the Journal of the General Assembly.

Confer with Entity Affected by Action

g. If the report of an assembly committee proposes or records an action affecting the interests of an entity of the General Assembly or of a council other than the General Assembly, it shall be the responsibility of that assembly committee to confer with the representative(s) designated by the entity or council concerned before proposing such action to the General Assembly or taking such an action.

Minority Report

h. Minority Report

(1) A minority of the members of an assembly committee, or an individual member of an assembly committee, may submit in writing views that differ from those in the committee report. If the moderator of the committee shall affirm in writing that the positions expressed as recommendations for action by the assembly in a written minority report were presented to the whole committee during its consideration of the matter, the Stated Clerk shall reproduce the minority report and distribute it with the report of the committee.

(2) A minority report must be appropriate for consideration as a substitute motion (see Robert’s Rules of Order, Newly Revised, 2011, p. 527).

1. Assembly Committee on Bills and Overtures Reports

   a. The Assembly Committee on Bills and Overtures shall report at the beginning of each meeting, recommending any necessary changes in order of business and any referrals it may have considered since its last report.

   b. The Assembly Committee on Bills and Overtures may, at any time, recommend limits on debates or changes in the docket to facilitate the handling of business. The reports of the committee shall take precedence over any other business, including orders of the day.
Review Minutes

c. This committee shall review the minutes of the General Assembly daily, report to the General Assembly any suggested corrections, and recommend approval of the minutes. The minutes shall be posted on the church’s website and two printed copies of the minutes shall be posted in different places during the following day for examination by commissioners. The minutes of the meetings of the General Assembly during the last two days of its session shall be submitted for review and approval within ten days after the adjournment of the General Assembly to a subcommittee of the Assembly Committee on Bills and Overtures.

Requests for Communicating with Assembly
d. Requests for the privilege of communicating with the General Assembly shall be referred to this committee, which shall confer with persons making such requests about the time and the manner in which their concerns may be brought to the attention of the General Assembly. The Assembly Committee on Bills and Overtures shall recommend to the General Assembly a response regarding any possible presentation to the assembly. At the time any such recommendation is acted upon, any commissioner may request that an opposing view be heard, and the assembly shall consider and act upon the matter.

Referral of Protests
e. Protests expressing disagreement with an action or failure to act on the part of the General Assembly shall be referred to the Assembly Committee on Bills and Overtures, which shall decide whether or not the protest is decorous and respectful. Should the committee decide the protest is decorous and respectful, the protest shall be entered in the Minutes. The committee may prepare an answer to be printed with any protest so entered (see Book of Order, G-3.0105b).

2. Reports of Assembly Committees

Distribution
a. Copies of the reports of assembly committees (print or electronic) shall ordinarily be distributed to commissioners no later than the close of the meeting prior to the one at which they are to be considered. The Stated Clerk shall arrange for the reproduction and distribution of reports.

Adequate Docket Time
b. The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly, in consultation with the Stated Clerk, shall docket adequate time for the reports of committees, including ample time for debate and action. If a report requires more time than docketed, the Assembly Committee on Bills and Overtures shall consult with the committee for additional time to complete consideration of the report.

Committee Moderators
c. Committee moderators should move the approval of recommendations with minimum comment, and material in the commissioners’ printed resources shall not be read.

Financial Implication
d. The financial effect of each recommendation on budgets previously approved or under consideration shall be clearly presented at the time that the recommendation is considered by the assembly.

3. Minority Reports

Must Stand as Full and Complete Substitute
a. In order to be considered by the assembly, a minority report shall not only set aside the majority report but also be able to stand as a full and complete substitution for the majority report recommendations. A minority report shall be moved as a substitute only after the majority report has first been moved. When this happens, the assembly shall first consider (and may amend) the majority report. When consideration of the majority report is completed, the assembly may then consider (and may amend) the minority report. Further efforts to perfect each report shall be held to a minimum in order that the assembly can concentrate instead on the issue of whether to make the proposed substitution.

Reasons Supporting Committee’s Recommendation
b. The moderator of the committee, or another member of the committee, shall present reasons supporting the committee’s recommendation. They may be presented before any minority report is moved or presented during the narrative report of the committee, or presented during debate on the question of whether or not the substitution shall become the main motion. (See also Standing Rule E.7.h.)
4. Committee Reports on the Budget

   a. At the first meeting of the General Assembly for the transaction of business following the meetings of assembly committees, the assembly shall hear a report on the per capita budget from the committee that has reviewed that budget.

   b. On the final day of the assembly, an amended per capita budget that incorporates the financial implications of actions taken by the assembly shall be presented to the assembly for approval.

5. Plenary Meeting Procedures

   a. In debate on any pending matter, no commissioner or delegate shall be allowed to speak more than three minutes until all other commissioners or delegates who desire to speak on the pending matter have been heard.

   b. (1) The General Assembly shall ordinarily decide questions by electronic voting. The Moderator may also call for unanimous consent by voice vote or show of hands. All decisions made by assembly standing committees by a three-quarters (supermajority) vote shall be placed on the assembly plenary consent agenda to be considered as the first order of plenary business following committee meetings. Any actions requesting constitutional change must be considered in plenary.

      (2) In addition to all consent items from assembly committees, the following items shall be placed on the assembly plenary consent agenda:

         (a) All unchallenged nominations from the General Assembly Nominating Committee.

         (b) Unanimous recommendations from assembly agencies and entities for confirmations of those offices that, according to the Manual of the General Assembly, require General Assembly confirmation.

         (3) In all cases, the right of any commissioner to remove any item from the plenary consent agenda or to call for one of the other forms of voting shall be preserved.”

   c. In view of the relative ease in which studies and programs may be approved, commissioners and other assembly committee members are cautioned to be mindful of the effort required of staff and elected members to carry out the General Assembly’s instructions.

   d. When the General Assembly is in plenary session, questions that touch upon constitutional matters, including rulings on questions of order involving constitutional matters requested by the Moderator, shall be handled by the Advisory Committee on the Constitution. These questions shall be referred in writing by the Moderator to the Advisory Committee on the Constitution, which shall consider each matter referred and make recommendations directly to the General Assembly through the Moderator.

   e. Use of cellular telephones is prohibited during meetings of the General Assembly and meetings of the assembly committees. During these meetings, pagers may be used only in the silent mode.

   f. Emergency messages will be relayed to a commissioner or advisory delegate during plenary meetings by way of a written message delivered by one of the Stated Clerk’s designated staff or assembly assistants.

   g. Any person permitted to remain during any executive session is expected to agree to be bound by the confidentiality required of commissioners.
6. General Assembly Nominating Committee

   a. Unless the General Assembly shall have made some other provision, the nominating committee shall present to each session of the General Assembly a nominee for election to each vacancy on the entities of the General Assembly that shall exist because of a scheduled end of term, resignation, death, incapacity to act, change of residence, or any other reason.

   b. The General Assembly Nominating Committee may decline to submit a nomination(s) to a particular vacancy(s) when requested to do so by the affected entity because of an expected merger of entity or a transfer of duties between entities in order to reduce the number of persons serving on a particular entity(s).

   c. Nominating from the Floor

      (1) Nominations by commissioners shall be in order unless the vacancy is required to be filled upon nomination from some other source.

      (2) When any nomination for service on a General Assembly committee, council, or board comes from the floor of the assembly, the commissioner making the nomination will provide the General Assembly Nominating Committee, no later than 48 hours after the convening of the General Assembly, with pertinent information about the person whose name is being presented, as well as the name of the particular person nominated by the nominating committee whose nomination is being challenged. Such information shall be provided on the “Nomination by Commissioner Form” provided for use at the assembly and available from the Stated Clerk. The availability of the pertinent information provided by the person challenging the nominating committee’s nominee shall be announced to the assembly at least twenty-four hours in advance of the nomination being made from the floor.

      (3) In the event that there are nominations from the floor, the election shall proceed as follows:

         (a) The General Assembly will deal with one challenged position at a time.

         (b) The name of the General Assembly Nominating Committee’s nominee shall be placed in nomination by its moderator. The Moderator of the General Assembly shall call upon the commissioner who is placing a nomination from the floor to put that name in nomination.

         (c) Once the names are placed in nomination, the order of speaking shall be first, the commissioner or a designee speaking on behalf of the floor nominee and second, the General Assembly Nominating Committee member or a designee speaking to its nominee. Both the commissioner (or designee) and the General Assembly Nominating Committee member (or designee) shall speak from the platform. Such speech shall not exceed three minutes in length. There shall be no other speeches seconding the nomination of any nominee.

         (d) Without further discussion or debate, the General Assembly will move to vote.

7. Docket Time for Special Greetings

   a. When the Head of Communion of a member church of the World Alliance of Reformed Churches, the World Council of Churches, or the National Council of Churches is in attendance at a session of the General Assembly as an ecumenical advisory delegate or as an ecumenical representative, and proper notice is provided, the assembly shall provide up to five minutes of docket time to each such Head of Communion to present a greeting to the assembly.

   b. The placing of this greeting on the docket will be assigned by the Stated Clerk.
8. Announcements and Nonofficial Printed Materials

   a. Only announcements connected directly with the business of the General Assembly shall be read from the platform and all notices shall be submitted either to the Moderator or the Stated Clerk for approval. Telegrams and special letters shall be reported to the General Assembly only at times to be designated by the Moderator.

   b. Printed materials that are not official business before the General Assembly may be distributed at authorized booths in the General Assembly Exhibit Hall. Other distribution is permitted in the mailboxes provided for commissioners and advisory delegates, and also can be handed out twenty-five feet or more from entrances to the building in which the General Assembly meets.

9. Distributing Study Documents

   a. Whenever the General Assembly itself shall require the distribution of a document for study (whether the proposal originates through the recommendation of an entity, the presentation of an overture or resolution, or arises during the conduct of the assembly’s business) with a request for a response (whether the response is sought from individuals, congregations, councils, organizations of any kind, or any combination of these), the study document shall be accompanied by resource materials, bibliography, and aids as set forth in the document “Forming Social Policy,” Section 5, printed in the Manual of the General Assembly. Along with a response instrument and the resource materials, bibliography, and aids, the document shall be distributed on a schedule that provides for the study guide and all accompanying material to be in the possession of the proposed respondents for a minimum of twelve months before the due date of the response.

   b. The entity to be responsible for receiving the responses and reporting to the General Assembly the summary of the responses shall be identified in the material. The report on the responses to the study may be presented no earlier than to the General Assembly that convenes in the second year after the session of the General Assembly that approves the study.

10. Forming Social Policy

    The entities of the General Assembly, including its committees, commissions, and special committees, shall be governed by the document, “Forming Social Policy” printed in the Manual of the General Assembly, when that entity is considering making a social witness policy.

11. Peaceful Demonstrations

    a. Peaceful demonstrations shall be allowed twenty-five or more feet outside of the entrances to the building in which General Assembly meets.

    b. Spontaneous or planned demonstrations by individuals or groups are prohibited inside the building where the General Assembly meets. The Moderator of the General Assembly shall declare all demonstrations that occur in plenary session out of order and, if demonstrators fail to immediately disband and desist, may recess the General Assembly to a fixed time and place. This rule does not prohibit the spontaneous or planned celebration of an action of the General Assembly or of any event in the life of the church.
General Assembly Meeting Worship

Services of Worship

a. Moderator of Preceding General Assembly Responsible for Planning

b. Ecumenical Worship

c. In Conformity with Directory for Worship

---

Moderator of Preceding General Assembly Responsible for Planning

a. The Moderator of the preceding General Assembly shall plan daily worship at the General Assembly, and a worship service including the celebration of the Lord’s Supper; and shall provide, in advance, suitable leadership for these periods of worship. The Lord’s Supper shall be celebrated at the first service of worship of the General Assembly session, and the Moderator shall preside on this occasion and preach a sermon or deliver an address. The Moderator shall seek advice to ensure inclusivity in the planning of appropriate daily worship periods. The Moderator shall assure adequate transmittal of information about the planning of worship periods to the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly.

b. The Stated Clerk shall plan an ecumenical period of worship and provide, in advance, suitable leadership for this period of worship.

c. The various acts of worship planned for the session of the General Assembly shall be in conformity with the requirements of the Directory for Worship, and shall be developed and led according to the guidance of the document, “Presbyterians at Worship in Mass Assemblies.” In the preparation and conduct of all worship services, care shall be taken that all language, sight, hearing, accessibility, and other barriers be eliminated so that there can be full participation of all attendees. [Example: That printed orders of service also be printed in braille and that signing be available.]
Persons in Ordered Ministry and Elections

1. Moderator of the General Assembly
   a. Title/Functions
      (1) The Moderator of the General Assembly is an ecclesiastical person in ordered ministry, along with the Stated Clerk, of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A). The ministry of the Moderator is grounded in the ministry of baptized persons and in the particular ordained ministry of ruling elders and teaching elders.
      (2) The title of the Moderator is “The Moderator of the [number] General Assembly [(year)] of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.).”
      (3) The Moderator of the General Assembly is a commissioner of the General Assembly.
      (4) When the Moderator presides at the assembly, it is to be a sign of the bond of unity, community, and mission in the life of the church. During the period between assemblies, the Moderator serves as an ambassador of the unity of the Spirit in the bonds of peace, telling the story of the church’s life and upholding the people of God through prayer.
      (5) The Moderator shall preside over the General Assembly that elects him or her, and over the meetings of the next General Assembly until a successor is elected. The Moderator possesses the authority necessary for preserving order and for conducting efficiently the business of the council (Book of Order, G-3.0104).
      (6) The Moderator and the Vice Moderator shall submit a written report of their work to the session of the General Assembly at which their successors are installed.
   b. Election of the Moderator
      (1) Each person nominated to serve as Moderator of the General Assembly must be a commissioner to the General Assembly. Action by presbyteries to endorse candidates for Moderator of the General Assembly shall not take place until after the adjournment of the immediately preceding assembly. The Office of the General Assembly shall provide resourcing and orientation for Moderatorial candidates.
      (2) Ordinarily, no later than forty-five days prior to the convening of the assembly, the Moderatorial candidates will announce the name of a commissioner each has selected to offer to the assembly to confirm as Vice Moderator.
      (3) The following campaign procedures shall be observed:
         (a) Candidates should budget campaign spending of no more than $1,500, excluding travel and meeting expenses related to their candidacy. Each candidate shall submit to the Stated Clerk an itemized statement of expenses, including travel and meeting expenses related to his/her candidacy and in kind contributions. This statement shall be submitted to the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly prior to the convening of the General Assembly. This information shall be distributed to commissioners and advisory delegates prior to the election of the Moderator. The statement of expenses of all candidates shall be kept on file in the Office of the General Assembly following the meeting of the General Assembly. The Office of the General Assembly shall not reimburse a candidate for campaign expenses, but shall assume expenses involved in printing and distributing material submitted for information packets as outlined in Standing Rule H.1.b.(3)(e).

(b) In order to encourage reliance on the leading of the Holy Spirit in the selection of the Moderator, no candidate shall send a mailing of any campaign materials, print or electronic, to commissioners and/or advisory delegates or permit such a mailing to be sent, nor shall candidates or their advocates contact commissioners and/or advisory delegates by telephone.

(c) Distribution of written campaign materials at General Assembly shall be limited to the public distribution area.

(d) Candidates are encouraged to meet and make themselves available for conversation with commissioners and advisory delegates within the scope of these procedures.

(e) Not less than fifteen days before the convening of the General Assembly, the Stated Clerk shall publish for commissioners and advisory delegates an electronic information packet containing the following material regarding each candidate for Moderator who is known to the Stated Clerk and who wishes to be included:

(i) A photograph, a biographical sketch, a personal statement by the candidate that includes a statement regarding the candidate’s sense of call to the ordered ministry,

(ii) A written presentation by the presbytery having jurisdiction over the candidate, if that council has endorsed the candidate,

(iii) An announcement of the commissioner each candidate has selected to be presented to the assembly for confirmation as Vice Moderator if the candidate is elected,

(iv) The responses of the candidate to a questionnaire developed by the Stated Clerk.

The layouts for the presentation under this standing rule (as outlined above) may be chosen by the candidates, but all material including photographs submitted for each presentation shall be provided in electronic format as well as print. The material shall be submitted to the Stated Clerk no less than forty-five days before the convening of the General Assembly for reproduction and distribution, and shall be accompanied by a statement indicating the willingness of the candidate to serve as Moderator, if elected.

Each proposed Vice-Moderator candidate who wishes to be included may send biographical information and a photograph in electronic format.

(4) The Moderator of the General Assembly shall be elected in the following manner:

(a) When the General Assembly is ready to elect its Moderator, each candidate shall be nominated by a commissioner to the assembly in the following manner: the commissioners making nominations shall be recognized at microphones on the assembly floor. Upon recognition by the assembly Moderator, the nominator shall say, “Moderator, I place in nomination for the office of Moderator of the ___ General Assembly Ruling/Teaching Elder _____ from the Presbytery of ________.” The nominator shall then return to his/her seat on the plenary floor. No seconds to nominations are required.

(b) After nominations are closed, each nominee shall be afforded an opportunity to address the General Assembly for a time not to exceed five minutes, expressing the... concerns that nominee feels to be the most important for the church. The order of speaking shall be determined by lot, the drawing conducted by the most recent Moderator attending the General Assembly.

(c) At the conclusion of all the presentations by the nominees, they shall respond to questions from the floor. The first question shall be addressed to the nominee who spoke first in the original presentation, and the same question shall then be put to the other nominees in the same order in which they spoke earlier. The second question shall be directed to the second nominee in this order and then to each of the other nominees in sequence. Each nominee shall be afforded an opportunity to answer each question. This process shall continue for a period not to exceed the number of nominees times fifteen minutes, or for one hour, whichever is shorter, unless terminated earlier by vote of the General Assembly.

(d) Where there is only one nominee for Moderator, the election may be by acclamation. Where there is more than one, the election may be by secret ballot in one of the following ways:

(i) Each commissioner shall vote by means of an electronic voting system. The Stated Clerk shall advise the Moderator of the totals. The Moderator shall announce the result of the vote as tabulated. If no nominee has received a majority of the whole vote, another vote shall be taken in the same manner. When one nominee shall have received a majority, the Moderator shall announce the result and declare the nominee to be elected.

(ii) If the assembly votes to use paper ballots, the Stated Clerk shall provide ballots and assign no fewer than ten commissioners to act as tellers, collecting and counting the ballots. The results shall be given to the Stated Clerk who shall report the totals to the Moderator who shall announce them to the assembly.

(5) The Stated Clerk shall provide a service of installation for the newly elected Moderator as the last item of business at the session in which the Moderator is elected. The family of the newly elected Moderator and all previous Moderators shall be invited to the platform. The service shall use the order of service for “Installation of Governing Body Officers and Staff” from the Book of Occasional Services. The processional banner of the Moderator shall precede the newly elected Moderator into the assembly. The Moderator’s cross and stole shall be presented by the most recent serving Moderator. A representative of the presbytery of the Moderator’s membership shall ask the questions of installation. The newly elected Moderator invites a person to lead the prayer of installation. The most recent serving Moderator gives the charge, a hymn is sung by the assembly, and the newly elected Moderator gives the benediction.

Vice Moderator

C. Vice Moderator

1. Ordinarily, no later than forty-five days before the convening of the assembly, a Moderatorial candidate shall announce the selection of a commissioner who will be proposed to serve as Vice Moderator. At the next business session of the assembly following the election of the Moderator, the Moderator shall propose to the assembly the name of the commissioner for Vice Moderator. After a brief speech by the person selected, the assembly shall immediately proceed to vote on his or her confirmation. Should there be no confirmation, the Moderator shall bring another commissioner’s name for confirmation to the next business session of the assembly. The Stated Clerk shall provide a service of installation for the newly elected Vice Moderator.

2. The Vice Moderator represents the assembly at the request of the Moderator. When the Vice Moderator serves in this capacity, all those duties incumbent on the Moderator shall be expected of him/her.

3. The Moderator may request the Vice Moderator to preside and to assist in the performance of other functions of the Moderator during and following the General Assembly.

Vacancy

D. Vacancy in the Office of the Moderator or Vice Moderator

1. Should the office of the Moderator of the General Assembly become vacant, the Vice Moderator shall fulfill the functions of the Moderator. In such circumstance, all constitutional obligations and functions as prescribed by the Standing Rules of the General Assembly and the Book of Order shall be incumbent upon the Vice Moderator of the General Assembly.

(2) Should the office of the Vice Moderator of the General Assembly also become vacant, the most recent living Moderator shall fulfill the functions of the Moderator as specified in the Constitution of the church.

2. Stated Clerk of the General Assembly

   a. Title and Functions of the Stated Clerk at the General Assembly

   (1) The title of the Stated Clerk is “The Stated Clerk of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.)” and may be used by the incumbent until a successor is elected and takes office.

   (2) The Stated Clerk is accountable, through the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly, to the General Assembly for the performance of the duties of the office, and shall present to each meeting of the General Assembly a report on the state of the church.

   (3) The Stated Clerk is responsible for all matters related to the sessions of the General Assembly and all other matters relative to and arising from the General Assembly for which no other assignment has been made.

   (4) The Stated Clerk shall also be responsible for guidance of the procedures for candidates seeking the office of Moderator, and for supervision of the election of each Moderator.

   (5) In accordance with directives from previous General Assemblies and in consultations with the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly, the General Assembly Mission Council, and other General Assembly agencies, the Stated Clerk is authorized to decide on matters pertaining to facilities and special events that must be established before the first meeting of the Assembly Committee on Bills and Overtures.

   (6) The Stated Clerk shall receive all reports, communications, overtures, and any other materials appropriate for General Assembly consideration. The Stated Clerk shall recommend to the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly, for presentation to the Assembly Committee on Business Referral, a referral of such items of business coming before the General Assembly (Standing Rule C.3.e.).

   (7) The Stated Clerk shall prepare for consideration of the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly a proposed docket for the General Assembly’s consideration of its business (Standing Rule C.4.a.). The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly shall present the proposed docket to the first meeting of the Assembly Committee on Bills and Overtures so that it may recommend a docket to the commissioners at the first business session. The docket presented to the Assembly Committee on Bills and Overtures shall provide a time early in the General Assembly for a report by the Stated Clerk on the state of the church, and for a report by the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly.

   (8) The Stated Clerk shall propose to the General Assembly the number of assembly committees and a name for each committee after consultation with the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly and the appropriate General Assembly entity or entities (Standing Rule C.1.). The Stated Clerk shall present the committee structure to the General Assembly for ratification at the first business session. Each commissioner and advisory delegate shall be assigned by random selection to one assembly committee at least forty-five days before the opening date of the General Assembly (Standing Rule C.2.).

   (9) The Stated Clerk shall provide opportunity for orienting the commissioners, advisory delegates, and others taking part in the session of the General Assembly. The use of Robert’s Rules of Order, sources of parliamentary advice, and the availability of resource persons and materials to facilitate their work should be part of the orientation.
The Stated Clerk shall be the parliamentarian for the meetings of the General Assembly, or arrange for the service of a professional parliamentarian.

The Stated Clerk shall transmit to the councils and agencies of the assembly, persons who presented business to the assembly, and others affected by the assembly’s actions, a report on actions of the General Assembly on matters pertaining to their concerns. The Stated Clerk shall transmit to the presbyteries all assembly actions on which the presbyteries are requested to take action.

As soon as practicable after the adjournment of the General Assembly, the Stated Clerk shall publish the assembly’s proceedings and other documents as the assembly may direct in an appropriate format (i.e. print or electronic) to be determined by the Stated Clerk.

Election

b. Election of the Stated Clerk

The Constitution of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) requires the election of a Stated Clerk and the standing rules describe the procedures for the election. The Stated Clerk of the General Assembly shall be elected for a term of four years and is eligible for reelection to additional four-year terms. The Stated Clerk is accountable to the General Assembly for the performance of the assigned functions.

The Stated Clerk of the General Assembly shall be elected in the manner described in this standing rule. No member of the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly or other persons involved in this procedure as a member of the search committee or as a person providing staff services to the committee may be considered for nomination as Stated Clerk. The incumbent Stated Clerk may not participate in any way in the election process described in this standing rule. In the year there is an election of a Stated Clerk, the Moderator shall appoint a temporary Stated Clerk during the period of the election at the General Assembly.

The General Assembly that meets prior to the end of the term of a Stated Clerk shall elect a Stated Clerk Nomination Committee.

(a) The slate of nominees for the review/nomination committee shall consist of the following: three members of the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly (nominated by the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly, one of whom shall serve as moderator of the committee), one member of the General Assembly Mission Council (nominated by the General Assembly Mission Council), and five at-large members nominated by the General Assembly Nominating Committee in the following categories: one council stated clerk and four persons (two ruling elders and two clergy) from among commissioners who have attended an assembly in the past six years. The General Assembly Nominating Committee shall present to the assembly for election the slate of nominees for the Stated Clerk Nomination Committee. The slate presented shall reflect the denomination’s commitment to inclusiveness.

(b) Nominations from the floor for the nomination committee shall be in order following the distribution of the printed list of proposed nominees by the General Assembly Nominating Committee and a declaration by the Moderator that the names are in nomination. Names placed in nomination from the floor shall be in opposition to a particular name of an at-large member placed in nomination by the General Assembly Nominating Committee, and must be in the same category (H.2.b.(3)(a)). More than one person may be placed in nomination from the floor in opposition to an at-large nominee.

(c) The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly shall be responsible for providing the nomination committee with an up-to-date position description.

(d) The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly will ensure that an adequate budget for the nomination process is provided in the Office of the General Assembly and shall designate staff services for the Stated Clerk Nomination Committee.
(e) The nomination committee shall begin its work no later than 300 days before the start of the assembly that will elect the Stated Clerk.

(f) The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly shall be responsible for conducting the end-of-term evaluation of the Stated Clerk.

(g) The nominating committee shall announce that persons seeking the position of Stated Clerk shall file a completed application form and a resume or personal information form (PIF) with the committee 180 days before the opening of the General Assembly.

If the incumbent wants to be considered, he or she will notify the committee in writing and submit a current resume or PIF 180 days before the opening of the General Assembly. The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly shall provide a copy of the end-of-term evaluation to the Stated Clerk Nominating Committee.

(h) Additional written material may be requested by the committee. No one may be nominated to serve as Stated Clerk who has not provided an application to the committee.

(i) The committee shall review and evaluate all applications to determine the constitutional eligibility of the candidates. Any candidate who is determined to not be eligible will be notified in writing within forty-five days of receipt of their resume or PIF.

(j) The committee shall interview all eligible candidates using the same methodology and select one as the committee’s recommendation. All members of the committee shall ordinarily participate in the interview. The committee shall declare its nominee no later than sixty days before the opening of the General Assembly.

(k) Any of the applicants for the position of Stated Clerk, including the incumbent Stated Clerk if not the nominee of the committee, who wish to be placed in nomination against the nominee of the committee shall declare their intention to do so no later than forty-five days before the opening of the General Assembly.

(l) At the convening of the General Assembly, the Office of the General Assembly shall distribute to commissioners and advisory delegates an information packet containing the following material regarding each candidate for Stated Clerk who wishes to be included:

(i) A photograph, a biographical sketch, a personal statement by the candidate, including a statement regarding the candidate’s sense of call to the ordered ministry,

(ii) The responses of the candidate to a questionnaire developed by the committee based upon issues that will be before the church as presented in business to be considered by the General Assembly.

(iii) The material submitted shall be typewritten on paper 8-1/2 x 11 inches in size. The layouts for the presentation under this standing rule (as outlined above) may be chosen by the candidates, but the copy submitted for each presentation shall be provided in one color on one side of one sheet. The material shall be submitted to the Office of the General Assembly no less than thirty days before the convening of the General Assembly for reproduction and distribution and shall be accompanied by a statement indicating the willingness of the candidate to serve as Stated Clerk, if elected.

(m) The candidates may not distribute any other materials, print or electronic, including flyers, buttons, tokens or other objects that would denote a campaign for the office of Stated Clerk.

(n) Other organizations supporting the candidacy of a particular candidate may not distribute materials electronically, through the mail, or at the General Assembly with the knowledge, support, or permission of that candidate. Should a candidate discover that an organization is advocating or campaigning for him or her, it is expected that the candidate will request that organization to cease its activities. The same expectation will be true of organizations that are critical of a particular candidate for Stated Clerk.
(o) Each candidate will be provided a place to meet and talk with commissioners and advisory delegates two days before the election. Only information provided by the Office of the General Assembly may be distributed in those rooms. Other materials, apart from that packet, are not permitted. Each candidate for Stated Clerk will be allowed to post the times when he/she will be available for conversation in that room.

(p) Any questions concerning interpretation of the election process outlined in H.2.b. shall be determined by the Stated Clerk Nomination Committee.

(4) The General Assembly, by majority vote, shall elect the Stated Clerk in the following manner:

(a) Within forty-eight hours of the convening of the assembly, the Stated Clerk Review/Nomination Committee shall place in nomination a single nominee.

(b) The Moderator shall then invite other nominations from those who have completed the nomination process. Only one speech, made by a commissioner or a member of the Stated Clerk Nomination Committee not to exceed five minutes in length, shall be made to nominate each nominee. There shall be no speech seconding any nomination. Each person nominated from the floor shall reaffirm a willingness to serve as Stated Clerk, if elected.

(c) In the event there are no other nominations, the election shall proceed immediately as follows:

(i) The nominee for Stated Clerk shall be given an opportunity to address the assembly for a time not to exceed five minutes, expressing the nominee’s views regarding the functions and work of the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly.

(ii) The Moderator shall inquire of commissioners whether there are questions to be asked of the Stated Clerk Nomination Committee. Time allocated shall not exceed fifteen minutes. The Moderator shall inquire of commissioners whether there are questions to be asked of the nominee for Stated Clerk. The time allocated should not exceed fifteen minutes, after which the voting shall take place.

(d) In the event there are other nominations, the election shall proceed as follows:

(i) The election of the Stated Clerk shall take place as the first order of business on the next to last day of the assembly’s session.

(ii) Each nominee shall be given an opportunity to address the assembly for a time not to exceed five minutes, expressing the nominee’s views regarding the functions and work of the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly. The nominees shall speak in the same order as the presentation of nominating speeches.

(iii) The Moderator shall inquire of commissioners whether there are questions to be asked of the nominees for Stated Clerk. The first question shall be addressed to the nominee who was nominated first and the same question shall then be put to the other nominees in the same order in which they were nominated. The second question shall be directed to the second nominee in this order and then to each of the other nominees in sequence. Each nominee shall be afforded an opportunity to answer each question. This process shall continue for a period not to exceed the number of nominees times fifteen minutes, or for one hour, whichever is shorter, unless terminated earlier by vote of the General Assembly, after which the voting shall take place.

(5) Should there be a vacancy in the office of the Stated Clerk, the General Assembly Nominating Committee shall propose to the assembly, if the assembly is in session, members for the Stated Clerk Nomination Committee, or shall propose to the Moderator for appointment, if the assembly is not in session, to a Stated Clerk Nomination Committee. This committee shall be composed of members as outlined in Standing Rule H.2.b. and begin the process of a search for a candidate for Stated Clerk. The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly shall designate an acting Stated Clerk until such time as a Stated Clerk is elected.

(6) The Stated Clerk Nomination Committee shall be dismissed at the adjournment of the session of the General Assembly at which the committee presents a nominee for Stated Clerk.
(7) A new Stated Clerk shall normally assume office thirty days after the adjournment of the assembly. A longer period of transition between Stated Clerks may be negotiated by the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly, but shall not exceed ninety days.

Acting Stated Clerk

c. Acting Stated Clerk

In case of the incapacity, resignation, or death of the Stated Clerk, the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly shall designate an Acting Stated Clerk until such time as the Stated Clerk is able to resume the duties or the General Assembly elects a new Stated Clerk. The person so designated may be one of the Associate Stated Clerks or another person eligible for election as Stated Clerk.

Associate Stated Clerks

d. Associate Stated Clerks

The General Assembly may elect one or more Associate Stated Clerks as the General Assembly shall determine. The Stated Clerk shall nominate persons to fill each such office after consultation with the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly. The term of office shall be four years, subject to reelection at the pleasure of the General Assembly.

1. Date and Place of Meeting

   a. The General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) shall meet on the date and at the place fixed by the preceding General Assembly for a period, which shall be known as a session of the General Assembly, preferably between May 15 and July 31, subject to the possibility of change (see Standing Rule I.4.b.(10) and Book of Order, G-3.0503, for exceptions). The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly shall recommend to the General Assembly for its action the date and place of meeting six years hence and any necessary changes in dates and places of meetings previously set. Should action regarding date or place of meeting become necessary at a time when the General Assembly is not in session, this committee is empowered to fix a new date or place of meeting.

   b. The host body for any session of the General Assembly shall be a presbytery(s) of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). Any presbytery that desires to invite the General Assembly to meet within its bounds shall forward an invitation to the Stated Clerk no later than May 1 of the year that is seven years prior to the earliest effective date of the invitation.

   c. The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly shall determine the criteria that render a place an eligible site for a meeting of the General Assembly, including the requirement that all meeting arrangements shall be made to facilitate full participation by persons with disabilities. These criteria may be obtained from the Office of the General Assembly.

   d. In order to distribute the benefits experienced from hosting a General Assembly meeting throughout the church, the place of meeting shall be rotated among the following four areas (unless prevented by financial or other practical considerations):

      • Area A: Synod of Alaska/Northwest, Synod of the Pacific, Synod of Southern California and Hawaii, Synod of the Rocky Mountains, Synod of the Southwest;
      • Area B: Synod of the Sun, Synod of Lakes and Prairies, Synod of Mid-America;
      • Area C: Synod of Living Waters, Synod of Lincoln Trails, Synod of the Covenant;
      • Area D: Synod of South Atlantic, Synod of Puerto Rico, Synod of the Northeast, Synod of the Trinity, Synod of the Mid-Atlantic.
2. Meeting Arrangements

a. The Stated Clerk shall oversee all arrangements for the meeting and housing of the General Assembly, including: the assignment of time and place for all special events and public meetings connected with or scheduled at the time of the General Assembly; the assignment of time and place for exhibits at the General Assembly; and the assignment of commissioners, advisory delegates, and others to hotels and other accommodations.

b. The Stated Clerk shall appoint persons to serve as assembly assistants for the duration of the General Assembly. Persons appointed shall not be commissioners to the General Assembly or staff members of entities of the General Assembly. Assembly assistants shall be assigned to particular tasks to facilitate the work of the General Assembly. The appointments shall be made in accordance with Book of Order, F-1.0403.

c. The Stated Clerk shall arrange for the simultaneous interpretation of proceedings into Spanish and Korean languages for any participant during plenary meetings of the General Assembly. This service shall also be provided during assembly committee meetings, services of worship, and other events during the assembly for commissioners, advisory delegates, ecumenical guests, and, when possible, for other participants.

d. An event scheduled before, during, or immediately following a session of the General Assembly and extending an invitation to any or all participants of the assembly shall clearly identify the sponsor or sponsoring organization(s) in any invitations, announcements, or other publicity about the event.

3. Reimbursing Commissioner Expenses

a. The approved reimbursement for the travel expenses, food, lodging, and other approved expenses of commissioners at the sessions of the General Assembly shall be paid by the treasurer or the treasurer’s designee. The treasurer shall have the authority to deposit funds for such purposes in a bank or trust company where the General Assembly is to be in session. Commissioners shall be reimbursed by means of individual checks upon receipt of a voucher on a form provided by the treasurer. The Stated Clerk shall recommend to the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly the amount of any per diem. The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly shall set the per diem, and the Stated Clerk shall publish such per diem in the materials (print or electronic) provided to the commissioners. The treasurer shall determine the manner in which such checks shall be distributed and shall announce the place or places where such checks may be cashed.

b. The Office of the General Assembly shall reimburse an alternate commissioner for cost of meals (as specified in the per diem expenses for the particular session of the assembly to which the person is commissioned) during the period in which the alternate is actually seated as a commissioner. The total of the payments to the two persons shall not be larger than payment to a single commissioner attending the full assembly. The Office of the General Assembly shall reimburse either the original commissioner or the alternate who replaced the original commissioner for the costs of transportation and other approved expenses, but not both. It shall be the responsibility of the two individuals, with the assistance of the presbytery that elected them, to determine an appropriate division of the costs, whether reimbursement was in cash or a prepaid ticket was provided. Both persons shall be listed in the Journal as commissioners, with an indication of the period during which they served.

4. Assembly Meeting Work Group

a. The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly shall establish a work group on assembly arrangements to be composed of designated members from the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly, the Stated Clerk, the Moderator of the General Assembly, and the Executive Director of the General Assembly Mission Council. The moderator of the Committee on Local Arrangements, and the moderator and vice moderator of the Assembly Committee on Bills and Overtures (when selected) shall be nonvoting members of the committee at all meetings in which matters will be considered that affect their particular work. This work group shall be assigned responsibilities (1) through (10) in this Standing Rule I.4.b.

Responsibilities

b. Responsibilities

(1) Review the evaluation of each General Assembly session secured by the Stated Clerk.

(2) Outline the programs for future General Assemblies sufficiently in advance to ensure an orderly progression of themes and emphases and to ensure the appointment of significant speakers and other program participants.

(3) Review and present to the Assembly Committee on Business Referral a recommendation regarding the Stated Clerk’s proposed docket for the next session of the General Assembly.

(4) Review and present to the Assembly Committee on Business Referral a recommendation regarding the Stated Clerk’s proposed referral of each item of business to an appropriate assembly committee.

(5) Assist the Moderator regarding the appointment of a commissioner to be the moderator of each assembly committee and a commissioner to serve as vice moderator of each assembly committee.

(6) Consult with the Moderator regarding the planning of all worship at the General Assembly.

(7) Coordinate the programmatic aspects of each General Assembly session, ensuring that adequate time is provided for the business that must be transacted.

(8) Review requests from entities of the General Assembly, councils, other entities related to the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) in any way, or coalitions in which this denomination or any of its entities participate to schedule meetings, briefings, hearings, or other events of any kind during those hours when the General Assembly or its committees are in session.

(9) Prepare a report, including recommendations on the docket and the referral of assembly business, to be printed and distributed with other materials provided to commissioners.

(10) Review and present to the General Assembly for its action the date and place of meeting six years hence and any changes in dates and places of meetings previously set.

1. Method of Calling

   The Book of Order permits the calling of special meetings of the General Assembly (G-3.0503). The method of calling a special meeting is the required number of commissioners submitting a petition with the full text of the resolution to the Moderator of the General Assembly.

   a. A special meeting may be called providing the petition’s subject matter falls within the General Assembly’s responsibilities (G-3.0501).

   b. The urgent matter shall be brought in the form of a resolution or resolutions, stating the specific action proposed to be taken by the commissioners at the special meeting and shall include the reasons for proposing the decision to be made.

   c. A special meeting may not be called for the purpose of discussion only.

   d. The matters should be able to be resolved in a session of one or two days.

   e. The full text of the resolution shall appear on each page of the signed petitions.

   f. The Moderator may consult with the Assembly Committee on Bills and Overtures to determine any questions concerning whether the resolution meets the criteria for a called meeting or concerning the specific actions in the proposed resolution. This may take place by conference call.

   g. Resolutions requiring or proposing constitutional interpretation are subject to the 120-day requirement in G-6.02. The 120-day requirement begins upon receipt of the petition by the Moderator. The Moderator may consult with the Advisory Committee on the Constitution (ACC) to determine any questions concerning whether the resolution requires a constitutional interpretation.
2. Signatures

The Book of Order establishes the minimum number of signatures to require a called meeting. The Moderator, upon receipt of the petition, shall ask the Stated Clerk to complete the following within thirty days:

- Verification of PC(USA) Membership
  a. Send each presbytery stated clerk or clerk of session a letter verifying the current Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) membership of the individual signatory to the petition.
  b. Send each signatory to the petition a letter of verification asking the commissioner to verify the signature on the petition and if the commissioner concurs with the purpose of the request as stated in the resolution.

- Removal Request
  c. During the verification process, a commissioner may request removal of his or her name from the petition by notifying the Stated Clerk.

- Failure to Reply
  d. After all reasonable efforts to establish contact have been made, the name of a commissioner failing to reply to the letter of verification shall be removed from the petition.

- Verification Process Report
  e. The Stated Clerk shall report to the Moderator the results of the verification process.

3. Date and Location

The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly has the responsibility to fix the date and place of a meeting of the General Assembly when the General Assembly is not in session.

- Report of Decision to Call Meeting
  a. Upon receiving certification from the Stated Clerk that the petition has met the requirements of the Book of Order and the Standing Rules of the General Assembly, the Moderator shall report to the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly (COGA) the decision to call the meeting.

- COGA Sets Date and Place
  b. The COGA shall set the date and place of a called meeting.

- Expense Plan
  c. The COGA shall submit to the called meeting a plan to pay for its expenses. This plan shall be considered to be part of the business of the special meeting.

- Letter of Notification
  d. The letter of notification of the called meeting will be mailed to the commissioners no later than sixty days before the start of the meeting.

   b. Considerations for Creating
   c. Appointed by Moderator
   d. Length of Existence and Reports
   e. Review
   f. Representation at General Assembly and Funding

2. Special Administrative Review of Synods
   a. Three Ways to Review
   b. Written Request for Review

1. Commissions and Special Committees
   a. Unless otherwise specified in the assembly’s action, any body or group established by the General Assembly to carry out decisions of the assembly, or instructed to report to the assembly, or make recommendations to the assembly, or both, shall be known as a commission or special committee (see Book of Order, G-3.0109). The purposes of a special committee must be ones that cannot be undertaken by the work of an existing corporation or entity under its assigned responsibilities. Due to the financial and staffing implications, before authorizing the establishment of a special committee, the assembly shall hear a report from the Assembly Committee on Bills and Overtures, which shall have consulted with the most closely related entity and a member designated from the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly, as to whether the work to be assigned to the special committee could more effectively and economically be assigned to that entity.

   b. The Assembly Committee on Bills and Overtures shall be notified by any assembly committee whenever there is discussion about the creation of a special committee. In discussing the possible creation of a special committee, the Assembly Committee on Bills and Overtures shall hear from related corporation or entity representatives as well as representatives from the assembly committee considering the proposal. Financial implications of special committees should accompany any recommendation for action by the assembly. The written comment of the Assembly Committee on Bills and Overtures must be incorporated as background in the report of the assembly committee containing a recommendation to create a special committee.

   c. Any commission or special committee authorized by the General Assembly, unless otherwise designated, shall be appointed by the Moderator in collaboration with the General Assembly Nominating Committee and the General Assembly Committee on Representation. The Moderator is also authorized to fill by appointment any vacancies that may occur in any of such commissions or committees. No teaching elder, ruling elder, or other person shall be appointed to serve on more than one such commission or committee except by consent of the General Assembly.

   d. Special committees shall complete their work within two years unless the General Assembly that authorized its establishment specifies a different period. Special committees shall submit a written report to the General Assembly that shall include a recommendation to extend its existence (if beyond the period authorized), or, at the conclusion of its work, a recommendation for dismissal. Special committees shall also publish interim reports, no less than annually, by electronic or print means. Such interim reports shall indicate the progress made by the special committee on its assigned tasks and offer a timeline and process for completing its work. When a special committee requests an extension of its existence, the request shall be referred to the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly. After consultation with the most closely related assembly entity, the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly will recommend to the assembly whether the project shall be reassigned to the entity, remain with the special committee, or be terminated. Any extension to its existence shall require a two-thirds vote of the commissioners.

Review

e. The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly shall review the work of each special committee and include in its report to each session of the General Assembly a summary of the work being carried out by each special committee, including any recommendation to transfer the work assigned to a special committee elsewhere, or to dismiss the committee. A special committee shall not consider matters currently referred to another special committee or entity.

Representation at General Assembly and Funding

f. The expenses of one member of a special committee or commission to attend the General Assembly session to make any oral presentation of the report of the committee or commission that may be docketed, and to respond to questions concerning that report shall be paid by the General Assembly through the regular budget of the committee or commission. This member shall be designated as the corresponding member. The exceptions to this rule are as follows:

1. At the General Assembly meeting in which the final report of the committee or commission is presented, the moderator, who shall serve as the corresponding member of the committee or commission, and one other designated member of the committee or commission shall attend to present the report and serve as resource to the committee considering the report. Unless otherwise approved in advance by the Moderator of the preceding General Assembly in consultation with the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly (due to special circumstances), only the expenses of these two authorized representatives shall be reimbursed by the General Assembly through the regular budget of the committee or commission.

2. In the event of a minority report, a designated member of the committee’s or commission’s minority shall also be invited to attend. The expenses of this member shall be reimbursed by the General Assembly through the regular budget of the committee or commission.

3. Other members of special committees or commissions, not otherwise referred to in this standing rule, shall be reimbursed for attendance at a General Assembly session only if they are individually involved in hearings or other official purposes.

Coordination

g. Any such commission or committee shall consult with and advise the General Assembly Mission Council on the progress of its work in order to assist the council in its responsibility for coordinating the work of the entities of the General Assembly and the work of presbyteries and synods.

Staff Services

h. The Stated Clerk shall provide staff services and other assistance to such commissions and committees in order to facilitate and coordinate their work. The work of commissions and special committees shall be funded through the per capita budget of the Office of the General Assembly.

2. Special Administrative Review of Synods

a. The General Assembly has authority to undertake special administrative review of synods (Book of Order, G-3.0502c). There are three ways the General Assembly could be requested to consider such review:
K.2.a.(1)−K.2.b.

(1) by an overture from a presbytery or synod (G-3.0302d; G-3.0402; Standing Rule A.3.;
(2) by request from one of the General Assembly entities (Standing Rule A.2.); or
(3) By a commissioners’ resolution (Standing Rule A.8.). If such overture, request, or resolution is acted on favorably by the General Assembly, the General Assembly could undertake Special Administrative Review (G-3.0108b) through commission or special committee as provided for in Standing Rule K.5. and G-3.0109.

Written Request for Review

b. Special administrative review of an alleged synod irregularity or delinquency may occur when a written request for such review is received by the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly from another synod or a presbytery within the synod of the alleged irregularity or delinquency. If the request relates to an alleged delinquency, the request can only be filed with the Stated Clerk after the failure or refusal of the synod to cure the alleged delinquency at its next meeting, having been requested to do so in writing prior to the meeting. When the request for special administrative review is received, the Stated Clerk shall convene a meeting of the Moderator of the General Assembly, the moderator of the General Assembly Mission Council, and the moderator of the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly. If the request is in order and all the moderators agree that for the good of the church the special administrative review needs to be undertaken before the next meeting of the General Assembly (when the request could be considered by the whole General Assembly), the Moderator of the General Assembly shall appoint a special committee (Standing Rule K.5.) to conduct a special administrative review in accordance with G-3.0108b and report its findings and recommendations to the next General Assembly.
Amendment or Suspension of the Standing Rules

1. Recommending Amendments to the Standing Rules

   In consultation with the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly, the Stated Clerk shall recommend to the next session of the General Assembly any changes in the Standing Rules of the General Assembly deemed necessary. The Stated Clerk shall consult with the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly before proposing to the General Assembly any amendment to the standing rules.

2. Amending the Standing Rules

   The Standing Rules of the General Assembly may be amended by a majority vote of the commissioners present and voting. A motion to amend the rules is debatable.

3. Suspending the Standing Rules

   A motion to suspend the standing rules is not debatable and shall require a two-thirds vote of the total enrollment of the commissioners.
